Daily News: "'Roxy,' rather partial to fight films, offers one this week with a decided punch. Well conceived and nicely handled by Director Howard. Several shots show signs of really masterful megaphoning which Howard gave 'White Gold' some months ago. A good story and smooth continuity. Delaney and Armstrong equally good as boxers."

Evening Journal: "A good picture, skilfully directed by Howard. Fight scenes thrilling, and most of film contains variety of interesting shots."

"The Red Raiders"—First National, Hippodrome, New York City

Telegram: "We had a swell time watching 'The Red Raiders,' and so, unless our ears deceive us, did Hippodrome audience. Good, old-fashioned, Indian-paleface drama."

Graphic: "A Western thriller, exciting enough. Where westerns are preferred it will probably go over with bang."

"Alias the Lone Wolf"—Columbia, Granada Theatre, San Francisco

News: "Holds viewer in well ordered suspense . . . excellent cast."

Call and Post: "That popular character of fiction, the "lone wolf,' appears this week at Granada and, romance, action, adventure and mystery follow his trail. Presents crook-hero in new series of stirring exploits that insure full houses for theatre. Lytell wins his audiences completely."

Bulletin: "Capable cast . . . excellent construction . . . splendidly done crook story . . . holds interest to very end. Splendidly handled by E. H. Griffith, the director."

Chronicle: "Absorbing and enthralling, detective-crook tale. Story exciting, has lot of comedy incidents and love theme that sheds luster of romance."

"The Blood Ship" — Columbia, St. Francis Theatre, San Francisco

News: "Not since 'The Sea Wolf,' epic film of seas, has screen reflected film play which could rate as its compeer until advent of 'The Blood Ship.' Screen seldom offers pictures equal to these. Melodrama of most absorbing and blood-stirring sort. Action of story intensely holding at all times. One finds himself in absolute tremor of excitement as dynamic sequences are unfolded. Faultless cast . . . magnificent piece of direction."

Call and Post: "Well directed, ably enacted, admirably cast."

Examiner: "Seitz set out to do good, old-fashioned thriller and succeeded . . . a thrill every minute."

Bulletin: "Worth seeing. Human acting masterfully done. Bosworth gives powerful characterization. All action put together in powerful fashion and drama is gripping."

Chronicle: "Picture of great power . . . fascinating. Bosworth splendidly holds first place in group of good actors that make up cast."

"The Blood Ship"—Columbia, Metropolitan Theatre, Los Angeles

Examiner: "Spins one's emotions like a top . . . when 'Black' Swope was finally vanquished, applause rocked theatre. Tale so well knit, so adroitly directed you unconsciously become victim of its fascination. I defy anyone to leave before the final reel. . . . Bosworth . . . gripping . . . colorful. One of remarkable features of picture are characterizations. Each one a gem of acting in its own way. Bradbury priceless. So is Crossley. Has the effect of an exciting novel. So full of suspense, it leaves you slightly groggy."

Daily News: "Real story. Gorgeous photography, fast action, exceptionally well chosen cast and thrilling adventure make 'The Blood Ship' an outstanding production of season."

Times: "'Packed with dramatic action. A virile, sweeping story, catching real spirit of sea . . . never lags. Thrilling romance. Enough red-blooded romance stowed away on 'The Blood Ship' for half a dozen motion picture stories. Bradbury's characterization ranks among topnotch of season. Bosworth excellent."

Record: "'Will be talked about and long remembered as one of most gripping sea dramas ever filmed. With masterful sequences and continuity film moves swiftly, relentlessly to an end. Characterizations throughout remarkable, and faces and actions of these men . . . leave vivid impression on one's mind."

600 QUIT A MOVIE AS A FIRE STARTS

File Out Quickly as Flames Sweep Greenwich Theatre Projecting Booth.

USHERS DIRECT AUDIENCE

Policeman Gives Aid—Operator Has Blaze Under Control When Firemen Arrive.

About 600 men, women and children quietly filed out of the Greenwich Theatre, 115 Eighth Avenue, corner of Fifteenth Street, last night when a film became ignited and destroyed the projection machine. There was no disorder and the theatre was cleared in about four minutes, according to the manager, Phil Mallory.

It was about 9 o'clock, during the showing of "Perfect Gentlemen," when the film ignited. The operator, Edward Leiderman, telephoned to the office and told the manager he had a fire in the booth.

While in the dazzling light reflected from the blank screen for a few minutes, the manager announced from the stage that there was a small fire in the motion picture

The adjoined story from The New York Times of November 10th, tells of the happy ending of what easily might have been a tragedy.

Even so, those 600 men, women and children who "walked out quietly," according to the newspaper, will be scared of possible fires in theatres the rest of their lives.

How futile, how useless, how silly!

A film fire need never take place; an exhibitor need never expose to such danger his audience, his projectionist, his investment. It is wholly, absolutely, 100% preventable by use of SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL.

JESSE L. LASKY
PARAMOUNT BUILDING
NEW YORK CITY

Heartiest congratulations on Paramount's great new studio here which I visited for first time and your marvelous new producing organization. Size, resources, spirit and showmanship profoundly impressive. No wonder you have given industry outstanding successes of this season like "Beau Geste", "Underworld", "Chang", "Way Of All Flesh", "Hula" and others. No wonder present Paramount product rolling up record grosses and building tremendous good will with exhibitors. Coming pictures I have seen in completed form or in making here look even better*. Truly this is new era in motion pictures and Paramount its acknowledged leader thanks to you and your wonderful producing organization.

PARAMOUNT'S GREAT HOLLYWOOD STUDIO TEEMING WITH ACTIVITY

*HAROLD LLOYD in SPEEDY

Perfecting touches now being added to what looks like a great Lloyd comedy special. Brand new idea and novel characterization. Produced by Harold Lloyd Corp. A Paramount release.

*OLD IRONSIDES

Ask your exchange about special releasing plan on this great $2 road show. James Cruze's melodramatic masterpiece with Wallace Beery, Geo. Bancroft, Charles Farrell, Esther Ralston. By Laurence Stallings, author "What Price Glory" and "Big Parade".

*THE LAST COMMAND

Colossal melodrama starring Emil Jannings, with Evelyn Brent, William Powell, Nicholas Soussesain (valet in "Gentleman of Paris"). Von Sternberg production. By Lajos Biro. Mighty story of Russian terror and the royal outlaws of Paris.

*LEGION OF THE CONDEMNED

With appeal of "Beau Geste" and "Wings" combined! Mystery melodrama of a squadron of daring flyers who court death to land spies behind enemy lines. Wm. Wellman production, John Monk Saunders, author. (Director and author of "Wings".) Gary Cooper, Fay Wray, Lane Chandler.

*Gentlemen Prefer Blondes

World's merriest and most famous book. Superbly directed by Malcolm St. Clair, with Ruth Taylor, Alice White, Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin, Mack Swain, Holmes Herbert, Trixie Friganza, etc. By Anita Loos. Play by Miss Loos and John Emerson. Hector Turnbull Production.

*Beau Sabreur

Answer to "Beau Geste", by same author. Seething melodrama of French Foreign Legion in the desert, plus comedy and love. John Waters production with Gary Cooper, Evelyn Brent, Noah Beery, William Powell. Bigger clean-up than "Beau Geste"!

*Tillie's Punctured Romance

1928 version of famous comedy classic. Produced by Al Christie, who made "Charley's Aunt". Directed by Edw. Sutherland ("Behind the Front", "Navy".) Starring Chester Conklin, W. C. Fields and Louise Fazenda. Box office natural.

*Behind the German Lines

At last—secrets of behind the German lines revealed! Actual drama filmed on the spot of mighty battles land and sea. German side of the war seen for the first time! Produced officially as events took place by the makers of "Variety", "Metropolis". Ufa Production.

*STREET OF SIN

All the tense drama of "Way of All Flesh"—and more. Emil Jannings proves again to be greatest dramatic actor in the world! Mauritz Stiller production, with adorable Fay Wray. Story by von Sternberg, producer of "Underworld", and Benj. Glazer.

*KIT CARSON

Star of "Jesse James", Fred Thomson, in thrilling melodrama based on exploits of America's famous pioneer. Produced in first run special style, with cast of favorites. Hair-trigger action, Indian fighting of "Vanishing American" type, romance.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

The Folly of Fools!

(No. 561.—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation.)

ARE SOME EXHIBITORS FOOLS?

MY ENTIRE CAREER HAS BEEN BUILT ON THE BELIEF THAT EXHIBITORS are intelligent business men, desiring sound merchandise, delivered to them on a legitimate merchandising basis

I'VE NEVER HAD MY CONFIDENCE SHAKEN. UNTIL NOW.

EVERY NOW AND THEN ONE OF MY ASSOCIATES COMES TO ME with a clipping showing that some exhibitor has foisted on his patrons a print of the old junk "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

ALL OF WHICH WOULD INDICATE THAT AT LEAST SOME—"SOME" I said—SOME EXHIBITORS ARE FOOLS!

HOW UNDER THE SUN ANY MAN WITH A SINGLE DIME INVESTED in the brick and mortar of a theater or even a store room could tamper with that investment by showing one of these prints is beyond me!

THIRTEEN AND FOURTEEN YEARS OLD THEY ARE! THINK OF IT! And think of the agony of having to sit through one of these pictures yourself, let alone having the infernal gall—or idiocy—to collect money from the public for the crime!

WHY IT IS ONLY TWO MONTHS AGO THAT ONE EXHIBITOR WRITing in the Reports Department of Exhibitors Herald about one of these old prints said:

"DON'T SHOW THIS PIECE OF JUNK IF YOU WANT TO KEEP YOUR HOUSE OPEN!"

TOO BAD HE LEARNED IT AFTER THE DAMAGE.

TOO BAD SOME OTHER EXHIBITORS ARE ONLY LEARNING IT AFTER they slink down the alley to dodge their wrathy patrons.

BUT MAYBE IT ISN'T TOO BAD.

"NOBODY IS TWICE A FOOL," SAYS THE OLD PROVERB. AT LEAST these fellows have learned their lesson And others, too, may profit by the warning.

MEANWHILE UNIVERSAL'S NINETEEN-TWENTY-SEVEN PRODUCTION. of "Uncle Tom's Cabin"—staged at a cost of close to two million—hailed by the critics—sensationally successful on Broadway—such a masterpiece will not be hurt by junk prints of old pictures, but the exhibitors who run such junk surely must suffer!

MY INVESTMENT IS IN THE AMERICAN PUBLIC. PRETTY SOLID security.

CARL LAEMMLE presents

The Cohens and Kellys in Paris

Let's talk plain horse sense, Mr. Exhibitor! Look back over your records. See what THE COHENS AND KELLYS did for you last year—see who sold it to you—get ahold of that U salesman—tell him you want THE COHENS AND KELLYS IN PARIS and don't let him get away from you until you get it.—It's twice as BIG—twice as FUNNY—twice as many LAUGHS! Don't blame us if your opposition gets it. We're telling you about it NOW!

It's a Universal Long Run Special!

Pete Harrison gives you the Straight Dope!

"Glenn Tryon is no doubt a find; this (A Hero for a Night) his second feature, proves it. As in the first picture, he takes the part of a young 'freshie' and a 'smart alec'; but he takes it in such a way that one cannot help liking him, for his acting is buoyant and breezy. There is light comedy all the way through, in liberal quantities. And there are thrills . It is really a travesty on the Lindbergh New York to Paris flight.  It is hard to describe the comedy action adequately. It is so funny all the way through. * None but the bravest will be able to stay away from a theatre that will show it."

- HARRISON'S REPORTS

Thanks Pete!

"Fox is making the best pictures now," says the Trade, and the Trade is right.

In the period from November to April, Fox will release a series of attractions notable by reason of their directors and their casts and unique in that every title has been chosen with an eye to profitable business and patronage.

(And that means—No Lemons!)

Virginia Valli and Nancy Carroll in "Ladies Must Dress" a comedy of clothes.

"Very Confidential" has Madge Bellamy, Joseph Cawthorn, and a great cast.

In "Woman Wise" are June Collyer, "Big Bill" Russell and Walter Pidgeon.

"Wolf Fangs" has Thunder, a dog hero, Caryl Lincoln and Charles Morton.

Edmund Lowe is again a hard-boiled hero in "Dressed to Kill."

Olive Borden in "Come to my House." Antonio Moreno is the sheik.

CHOTINER'S PARISIAN
TIFFANY
TIFFANY
Story by ALBERT SHELBY LE VINO
Directed by
GEO. ARCHAINBAUD
Supervised by
SID ALGIERS

"Night Life" is a ten strike for Tiffany and certainly gives the big boys something to shoot at. After looking at a picture of this calibre made by a so-called independent and to shower it with praise would smack somewhat of politics, but this reviewer only regrets his inability to set forth all of the many outstanding features, but would like to recommend at this time: if you are interested in making pictures take a look at this one, for it surely is a box office pay-off.

Director Archainbaud tells his story pictorially without dragging a lot of foreign subjects in by the nape of the neck and to tip off the story would no doubt effect your slant on the picture, but Albert Shelby LeVino had something on the ball when he wrote this one.

Johnny Harron as "The Boy" and Alice Day as "The Girl" just barely kept Eddie Gribbon from running away with the picture. Even after these two kept up the terrific pace set by Gribbon it remained for Director Archainbaud to hand it to "Eddie" on a silver platter, and in doing so he sends his audience out with a sweet taste in their mouths and wow what a kick that is in the end.

"Night Life" is surely going to mean something to the future of Alice Day and Johnny Harron when it hits the market. Walter Hiers appears early but gets very little chance to show his stuff, while the supporting cast includes Lydia Yeamans Titus, Patricia Avery, Earl Metcalf, Snitz Edwards, Lionel Braham, Kitty Barlow and Archduke Leopold.

"Night Life" is Tiffany's second production under the new regime and from the reception accorded its first efforts it is bound to make itself a contender in the industry.

125 NEW ACCOUNTS IN 3 WEEKS

The excitement is over. The "new news reel situation" is no longer new, and exhibitors are judging news reels again on the basis of quality as shown in actual performance. And the leadership of Kinograms is acknowledged by all. Trade critics acknowledge it . . . . . Kinograms won first place over all other news reels eleven times out of seventeen issues reviewed in the weekly comparative appraisal by Arthur James in Motion Pictures Today. And now exhibitors acknowledge it, too . . . . . in three weeks 125 additional theatres have joined the big lists of Kinograms subscribers.

Pure Air Coupled with good entertainment insures greater Profits

You cannot afford to ignore the fact that theatre air conditioning is a real box office factor. The pleasure seeking public demand it. Other things being equal, the "air conditioned" theatre is the one to receive the heavy patronage. York conditioned houses are many—the list is growing rapidly, because alert theatre owners realize the importance and the dividend paying possibilities of selecting the proper equipment. Let us look over your project and submit our suggestions—no obligation on your part.

THE PRODIGAL SON RETURNS

[of vital importance to every exhibitor playing news reels]

New York, Oct. 21, 1927

MR. WILLIAM RAYNOR, Manager
Pathe Exchange, Inc.
1600 Broadway
New York

Dear Mr. Raynor:

Your Milton Kronacker has no doubt informed you that I had fallen for the high-powered gab of a salesman with a new News Reel, and had quite made up my mind to worry along this year without the PATHE NEWS. Call me disloyal, a deserter, if you will, but those boys had a fine bag of tricks and I fell for it. You know the Prodigal Son returned and while I do not expect you to serve any well-fed veal, I want to come back to the News Reel I started with thirteen years ago, and I will autograph the dotted line as soon as Milt calls on me.

Salesmen are all fitted with whirlwind motors this year, but it was not a sales talk that caused me to see the light. No, nothing like that. It was a mere patron who put me wise to myself. Handed me a tip that is worthy of consideration. He said: "I certainly miss PATHE NEWS and would like to see it back on your screen." While the said mere patron was wholly innocent of the effect his chance remark made on me, it was, nevertheless, convincing.

My customers will have PATHE NEWS again. I think it behooves me to run the News the fan knows.

Very truly yours,
Wm. F. Burke, Manager,

The Building Boom

Revolutionary Changes in the Exhibition Field

By William A. Johnston

THE unparalleled activity in the theatre field is brought out clearly and vividly in an article in this issue, written first-hand by a member of our staff who has recently returned from a survey of the Middle West.

* * * *

New and more elaborate theatres are replacing the old-fashioned houses on an unprecedented scale. In many instances, the building is being forced by outside promoters. In others, exhibitors, seeing the trend of events, are engaged in the replacement campaign. And, in still others, the scramble by circuits for theatres has intensified the situation.

The whole thing amounts to a boom, in one sense, and a revolution in another and still more significant way.

* * * *

But the lesson that can be drawn, without any fear of contradiction whatever, is this: when the new and elaborate house gets into operation in the middle-sized city or fair-sized town it relegates the older houses to the shooting-gallery class.

In every instance, our representative found this to be true. Exhibition is being "stepped up". The village population, through the great increase in good roads, is driving through to the nearby larger town, and going to the new houses.

Based on these facts—and they are facts—the industry as a whole may now figure that it has gone into the second great phase of exhibition transition.

The first was the building of super-theatres in big cities. This is not yet over, but it is well along. The second, which is also in full swing, is and will continue to be the construction of the better theatre of the most modern sort in the medium-sized cities and the towns.

But—and this is the point to be remembered—just as in the old days of production the slogan used to be "fewer pictures, better pictures", the theatre keynote will be, so it seems, "fewer theatres, better theatres".

* * * *

We do not mean to imply that every new theatre that is put up will be a success. "Geography" and management must be right, too. But the older houses are doomed; and one new theatre, other things being equal, is replacing in many localities several of them at a time.

It's a natural development, not without its evils, of course, but still an inevitable sign of exhibition progress.

Emphasis in theatre building is swinging rapidly—unless we are much mistaken—from the big city super-house to the theatres in lesser—but vitally important—communities, which are, after all, the backbone of America.

Back to the Movies!

HERB L. WEIL, General Manager of the W. S. Butterfield Theatres at Port Huron, Michigan, has written the following letter to William A. Johnston:

"Have just concluded reading your editorial on the subject of 'Overfeeding the Public' in the November 25th issue of Motion Picture News and I cannot let it go by without an expression of my personal views on this subject.

"To the writer it would seem that you have just about hit the nail squarely on the head and your timely comment on present day presentations in our modern picture theatre palaces should be given serious and thoughtful consideration by those who are persistently violating the cardinal precepts of what this industry was intended to be.

"There is so much to be said against this pernicious subordination of the picture itself and so little to be said in favor of presentations as they now exist, that a comparison of the 'then and now' days is really odious.

" 'The piece-de-resistance' of any theatre program the world over is the feature picture itself, but in most cases by the time this portion of the menu has arrived, the public appetite has become so thoroughly whetted by some Master of Ceremonies with his impossible gyrations, aided and abetted by his crew of jazz hounds, coryphees and what nots, that one almost finds one's self reveling in the arms of Morpheus or cursing the fact that he even came to the theatre. And these are facts!

"To me it would seem that your launching of the 'Back-to-the-Picture' movement is most opportune.

"Of course, the fallacy of dispensing entirely with a presentation of some kind is plainly obvious. This presentation, however, should be shorn of its wealthy scenic investiture, its frills and furbelows and its lavish trappings. It should be a simple, lovely little skit entirely apropos of what may be anticipated in the picture itself.

"It's about time for the boys to take notice. This can't go on—that's all."

Sunday Movies Win in St. Petersburg

A clean majority of 1,667 votes for the Sunday moving picture show was scored against the Blue Law adherents last Tuesday in St. Petersburg, Florida, when the inhabitants of the town voted again on the Sunday question. The election brought out the heaviest vote in an election in St. Petersburg, 7,335 voting in favor of the Sabbath entertainment and 5,668 against it.

The Sunday movies question was revived in St. Petersburg in the spring of 1926, although the question had been smouldering since 1914 when a small theatre attempted to operate on a Sunday and got into trouble. Following a Supreme Court decision that the Sabbath expired at sundown, several theatres last year opened. Some of the managers were arrested but none was convicted.

The resulting fight between the pleasure-seeking and Puritanical elements in the town was a victory for the Blues inasmuch as the City Commission passed an ordinance prohibiting Sunday entertainments. Furthermore, the ordinance was voted upon the spring of 1926, and received a majority of three to one. But the new election is a complete turning of the tables upon the Blues, who, it is stated, will attempt to prevent the Sunday shows in spite of the vote against them. The Progressive Club of St. Petersburg is responsible for the victory.

Al Lichtman President Motion Picture Club

Al Lichtman, distribution manager of United Artists, was elected president of the Motion Picture Club at a meeting at the Hotel Astor in New York City this week at which permanent officers were named.

Elmer Pearson was elected first vice-president and S. L. Rothafel second vice-president. Arthur W. Stebbins became treasurer and Bruce Gallup secretary. Members of the board of directors chosen included Jerome Beatty, George Blair, Ned Depinet, Felix Feist, Paul Gulick and Arthur Loew. They were elected for a term of one year. Elected for two years were David Chatkin, Earle Hammons, William A. Johnston, Lee Ochs, Harry Reichenbach and Victor M. Shapiro. Elected for the three years' term were Will H. Hays, Emil Jensen, Jack Alicoate, William Brandt, Nathan Burkan and Lou Blumenthal.

Mr. Burkan was the principal speaker at the meeting, which close to 70 members attended. Plans were discussed for the club house.

Many New York Charters Granted to New Firms

Motion picture companies incorporating in Albany, New York state, during the past week included the following: Whitbar Co., Inc., $15,000, Wilhelmina J. Bossong, Katherine Noser, Marie Speidel, New York City; Boro Park Theatre Corporation, capitalization not stated, Charles B. Paine, Helen E. Hughes, Samuel Sedran, New York City; Fischer Playhouse, Inc., Cambridge, $20,000, Lew Fischer, Fort Edward; Al Barton, Ticonderoga, Charles M. Putnam, Port Henry; Kimasi Amusement Corporation, $10,000, Jonas King, Isaac Silverman, Benjamin Marks, New York City.

Savoy Theatre Corporation, capitalization not stated, Dewey Michaels, Phillis B. Michaels, Frank D. White, Buffalo; Johnsonburg Theatre Corporation, $30,000, Marshall W. Peterson, Jamestown; Charles Lundquist, Jamestown; John Friburg, Johnsonburg, Pa.; The Diversion Corporation, capitalization not stated, Dwight D. Wiman, M. I. Trimble, John F. Wharton, New York City; Hilson Enterprises, Inc., $25,000, Melville H. Cane, Pincus Berner, Jacob N. Robins, New York City.

New Corporation Will Handle Vocafilms

A deal concluded this week by A. J. Nelson, vice-president and general manager of the new company, the Vocafilm Distributing Corporation, and David R. Hochreich, president, W. Harry Williams, chairman of the board of directors, and Attorney Jacob M. Mandelbaum, general counsel, all of the Vocafilm Corporation of America, assures the exclusive rights to the sale and distribution of all synchronized picture and sound presentations of Vocafilm, the arrangement to extend over a period of 14 years, the rights covering the entertainment, educational and commercial fields.

The Vocafilm Corporation, now that the distribution question is off its hands, will, it is said, be able to devote all its time to the making of Vocafilm picture-sound productions.

S. M. P. E. Will Meet in Hollywood in April

This will be the first meeting of the Society on the coast.

Fred J. Beecroft Dies Suddenly

Motion Picture News Executive Passes Away of Heart Failure; An Outstanding Figure in Trade Paper Field

FRED J. BEECROFT, Advertising Manager of MOTION PICTURE NEWS since 1917, passed away suddenly of a heart attack at the New Rochelle Hospital at ten o'clock Thursday night, December 1. He was 54 years old.

The news of his passing came as a great shock to the industry and his associates on The News. He had left the office at 5.30 o'clock apparently in his usual health, to drive up to Mamaroneck, where he planned to visit his brother, James Beecroft, of Exhibitors Herald. He stopped in New Rochelle at a gasoline station, had his car filled and then started to continue his journey, when he suddenly collapsed over the wheel.

He was immediately taken to the New Rochelle hospital, but lived only a few minutes after arriving there.

Thus passed away a pioneer among trade paper men, one of the important builders of the NEWS, and an outstanding figure in the industry.

Death came to Fred in the environment of his youth, Westchester County, where scores of friends and a number of his relatives live. It was therefore decided to hold the last sad rites there instead of his home at Little Neck, L. I.

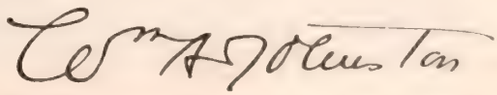
Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marie A. Beecroft; his son, Harold, of Syracuse, N. Y.; a sister, Miss Mary Beecroft, of Flushing, L. I.; and three brothers

—Judge Edgar Beecroft, of Pelham; James Beecroft and Chester Beecroft, of New York City.

Funeral services were held on Sunday morning in the Davis Chapel, at New Rochelle, and were conducted by Rev. Paul Gordon Savour, of Trinity Episcopal Church. Floral tributes in great profusion marked the esteem in which Fred was held by his host of friends inside and outside the industry. Many came in person to pay their last respects. Interment was made in the family plot in Kensico Cemetery.

Fred was born in Chicago and educated at Northwestern University. When he was still in his teens, the family came to Westchester County. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, Fred enlisted in an Illinois regiment and served throughout the Cuban Campaign, participating in all the major engagements.

Subsequently, he was in the cotton business in Texas for several years and then returned to New York, where he was engaged in other business lines, including the managership of a brokerage office in Wall St.



When the industry was just beginning its remarkable growth, about 15 years ago, Fred took charge of the motion picture department of the Dramatic Mirror, at that time the leading theatrical paper in the country. His career there was marked by great success, and was followed by a short association with Exhibitors Trade Review, after which he came to

His qualities of frankness, kindliness, straightforwardness, were most exceptional; a true hearted man if there ever was one. The trade, whose members knew and liked him so well, will join us, I know, in the grief we feel at his departure from our lives.

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

ACTION speaks louder than words, and a theatre man's paid newspaper ad will tell more about what he thinks is the box office "best bet" of his program than the theories and opinions he gives you in the course of an interview. But you won't get anywhere in particular trying to find out just what is what in the moot question concerning pictures and vaudeville from an analysis of the newspaper ads.

What you will find out from such a survey is that the vaudeville man thinks the picture is the big attraction, while the motion picture man believes the stage specialties —or vaudeville—attract the ticket buyers.

The three ads clipped from newspapers and reproduced below are typical of much of the present-day advertising to be found on the amusement pages. You will note that the Riviera theatre in Omaha, a Publix house, gives the feature picture "Dress Parade" about as much play as you would expect some single reel novelty to get in a picture theatre ad. Alongside the Riviera ad, you will see how the Albee Theatre in Providence, R. I., one of the K-A chain of vaudeville houses, treated the same picture, although the vaudeville "names" mean more to vaudeville patrons than most "presentation" artists mean to motion picture patrons. The other reproduction is of an ad used by the Palace theatre in Dallas, a Publix theatre, and the space given to the picture—a strong attraction as pictures go—is so small that you have a bit of a job to discover that the feature "on the screen" is Adolphe Menjou in "A Gentleman of Paris."

THESE are not isolated cases. The same crop of newspapers will yield many instances where the picture theatre ads and those of the vaudeville houses show exactly the same tendency. For example, Loew's State in Cleveland is represented by a two-column by eight inches display. Five and a half inches at the top of this display are devoted to big type and an illustration featuring "The Desired Woman," a motion picture. The remaining three inches at the bottom serves as sufficient space for the billing of six vaudeville acts and some Vitaphone presentations.

IT appears very much as though the vaudeville man, looking over at the motion picture man's pasture, discovers that there the grass is greener, and fresher and more succulent. Similarly the picture man seems to regard the "feeding" much better on the vaudeville man's side of the fence.

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, who issued a vigorous statement last week, hitting the presentation evil, follows it up with another interesting and vital pronouncement on the subject of pictures.

Writing to Herbert Brenon about the box-office reception of "Sorrell and Son," Mr. Schenck declares that photoplays, like Presidents, choose to run; but only the people's choice wins, the yardstick being the vote cast by 50,000,000 Americans who can't be wrong.

"The public continues to make its own decisions on merits of films," said Mr. Schenck, "and while advertising and publicity may attract audiences to first showings, the subsequent business of a film, especially in its second week, is due solely to word-of-mouth praise, expressed in subways, salons, clubs, factories, fire houses and farm 'bees.' This gossip, which neither press nor producer can control or greatly influence, is the finest type of advertising, next to regular appearances of a star on the screen in successive good pictures.

"Before the days of great newspapers, radio, billboards and advertising specialists, interest in new events was stimulated in the various ages by talk in the forum and the market places, at the fireside, the country store, polling booths and town meetings. Despite all our modern agencies of publicity,

"Playing down" the photoplay at Picture theatres! Above is an ad for the Riviera theatre, Omaha, a "motion picture theatre." On the right is a vaudeville theatre ad for a program offering the same picture as the Riviera.

it has been our experience at United Artists that this instinct of gossip remains the most effective device for the creation of good-will and moulding of sentiment.

"The verdict of the public, the people's choice, is incontrovertible in elections of public officials as well as in selections of photoplays. Producers, stars and directors know this. In fact, the only acid test, the only guage approaching scientific measurement, is whether the public wants something and then pays to see it. The majority rules in films, as in elections.

"The force and influence of the motion picture will remain only as pictures continue to be the one great art for the masses."

To this forceful statement we would add this footnote: And the motion picture will have a chance to be the one great art for the masses in proportion as the pictures get their proper emphasis in the theatres. Making pictures for the masses will not mean much if, when the pictures reach the places where the masses are supposed to see them, exhibition stress is put on revues, jugglers, acrobatic orchestra leaders, and various forms of jazzmania.

JOE BRANDT, in an interview printed elswhere in this issue, speaks right out about the European situation, following his return from a three months' tour. Summed up, he says that the American producers have only themselves to blame for much of the hostile film legislation now in prospect, or already a fact, in different European countries.

Mr. Brandt is a keen observer, and is not afraid to say what he thinks. We suggest a careful reading and weighing of his observations.

WE have referred previously to the fact that the impending quota in England has brought a revival of picture-making. It will, of course, increase in volume as time goes on.

It is also obvious that a good deal of the talent that will go into these pictures will come from Hollywood. This week, for example, Sidney Olcott is announced as having signed as director-general of the British Lion Film Corp., which is strongly financed by British capitalists and headed by Sir Edgar Wallace. Mr. Olcott will go to England shortly.

We know also of overtures that have recently been made to several American players, among them Betty Bronson and Alice Joyce, to appear in British pictures. These are the beginnings of what may one day turn out to be a big story in international filmdom.

IT has always seemed to us a serious mistake for the industry here to take the foreign market so much for granted. It is a fact that forty per cent of the total distribution gross of American pictures is from abroad.

Sooner or later, production expansion in Europe had to come. If anybody—exhibitor, producer, distributor alike—thinks that a serious reduction of this percentage is of little importance he is badly misinformed.

Its continuance depends, to a considerable extent and now more than ever, upon turning out the right kind of pictures in Hollywood. As Europe comes to make its own pictures more and more, there will be less room than before for the poor-quality American film.

And the sustaining of quality at Hollywood depends, without any doubt at all, upon adequate returns from American theatres in the first instance.

That is one imperative reason, among others, why the people in this country who are playing the picture down and playing vaudeville up, had better watch their step. Discouraging pictures by crippling them in the theatre hits at the vital spot of the industry—and the indusry's foreign trade. So the "presentation" evil, if it is not curbed, may produce even more of a crisis than it has.

LOUIS NALPAS, one of the leading film figures in France, the general manager of Cineromans, which produced "Michael Strogoff" and "Les Miserables," has been in New York several weeks, and is planning to return shortly to Paris.

M. Nalpas points out that his company has demonstrated forcefully that French pictures of quality can be produced for the American market. "Les Miserables" did very well in New York, and is also a box-office attraction in many key and lesser runs.

This is genuine reciprocity, and there is no reason at all why there should not be more of it. M. Nalpas has decided views on the subject. France, he points out, can produce its own program-grade pictures for its own theatres, just as we do for ours.

It is the exceptional picture that will be the subject of reciprocity, according to M. Nalpas. Cineromans, which, by the way, is headed by Jean Sapene, editor of Le Matin, has already shown this to be true, in the case of "Les Miserables."

MARTHA OSTENSO, author of "Wild Geese," saw the Tiffany-Stahl screen version of her novel recently—and praised the picture! This, of course, is very unusual procedure on the part of an author. Miss Ostenso wrote detailed comment on the picture, as seen from the author's viewpoint, and points out that it has followed the novel faithfully.

"I am prepared to admit that there have been authors whose blind fury may have been fully justified," said Miss Ostenso. "But I am bound to say that I experienced nothing of the kind. I had no desire to rise haughtily and stalk out into the light and air. As a matter of fact, I sat utterly speechless as the scenes followed one another before my eyes."

HAL ROACH wires us from the Coast that the short comedy is at last coming into its own. Harold Franklin, of West Coast Theatres, is staging a big advertising campaign on Roach's "Battle of the Century," giving it the same billing as the feature. The campaigns will be continued over the entire Wesco circuit. Also, a search is being conducted by sixty newspapers and Mr. Franklin, through the Wesco theatres, to find a new member for "Our Gang." The exploitation and publicity advantages of this plan are at once apparent.

We shall be very much interested to note the audience reaction to the picture when it opens at the Metropolitan, Los Angeles, shortly.

Such a campaign is of nation-wide interest, and its success will mean much to the whole short subject field.

Motion Picture News in 1917 as Advertising Manager.

As an executive of the News organization, over a period of ten years, Fred played a valuable and conspicuous part in the building of the paper. He won his place, and held it securely, as an outstanding figure in the trade paper field.

And in the hearts of his friends and associates, his vivid personality, his great qualities as a human being, his kindly and helpful and generous spirit will live always.

Exhibition Field Undergoing Big Change, Expert Says

Survey of Middle West Reveals Transition Period Caused by Unprecedented Building of New and More Elaborate Theatres

By J. S. DICKERSON

Associate Editor, Motion Picture News

[Editor's Note.—This is the first of a series of articles. The next will show how the "presentation" mania in the big cities has back-fired on the smaller towns.]

ANY one who attempts to cover Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa with a theatre survey in thirty days, picks a fair sized job. But the man who is willing to disregard union hours and a forty hour week can get over a lot of ground and interview a good many people in the time allotted.

This is what the writer has done, drawing such conclusions as the time and opportunity presented.

The summary of this survey can be written in a few words. The theatres of the Middle West are in a period of transition and the motion picture exhibition business is in a process of evolution.

All this, of course, needs explanation. Making statements of the above character without testimony of fact in connection therewith, will convince no one who is not informed on such facts as the writer obtained in his various wanderings.

These facts are herewith printed, together with such conclusions as have been drawn therefrom.

The transition period in the theatre field has been brought about by the unprecedented building of new and more elaborate theatres in towns and cities, heretofore considered adequately seated both in point of numbers and capacity of the houses themselves.

This building has been going on for a considerable period and has not been confined to large cities, although up to the present time, this division has represented the greatest activity and the greatest expenditures.

And the strange part of the boom, if it may be called that, is that the new theatres in almost every instance find ready tenants and prove profitable propositions, when the one theatre is considered by itself.

The actual building of these new houses, however, has been and will continue to be for a considerable time, quite another matter. In perhaps a majority of the cases where this survey was made, the new houses have been forced into being, according to local exhibition viewpoint.

Forced Building

This forced building has its origin in two particular ways. One, is in the numberless instances where parties, not hitherto actively identified with motion picture exhibition, have promoted other persons outside the industry into building theatres, to be operated by people who are in the business of theatre operation, either in the very towns where the new houses are to be built or in other locations.

In other words the promoter goes to local capital and guarantees a responsible tenant, usually a circuit operating in the city where it is proposed that the new theatre be built.

With an agreement to build on the part of the local parties, the promoter goes to the circuit or independent theatre owner, as the case may be, with a proposition to lease when the house is built, in the full knowledge that the present lessees of other theatres in the particular city, must accept any reasonable proposition to protect their position in the town.

The position of the new theatre is assured from the start. It will most assuredly relegate the older and less attractive theatres to the shooting gallery class. If local operators fail to sign a lease, other circuits can be counted upon to do so, in the sure knowledge that the new house will do the business of the town and that the competing theatres will ultimately have to close or continue losing money.

The whole proposition is a dog-eat-dog game into which all but the promoter and the capitalist are actually forced, without regard to accepted business principles or ethics.

The opportunity, however, to successfully put over these building deals is basically sound. The theatres already existing in the various cities and towns are from ten to twenty years old and when built failed in a great measure to meet even the requirements of the day and at the present time are so far out of date as to be actual liabilities, even when not in competition with the new houses that are being constructed.

A Mad Scramble

In most cases, the actual owners of the older theatres are not the people who find themselves face to face with an apparently unsolvable problem.

In the mad scramble of circuit acquisition, these houses have been leased from individual owners who built and operated them successfully, prior to the circuit period. The original exhibitors drove hard bargains probably because they were unwilling to give up their profitable enterprises that at the time promised to continue just as attractive indefinitely.

Neither buyer nor seller foresaw the time when these old houses would slip from the black to the red side of the ledger nor the reasons why they would.

Anyway, in the majority of cases it is the circuit, either local or national, that finds itself between the devil and the deep blue sea.

He must pay his rental on theatres he wishes he didn't have and open new shows in opposition to himself or allow competition to open against him, in which case he loses the profit from the new theatre with which to pay his losses at the older theatres.

The average city in the territory covered, of from ten to twenty-five thousand population, has four theatres, a new one and a shooting gallery making money and two "in-between" houses formerly the leading theatres of the town closed or losing money. The popular priced house, operated on a small nut, seems able to keep going and in some cases shows a modest profit.

The better new theatres, with perhaps a very few exceptions, are doing more business than all the older houses of the town ever did in the industry's palmiest days. Business is coming to these new houses that is entirely new to the city, not alone the theatre. In fact, the whole situation may be made comprehensive by saying that motion picture attendance has "stepped up." The very small towns, 600 and 800 population, are driving in and through to larger towns of the few thousand class, and in turn the people of this size city are driving on to the larger towns where the beautiful new theatres have been built and where more is being given for the money, until in the last stage of the "step up" the big house in the big town is playing to more business in a week than a half dozen of the best theatres of the city did but a few years past.

Mention has been made of two reasons for forced building of theatres. The second is where local exhibitors, either independent or local or national circuits, have recognized the dangerous position they are in and to forestall the apparently inevitable competition have constructed new houses, usually in cooperation with local capital.

The net result of this building has been only a little less disastrous to the various towns as a whole than when outside parties are allowed to do the building, the only difference being that the promoters profit, which has been considerable, is eliminated and that practical details of the new theatres receive more expert attention, those who are experienced in operating theatres being naturally more competent to construct new houses than outside parties.

The Building Boom

This particular phase of the building boom is developing rapidly and promises to change the whole theatre map within two or three years.

Keith-Orpheum Merger Will Link $100,000,000 in Assets

MAURICE GOODMAN, counsel for the Keith interests, is credited with the statement of a proposed merger between B. F. Keith & Company and Orpheum Circuit, Inc., which might be effected in the very near future. The assets of the combined organization would total above $100,000,000. Goodman said, however, that a statement about the completion of the merger at this time would be premature.

The Keith and Orpheum Circuits operate the two largest theatre chains in the United States. By agreement, Keith operates east of Chicago and the Orpheum west of Chicago and in the south. By joining forces the two organizations will create a chain of 532 theatres. The Orpheum controls 212 theatres in the United States and Canada.

Keith-Albee and the Orpheum interests jointly own the Producers Distributing Corporation, a film booking organization. It is thought in some quarters that the merging of the Keith-Orpheum interests is a step toward another merger that will bring together the Keith-Albee interests with the Stanley Company of America.

Commerce Board Urges Aid of Congress

Pleads for Support in Alleged Unfair Building of Theatres by Larger Producers, Distributors

THE Board of Trade and Commerce of the Motion Picture Industry of the United States of America through its president, Sydney S. Cohen, has taken definite steps in a determined campaign to curtail what is termed excessive building campaigns by the larger producing and distributing companies, and to protect the independent theatre owners.

A communication pointing out the alleged evil and protesting against it, has been forwarded over the signature of Sydney S. Cohen to every member of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and a second letter has been forwarded to the exhibitors of the United States urging their support.

The letter to the Senators and Representatives calls attention to the Cease and Desist order of the Federal Trade Commission against Paramount-Famous-Lasky, and the alleged defiance of that order by the company.

After calling attention to the fact that the independent theatre owners comprise 75 per cent of the theatres of the country, the communication continues:

"This 75 per cent of the theatre owners of the country have real and definite grievances, and have suffered actual abuses at the hands of certain of the larger film producing companies who own and operate theatres. For instance, discrimination is shown in favor of theatres affiliated with these producers or distributors to the prejudice of theatres operated independently."

And then, with regard to the Cease and Desist order issued against Paramount-Famous-Lasky, the letter says:

"It is our chief concern that there shall be steps taken in the immediate future that that organization — Paramount-Famous-Lasky—may no longer be permitted to proceed in defiant disregard of an edict handed down by the Federal Trade Commission of the United States. Cease and Desist is a command which is not subject to two interpretations. Paramount-Famous-Lasky have been ordered to Cease and Desist, which means stop instantly. They have not done so, and show no signs of intending to do so unless forced to; therefore, it is our insistence that they be compelled to carry out this mandate to stop instantly their building program in districts which are already adequately theatred, and where they have ample representation."

The letter to theatre owners enclosed a copy of resolutions of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware endorsing the activities of the Board of Trade and Commerce. The letter merely urges support in the matter of an open film market. Calling attention to the alleged unfair theatre building program of producers in districts already adequately theatred, it continues:

"At present those theatres which are controlled or 'affiliated' with producers enjoy the manifestly unfair advantage of preferential bookings, and all such favoritism in the distribution of films to exhibitors should be abolished."

"Big Change in Field" Says News Expert

The national and local circuits will without doubt figure largely in these new houses, but not without a great deal of misgivings and regrets that conditions make such a course imperative.

Of a considerable number of new theatres now under construction, which the writer noted on the above mentioned trip, not one was going up in a location where, when opened, it could be expected to do business without eliminating at least one older theatre and seriously crippling some others.

In most cases the houses that will suffer, are operated by the very people who are building the new one and in every instance the builders have no illusion as to what is to happen when the new theatre opens.

But most of these builders are going ahead with their eyes open and in a way resigned to their immediate fate. They will pay the rent on their present holdings until such time as the leases expire, convert such of the properties as are suitable to commercial purposes and take their losses on the old houses.

The profits on the new house will in a great measure make up the losses on the old theatres and in cities where the "geography" is right, possibly increase the net revenue, in spite of these losses.

Naturally, there is a good deal of complaining in these towns about the scrapping of what has been perfectly good property and a good many regrets that some now disadvantageous leases have been made, but the theatres now being built may be expected to have a much longer life than the old ones and in the course of a few years the situation will have adjusted itself to the satisfaction of every one.

Just how far down the line in the population group the theatre building boom is to go, is a matter of some conjecture. The three to five thousand towns that are still operating shooting galleries are feeling the greatest pinch and it is in this group that at the present time there is the least building activity.

The reasons for this are of course obvious. These towns have their limitations, and building costs outside of plot are practically as great as in larger towns. Here, too, is a greater proportion of independent exhibitors, who lack the finances to build the theatres that they would like to own.

Clementon, N. J., Scene of Sunday Show Strife

Clementon, N. J., is now the scene of one of the most active battles for Sunday showing of motion pictures that the State of New Jersey has known for some time. About a thousand persons were awaiting admission when the doors of the theatre were opened for the first show on Sunday despite the passing of a resolution by members of the Community Church condemning the step as a flagrant violation of the Sunday Blue Laws. Those opposed to the showing of Sunday motion pictures declared they would carry the fight to the State legislature in the event that local action was without results. Many borough officials, including Mayor Frank C. Somers, declared themselves heartily in favor of Sunday entertainment.

The Clementon Theatre, the principal picture house in the community, was built at a cost of $200,000 and most of its stock is owned by the townspeople.

Appointments in Tiffany-Stahl Sales Force

Four appointments have been made in the sales organization of Tiffany-Stahl productions. Allan Moritz, former manager of the Detroit office, has been transferred to the Pittsburgh branch. Charles Weiner has been shifted to manage the Cincinnati exchange. James Beal has succeeded J. A. Gage as manager of the Portland exchange and Mr. Gage has been placed in charge over the Seattle branch.

Wesco Involved in New Rumors

With Saxe Deal Consummated, Mergers With Stanley and Skouras Are Now Under Discussion

RUMORS of, and actual consummation, of theatre pools have developed thick and fast during the past week, with Wesco involved in about all of them. That company's pooling with Saxe Enterprises has been completed, with rumors now running rife of the pooling of Wesco and Skouras interests, and a Stanley deal for Wesco and control of First National.

The reports of a merger of Stanley and Wesco are emphatically denied by Harold B. Franklin, and at the same time John J. McGuirk, Stanley President, admits that such a transaction has been under discussion for some time. It is also said that a committee representing Stanley has been looking over West Coast properties for some time.

If the deal is consummated Stanley would gain, in addition to the Wesco houses, control of First National, which it now holds jointly with Wesco. The two firms are said to control over 30,000 of the 60,000 shares outstanding, with William Fox holding 36 per cent. Stanley and Wesco are believed by many to have been carrying out the nationalization plan of First National units, as a part of which plan Wesco secured control of Saxe and is now said to be dickering on a merger with Northwest Theatres.

In regard to the Stanley-Wesco deal, Clifford B. Hawley, president of First National, and formerly identified with the E. B. Smith Company, Stanley bankers, is on the coast and said to be conferring with Harold B. Franklin, president and general manager of Wesco.

Denying the rumor, Franklin said that while the most friendly relations exist between the two chains, neither is a subsidiary of the other, nor does either control the other; that Stanley was the largest operating chain in the east and Wesco held a similar position in the west.

From St. Louis comes the word of the possible affiliation of Wesco and Skouras as the next step in the Wesco expansion. The Skouras brothers were in Milwaukee presumably to talk over details of the deal with John Dillon of Hayden, Stone & Company, who was making a survey of the Saxe circuit. Under the proposed deals, one of which is also said to be under way with Finkelstein & Ruben, the owned circuits, according to the rumor, would exchange their holdings for stock in Wesco and for cash, as is said to have been done in the Saxe deal. It is also said that the chains would in all probability not become a part of West Coast Theatres, but would continue either to function individually or as a Middle West affiliation.

The pooling of Wesco with Saxe Enterprises, which was reported during the week as completed, gives Wesco control of 45 theatres in Wisconsin. Final papers in the transaction reached New York late last week and their arrival was followed almost immediately by a meeting of West Coast directors.

As a result of this meeting John Dillon, of Hayden, Stone & Company, New York bankers, left for Milwaukee to survey the situation. While in Milwaukee, Dillon will also have under consideration the appointment of an operating head for the chain. No announcement has been forthcoming from him, but it is said three well known theatre executives are in line for the post.

Brandt Surveys Foreign Field

Columbia Chief Says U. S. Producers Are Responsible for Drastic Legislation Abroad; Suggests Remedy

JOE BRANDT, President of Columbia Pictures Corporation, is back from Europe after a three months' visit to the principal cities of England and Europe, where he made an exhaustive survey of film conditions as they affect relations with America. Brandt's report is most comprehensive and should prove of interest to everyone in the industry. He declares that American producers have only themselves to blame for much of the drastic legislation now being enacted in various countries of Europe to hamper and limit the showing of the American-made pictures.

Not only does Brandt tell concisely of conditions abroad but he advances many suggestions that would serve to remedy the existing evils. In the course of a very lengthy report he says:

"I am convinced that if American producers in the past had given a little more consideration to the interests of foreign producers, much of the adverse sentiment would be non-existent. It is preposterous for our producers to labor under the delusion that they can go on disregarding these foreign interests and continue to have things their own way for any great length of time.

"Both in the United States and in England there seems to be an impression in certain quarters that the quota bill will have the effect of forcing a great number of inferior British pictures upon the British market. With this belief I differ most strongly. Recent British productions which have been previewed in London show a marked degree of improvement in quality over pictures formerly made in England. The belief that British-made pictures are absolutely worthless, as far as entertainment value is concerned, is no longer valid. British producers have been making wonderful strides forward in every branch of production.

Joe Brandt, President of Columbia Pictures

"British enthusiasts were outspoken in their opinion that American pictures were educating the English public to American idioms, American slang, American methods of living, all of which were having a tendency to Americanize the British public. They also advanced as a strong argument in favor of a powerful British film industry the effect the showing of English pictures would have upon their colonies and possessions.

"They expect now that the crystallization of their action through the passage of the quota bill will compel American producers and distributors to make pictures in English and depict upon the screen English life, English homes, English surroundings and English people. In this way they hope to accomplish politically what they had failed to do diplomatically.

"It is interesting to note the production schedules contemplated by the various countries I have visited. The actual count, as far as I could get it, was that England for the season of 1928 expects to make not less than [illegible] pictures and probably 100. Germany is expected to produce not less than 200 pictures, probably 250. The French contemplate making at least 100. The Soviet government has announced the number of pictures to be made [illegible] to 250. Italy will probably produce not less than 30. Austria figures on making 25 pictures and the Scandinavian countries will

British Modify Quota Law; New Bill Introduced in Australia

WORD was forthcoming this week of a slight modification in the British Quota Law and of the proposed film quota bill to be introduced in the Australian Parliament. The amendment in the British bill provides that films may qualify for the quota even though made in foreign studios until the end of 1928. The Board of Trade in another amendment is given power to relax the requirement that 75 per cent of salaries must be paid British subjects to enable a film to come under classification of British.

The proposed Australian bill provides a renter's quota of 7½ per cent on British and New Zealand motion picture films in 1929 and 10 per cent in 1931, with a progressive increase to 20 per cent in 1940, according to a cablegram received in the Department of Commerce at Washington from Trade Commissioner Earl C. Squire, in Sydney.

Films are divided into three classes: British, New Zealand and foreign. Each class is divided into long films, 3,000 feet and over, and short films. Serials are not to consist of over 26 parts of 2,000 feet each. In 1929 a film hore tax is to be collected from the renters of films amounting to 5 per cent on gross receipts from rent of New Zealand films, 7½ per cent from British films, and 12½ per cent from foreign films. After October, 1928, restrictions will be imposed on advance and blind bookings.

Jesse Lasky Is Honored

Paramount Distribution Department Dedicates January, February, March as Lasky Months

PARAMOUNT has dedicated to Jesse L. Lasky its selling efforts for the months of January, February and March as a tribute to the quality of product he has turned out so far this season and as a mark of confidence in the forthcoming product. A large number of pictures are scheduled for distribution during the three months' period dedicated to Lasky.

According to the tentative schedule the first pictures to be released during the new year will be "Beau Sabreur," the sequel to "Beau Geste," and an untitled picture co-starring Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton. They are scheduled to go to exhibitors, January 7.

"Love and Learn," Esther Ralston's latest, is scheduled for distribution January 14. On the 21st there will be two releases. They are, Fred Thomson's second starring production for Paramount, "The Pioneer Scout," and Emil Jannings' starring vehicle, "The Last Command."

Paramount's picturization of the Anita Loose story, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," is slated for distribution January 28. On the same date "Peaks of Destiny," UFA production will be released.

The first of the February releases is scheduled for the 4th. It is a Zane Grey production titled, "Under the Tonto Rim." Richard Arlen, Mary Brian, Jack Luden and Guy Oliver head the cast. "The Traveling Salesman" is the tentative title of the newest Richard Dix starring production, which will be released February 11.

Two are scheduled for release February 18. They are "Doomsday," starring Florence Vidor, and "Tillie's Punctured Romance," a new version of the old comedy now in production at the Christie studios, with W. C. Fields, Chester Conklin, Louise Fazenda and Doris Hill featured members of the cast.

"Honky Tonk" is the tentative title of the first George Bancroft starring picture for Paramount, which will be released February 25. "Feel My Pulse," with Bebe Daniels, is scheduled for release the same day.

"Old Ironsides," with a cast that includes Wallace Beery, George Bancroft, Charles Farrell and Esther Ralston, heads the March releases on the 3rd, with the Harold Lloyd contribution, "Speedy" on the same day. Another release for the 3rd is the Clara Bow picture tentatively titled "Red Hair."

"The Legion of the Condemned," companion picture to "Wings" is scheduled for March 10, and the comedy, "Partners in Crime," co-starring Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton on the 17th. On the 24th exchanges will receive prints of Adolphe Menjou's starring production, "The Beauty Doctor." The last release on the 31st will be the UFA production, "Adventure Mad."

Brandt Survey Tells of Foreign Conditions

produce about 40. It can readily be seen that a sufficient number of foreign made pictures will be available to supply the theatres of Europe with most of their needs.

"In my opinion the only way in which to circumvent the definite move to crowd American pictures off foreign screens, is for American interests to undertake the distribution of some of the best of the foreign-made pictures in the United States. This will have the effect of encouraging foreign producers and distributors, and cause them to feel that the tremendous amount of money which the American producer and distributor takes out of the foreign field is, in a measure, replaced by some of the money which foreign-made pictures will earn in the United States.

"This is far from being a theory with Columbia Pictures, for we have entered into reciprocal arrangements with foreign producers in England, France and Germany to distribute the best of their product in the United States.

"The attitude of American exhibitors toward such foreign product should be based on only one thing—showmanship. If a foreign picture possesses all the elements that go to make for good entertainment, that should be the only basis to dictate whether it find a place on any theatre program. Foreign pictures should be judged solely on their box-office value, regardless of the country of origin or the trademark of the producer."

Universal's Boro Park Issue Purchased

The $800,000 first (closed) mortgage 15-year six per cent sinking fund issue of the Boro Park Theatre, a new Universal Theatre in Brooklyn, has been purchased by Toy, Gilson and Taylor, Inc.

The principal and interest of the certificates are guaranteed by written unconditional endorsement by Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises. The building, including furnishings and equipment, has been appraised at $1,300,822 and the land at $209,500. These certificates, on this basis, represent less than 53 per cent loan, making them legal investment for trust funds in New York State.

The new Boro Park is under lease to Universal for 21 years at an annual rental said to be $120,000.

Michigan Firm Will Build Theatre in Watervliet

The General Construction Company of Bangor, Michigan, last week purchased a site on South Main Street in Watervliet, Michigan, on which they plan to erect a motion picture theatre, to cost $40,000, in the spring of 1928. Community Theatres will operate and control the new house as an individual theatre operating unit.

Kansas Censor Board Upheld by Court

THE three women who compose the Kansas Censorship Board have absolute power over the showing of pictures in Kansas, Judge Charles A. Miller of the Wyandotte County district court ruled last week. Hence, the Tunney-Dempsey fight film, branded by the board as "tending to the vicious," will not be shown in Kansas. The judge's decision was the outcome of a suit filed by Walter E. Quigley, Minneapolis, Minn., who had the rights of the film, to force the board to approve the film and reverse its unfavorable decision. In making his decision Judge Miller said:

"No court has the power to substitute its judgment for the judgment of the censor board. No matter how erroneously the judgment of the censor board may be, if it is honest no court has the power to overthrow that judgment."

The judge stated that in his own opinion the picture was not "cruel" and did not tend to debase or corrupt morals. He continued, however, that he was satisfied that the board had acted in the way it thought best for the state.

W. R. Frazer Issues Appeal to Save Trees

WILLIAM R. FRAZER, who besides being general manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation is also a member of the board of governors of the American Green Cross, has authorized a statement in which an appeal is made to the motion picture industry to realize the enormous loss from natural disasters, floods, tornados and the like that can be traced to a lack of trees against which the American Green Cross has been fighting. Plans are now afoot for a national campaign to save the trees, says Mr. Frazer, and the motion picture industry with its resources for the dissemination of propaganda can lend itself perfectly to the movement.

The large task that the Green Cross is tackling can be realized by Mr. Frazer's words "even if we were to start a vast program of reforestation tomorrow, with a governmental bond issue of $2,000,000,000, it would take fully 25 years to get really started on the right road." Another statement which provokes thought is that of the destruction last year of 25,000,000 acres by man-caused fires.

As floods and other upheavings of nature have an effect on the box offices of the land, Mr. Frazer feels assured "that when the time is ripe for the industry to throw its weight behind the cause, it will be ready, as it always has been in the times of humanitarian appeal."

Staab Favors Co-operation With Movie Public

Henry Staab, executive secretary of M.P.T.O. of Wisconsin, in speaking of the Trade Practice Conference in New York this Fall which he attended in company with F. C. Wolcott and A. C. Gutenberg, says, "We have come back much encouraged as a result of this conference and feel sure that as a result of it much good has got to come. Producers and distributors realize this. An industry that is so large as the motion picture business cannot afford to overlook an opportunity to conduct itself in a way that will meet the entire approval of the public generally, because the public, after all, are the ones who will and should judge this important industry."

Three New Houses Going Up in Italy

Recent Italian theatre construction includes the commencement of two central theatres in Milan, one of which will seat 2,000 persons and the other 1,400, according to information received at the Department of Commerce in Washington, D. C. Another first-run cinema will soon get under way in Naples in December. It will seat 1,400. These houses will be run independently of the so-called Pittaluga circuit.

Tiffany-Stahl Film Will Glorify Irish Cops

George Archainbaud, Tiffany-Stahl director, has started direction on a feature production about the uniformed Irish policeman. The continuity is being written by Frances Hyland.

Fox Movietone News Is Widely Approved

Initial Weekly Issue of Important Events Results in Commendation of Picture Patrons

THE new Fox Movietone News, the first weekly issue of which was seen on the screens of theatres in all parts of the country this week, met with a decidedly favorable reception from patrons of the houses and was acclaimed a real innovation.

This first complete issue reached exhibitors December 3rd. It contained the Army-Navy football game, the Vatican choir singing at the grave of the unknown soldier and the destruction of the old Conowingo Bridge over the Susquehanna River.

At the Army-Navy game the music of the bands was heard, as was the shouting of the fans and the cheering of the organized rooting sections of the two institutions. The West Point cadets in their celebrated snake dance of victory, and other interesting highlights, were seen and heard as accurately as though one were at the actual field of play.

The scene of the Vatican choir at the grave of the unknown soldier was an impressive one and the voices of the singers were accurately reproduced in the Movietone. It was a subject of exceptional merit.

The terrific din of the explosions and all of the other highlights that marked the wrecking of the Conowingo bridge added a real thrill to the pictorial matter showing the dynamiting of this old structure.

As a result of this impressive entry of Movietone into the news weekly field, Fox is said to be deluged with orders for installation of the apparatus from motion picture houses in all parts of the United States. The Fox office claims that in less than a week since the initial showings telegrams have been received from more than one hundred cities asking for the service.

Movietone cameramen are now working on a number of future subjects, which should be widely interesting. The opening of the seventieth United States Congress, with speeches by many of the notables and leading lawmakers, is among these.

Among the larger theatres in the United States that are already showing the Fox Movietone News are the following:

Temple Theatre, Toledo, Ohio; Liberty, Spokane, Washington; Strand, Louisville, Kentucky; Tower, Los Angeles, California; Western Electric Ltd., London, England; Fox, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Fox, Springfield, Massachusetts; Fox, Washington, D. C.; Fox's Jamaica, Jamaica, L. I.; Fox's Liberty, Elizabeth, N. J.; Majestic, Jersey City, New Jersey; Blue Mouse, Seattle, Washington; Blue Mouse, Tacoma, Washington; Blue Mouse, Portland, Oregon; Capitol, Pottsville, Pennsylvania; Grand, Terre Haute, Indiana; Majestic, Providence, Rhode Island; Aladdin, Denver, Colorado; Penn-State, Uniontown, Pennsylvania; Capitol, Richmond, Virginia; Fox Terminal, Newark, New Jersey; Fox Washington, Detroit, Michigan; Granada, Everett, Washington; Pheil, St. Petersbusg, Florida; Arcade, West Palm Beach, Florida; Imperial, Jacksonville, Florida.

Universal Has New Photographic Device

A new automatic developing machine for negative film has been invented at Universal City, according to an announcement from Universal. The inventors are Roy Hunter and Robert Pierce, who have been working under Walter Stern's supervision for two years. The machine is run by electricity and has storage batteries in case the current fails; if necessary, it can be run by hand. More than 300,000 feet of negative of various Universal productions have been developed on the machine in the past six months, Universal says, the first being "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Protective measures have been installed to prevent all dust and foreign matter from coming in contact with the film. Air in the developing room is filtered through oil with a vacuum ventilating system used in the laboratory. Special dust proof garments are worn by the men and all water used in mixing and developing is distilled.

Million Gross Profits for Famous Canadian in Fiscal Year

OVER a million dollars in gross profits were reported for the fiscal year ending August 27 last, following the annual meeting of the stockholders of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., Toronto. The announcement was made by J. P. Bickell, vice-president, following the meeting held in Toronto. The previous fiscal year ending August 28, 1926, showed gross profits of $800,581.61, and that of 1925 showed a total of $730,607.29.

The purchase by Famous Players Canadian Corporation of Eastern Theatres, Ltd., Toronto, operating a large number of theatres in Toronto cities, is reported completed, with stock at $28 a share.

In making the financial report, N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Canadian Famous, said that only the earnings of wholly owned subsidiary companies had been included in the profit and loss account of the corporation. In the case of other affiliated companies only the dividends had been included in the revenue.

New Fox Detroit Theatre Has Plans for Many Innovations

BUILDERS and architects of the new Fox Theatre are discussing an innovation that should prove popular if the plans materialize. They contemplate for the comfort and convenience of patrons, a beautiful tea grotto, restaurant, cabaret palace, spacious nook for dansants, dinners, after-theatre and before-theatre parties of all kinds, with a direct connection into the theatre.

Patrons will be able to lunch, dine, have tea or supper on one of the balconies and then pass directly through a turnstile into the theatre. Luncheon and matinee parties may be combined with theatre seats automatically included in the orders.

Music from the theatre's orchestra would be available with loud-speaking arrangements and the best of New York concerts in the Movietone programs. After the show one could enjoy food in perfectly appointed surroundings without going blocks to a suitable café.

Merger Quiz Is Routine

Government Report Indicates Probes Merely Studies for Determining Conditions

WASHINGTON, D. C. – Investigations of mergers in the motion picture industry by the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice are, for the most part, merely routine studies such as are made of all mergers which come to the attention of the department, it is indicated in the annual report of Attorney General John G. Sargent, just submitted to President Coolidge.

Discussing the merger activities of the anti-trust division, the Attorney General declares that the results obtained under the policy adopted a year ago of examining at their inception the surrounding facts and conditions of proposed combinations "have confirmed our opinion that it is in the public interest to obtain and consider the salient facts relative to any proposed centralization of business before that has become an established fact."

As a result of these examinations there have been placed in the files of this department fundamental economic facts, as well as the detailed purposes and data of the proposed combination, so that, even though there may be no basis for the department's proceeding in the first instance, there will be in the files for prompt future reference information of value to the department in the event that there should be a violation of the law.

"Subsquent to the initial submission of a proposed consolidation or merger the division periodically re-examines all the facts to determine whether there has been a violation of law."

Activities of trade associations which may tend to bring about undue restraint of trade also are carefully watched, it is divulged, and the department annually studies a number of such organizations, contenting itself usually with bringing to the attention of the organizations such activities as might become illegitimate and suggesting their abandonment. "It has been the purpose, so far as practicable," it is explained, "not to interfere with legitimate trade association activities, but to prevent undue restraints of trade."

Nine New Theatres Open

Older Houses Hard Hit With Extensive Construction in S. New Jersey and E. Pennsylvania

THE opening of nine new theatres in the Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey territory within the past two weeks has played havoc with some of the older and less up-to-date houses and has affected the attendance even at some of the more modern theatres.

The new houses, each the last word in equipment, have attracted unusually heavy patronage since the days of their opening and practically all of the older ones felt the loss immediately. Many of the latter showed a deficit.

The nine new houses and the dates of their openings follow: New Park, Lexington, Pa., November 14th; New Cameo, Allentown, November 15th; Wynne, Wynnefield, November 18th; Princess, Philadelphia, November 19th; New Colonial, Phoenixville, November 21st; Capitol, Pottsville, November 21st; Clementon, Clementon, New Jersey, November 22nd; Cadet, Philadelphia, November 23rd; Pearl, Philadelphia, November 25th.

Competition is becoming more keen daily in the Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey territory and it is not at all unlikely that many of the smaller theatre owners will be forced to the wall in the near future.

All of the older houses have been hard hit by the competition of the Stanley and Fox groups with their extensive construction programs. Only those houses built in the past ten years that have kept up with the trend of the times seem to have much chance to survive, and it will be a struggle for many of those to withstand the keen competition that is growing more keen each week.

Kansas-Missouri T. O. Will Meet in Kansas City

The Hotel President was selected this week as the site for the convention of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri convention in Kansas City on December 12 and 13. It is expected that the organization, which broke away from the M. P. T. O. A. several years ago to join Allied, will reaffiliate itself with the M. P. T. O. A. The M. P. T. O. K.-M. board of directors recently adopted a resolution recommending that the organization reaffiliate with the M. P. T. O. A. Reaffiliation is favored by R. R. Biechele, President of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri.

Many Notables Will Attend Chamber Commerce Ball

Among the many notables who have accepted invitations to attend the annual supper and dance of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, which will be held at the Hotel Plaza in New York on the evening of Friday, December 16, are the following:

Hon. Royal S. Copeland, U. S. Senator; Justices Walsh, Valente, Mahoney, Schmuck, Collins, Salmon and Kernochan; John H. McCooey; Hon. J. J. Byrne, President of the Borough of Brooklyn; Hon. John A. Lynch, President Borough of Richmond; Sheriff Charles W. Culkin and Fire Commissioner Dorman.

Keith Louisville Theatres' Musicans Strike

Approximately twenty union musicians employed in Keith's three motion picture houses and one vaudeville theatre in Louisville, Kentucky, walked out after the last performance Saturday night to join stage hands and operators in a sympathy strike. The latter group struck two weeks ago after it was learned that the National Theatre had refused to hire a maintenance man when the house opened recently.

Grand Canyon Unit Again Resumes Work

HAVING navigated the Colorado River from Green River as far as Lees Ferry after having been cut off from the world for two weeks, the 13 men of the Pathe-Bray expedition filming the picture, "Menace," in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado have again entered the gorge and are completing the trip to Needles, California.

The six boats used by the party had to be refitted and repaired at Lees Ferry and new radio equipment was installed and placed in charge of Staff Sergeant V. R. Herrick. The party will venture through Marble, Grand and Virgin Canyons to the landing at Needles. They have yet to shoot the "Devil's Rapids," a most dangerous course. Donald Blossom, the leading woman, will not accompany the party over this route, but will be carried in a plane to the bottom of the canyon at "Devil's Rapids."

The War Department has been asked to allow the government staff of airplanes under the command of Lieutenant Walter Burgess to stand by at Grand Canyon until the perils of the trip have been mastered.

Bills Concerning Films Up Before Congress

INTRODUCTION in the House of Representatives of a bill providing for the repeal of the fight-film law, full repeal of admission taxes, and national daylight saving marked the opening of the first session of the 70th Congress in Washington on December 5.

Repeal of the fight-film law was provided for in a measure introduced by Representative Cochran of Missouri. The elimination of all admission taxes was covered in a bill by Representative Gallivan of Massachusetts, and national daylight saving, from the last Sunday in March to the last Sunday in October, was sponsored by Representative O'Connell of New York.

In a bill introduced by Representative Knutson of Minnesota, no admission tax would be assessed against admissions to cooperative or community motion picture theatres where no part of the net earnings inured to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

The measure providing for Sunday closing for the District of Columbia, the subject of hearings before a subcommittee of the House last session, was reintroduced by Representative Lankford of Georgia.

Denial of License for Sex Picture Questioned

The Public Welfare Picture Corporation has made an issue of the action taken by the New York State Motion Picture Commission in denying a license to exhibit a picture entitled "The Naked Truth." A writ of certiorari to review the action taken by the commission in refusing the license has been issued by the appellate division of the Supreme Court sitting in Albany. The writ is returnable before the court on December 12. The licensing of all motion pictures in New York state is now under the jurisdiction of the State Department of Education with James Wingate as chief of the bureau.

Joseph Engel New Caddo Production Manager

Joseph Engel, who was vice-president and general manager of the old Metro company, succeeds Whitman Bennett as production manager for Caddo Productions, whose pictures are released through United Artists. Engel is already in Hollywood, having left the Fox organization in New York to assume the Caddo post.

Mr. Bennett, who leaves Los Angeles for New York during the week of December 6, resigned as the Caddo production manager because of pressure of personal affairs.

Tiffany-Stahl Completes Two Productions

"Streets of Shanghai" and "A Woman Against the World" are two features that have just been completed by Tiffany-Stahl Productions and now are being cut and edited. Pauline Starke is featured in the first production, with Kenneth Harlan as her leading man. In "A Woman Against the World" are Sally Rand, Gertrude Olmstead, Georgia Hale and Harrison Ford.

"U" Makes Sales Changes

Van Praag Named New Western Sales Director, While Herbel Goes to Chicago

LOU B. METZGER, general sales manager for Universal, has effected an important shifting of his sales executives that brings about a number of changes in the organization. Several resignations have been accepted and promotions made from within the ranks, in accordance with Carl Laemmle's long established custom.

Henry M. Herbel, Western sales manager, at his own request assumes the management of the Chicago exchange, left vacant by the resignation of Leroy Alexander. The Western sales directorship goes to Morton Van Praag, who for the past year has been general manager of the "Big U" exchange in New York City. Morris Joseph, manager of the New Haven exchange, takes Van Praag's former post. Leo Abrams, Brooklyn and Long Island salesman out of the "Big U" exchange, becomes New Haven manager.

In addition to the above another important change in sales managers has been effected. Phil Dumas, who for some time past has been a special representative in the Cleveland, Pittsburgh and adjacent territories, has been appointed exchange manager for the company's Pittsburgh exchange. He takes the place of Al Sugarman, who has just resigned.

The switch of Leo Abrams from salesman in the Brooklyn and Long Island field to New Haven brings Leslie Sherwood [illegible] salesman in Brooklyn and Long Island. Sherwood was formerly New Jersey sales manager for the "Big U" exchange. He, in turn, will be succeeded as New Jersey sales manager by Nat Liebeskind, at present non-theatrical sales manager for the "Big U." Herman Stern will take charge of the non-theatrical sales.

Herbel was relieved of the Western sales directorship at his own request. He held the post for two years and the constant traveling incident to a territory all west of Chicago, but routed out of New York City, caused him to ask for an assignment where he could be at home more of the time and avoid traveling.

Beatty Given New Post

Resigns as Assistant to Will Hays to Serve First National as Publicity, Advertising Chief

JEROME BEATTY, assistant to Will H. Hays, has resigned his executive post in the Hays organization to join First National, where he will be in charge of advertising, publicity and general public relations work. His resignation becomes effective January 1st.

The announcement of the Beatty resignation and his prospective affiliation with First National was made by Ned E. Depinet, vice-president and general sales manager of First National. At the same time Depinet announced that no changes would be made in the present staff of First National. It was also announced by the Hays organization that no successor had been named to Beatty.

Jerome Beatty

Beatty is a veteran in the motion picture field, his first work being with Essanay in 1915. He is also a graduate of the newspaper field. He first took up newspaper work in Kansas, in which state he was born. He worked [illegible] newspapers in Kansas City, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Washington and New York City.

After his advent into the motion picture industry with Essanay in 1915, he gained wide experience with a number of companies. Among others he has directed publicity, advertising and exploitation for [illegible] Paramount and [illegible].

Beatty's good work attracted the notice of Will Hays, who made him an assistant, and since joining the Hays organization he [illegible] Movie Season campaigns, which have been observed with profit by exhibitors in all parts of the United States.

Pathe-De Mille Will Make "The Cop"

European Production Is Showing Increase for New Year

GERMAN and Russian film production is showing a marked increase, with indicidations of additional activity for the new year. A number of new producing units have started work at Staaken, a little village on the outskirts of Berlin, prominent European stars are turning their attention in that direction.

Defu Pictures, producers of First National's German films, are the occupants of the Staaken studios, which are said to be the largest in the world. They occupy a plot 1,000 feet by 900 feet. In the past few months a half dozen pictures have been started, three of which are still in production. Two others have had successful premieres and the other is now being cut.

The Motion Picture section of the Department of Commerce has been informed that the big WUFKO studio at Kiev, Ukrainia, is nearing completion, and that production activities will get under way there shortly after the new year. This company has produced a number of pictures during the last year at the Odessa studios, and will probably increase its production schedule for next year.

U. A. Names Riesenfeld

Appoints Noted Director as Managing Chief of Theatre Circuit; Assumes Duties at Once

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, President of United Artists Theatre Circuit, has appointed Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld managing director of United Artists Theatres. Accompanied by Lou Anger, Vice-President and general manager of United Artists circuit, Dr. Riesenfeld left New York for Chicago Monday and will open the United Artists Theatre there on December 26th.

Dr. Riesenfeld, who withdrew as managing director of the Colony Theatre in New York for Universal to assume his new duties with United Artists, will in all probability make his headquarters in Los Angeles, so that he can score all United Artists pictures where and when they are being filmed. His duties, however, will compel him to spend much of his time traveling.

Hugo Riesenfeld

In taking over the managing directorship of the United Artists houses, Dr. Riesenfeld expressed himself as being immensely pleased, because it will satisfy his ambition to offer the feature picture as the chief item of his show, merely pointing the surrounding musical features to the film. He is decidedly opposed to vaudeville in picture houses.

The Colony was the fourth Broadway motion picture theatre Dr. Riesenfeld managed. For eight years he was managing director of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres and for five years the Criterion. In the Fall of 1915 Dr. Riesenfeld presented in a New York legitimate theatre, Clara Kimball Young in "Trilby," a World film, and later he supervised New York presentations of "The Battle Cry of Peace," in which Norma Talmadge had her first major opportunity.

A native of Vienna, Dr. Riesenfeld studied at the Royal Academy and the university there. He was also first violinist at the Imperial Opera House in his native city. In 1907 he came to America to become concert master for Oscar Hammerstein's opera company at the Manhattan Opera House in New York. Before he became managing director of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres he was musical director, and as such he scored Douglas Fairbanks' "A Good Bad Man," which opened the Rialto.

Canadian Catholic Bishops Against Sunday Shows

Exhibitors in the Province of Quebec and Eastern Ontario may feel the effect of the pastoral letter issued by the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church, signed by 17 archbishops and bishops of the various ecclesiastical provinces of Montreal, Quebec and Ottawa and strongly condemning Sunday entertainments. Catholics were called upon to refrain from attending pictures on Sundays and holy days and are forbidden to take part in any such amusements for which an admission fee is charged, even though the revenue is for charity or religious purposes.

The letter was read in all Roman Catholic churches and adherents of that faith were instructed to avail themselves of all lawful means to banish the Sunday show. The edict went into effect Sunday, December 4, in many cities where Sunday performances of motion pictures have been the rule and not the exception.

Mary Duncan Cast for "Four Devils" Role

Mary Duncan, who played a part in the stage play, "The Shanghai Gesture," has been cast by F. W. Murnau to play the siren in "The Four Devils." The actress' latest screen work was in the recent Fox release, "Very Confidential." She is now working in "Soft Living," but will be available to work under the German director early this month.

Flora Finch has been cast for a featured part. Dione Ellis, Charles Morton and Barry Norton are also being considered by Murnau for parts. Several sequences for the new picture have been scenarized by Marion Orth.

Evelyn Brent in New Bancroft Vehicle

The female lead opposite George Bancroft in his first vehicle as a Paramount star has been assigned Evelyn Brent. The title of the picture has not yet been chosen, but it is now in the course of filming under the direction of Victor Schertzinger.

Victor Varconi Acting in Tiffany-Stahl Feature

Tiffany-Stahl Productions have acquired the services of Victor Varconi, Hungarian actor, through the courtesy of Cecil B. De Mille. He will play the male lead in "The Tragedy of Youth," which is being directed by King Baggott.

D. C. Thompson Orient Agent for Kinograms

KINOGRAMS' foreign service was augmented this week when Donald C. Thomson, war correspondent and photographer, signed a long term contract with the Educational newsreel to take charge of Kinograms work in the Orient, where he will reorganize the Kinograms staff and establish camera centers in Shanghai, Japan, the Phillipines, Siam and other Oriental countries. As soon as the work of reorganization has been completed, Mr. Thompson, accompanied by his wife, will head an expedition into East India and Africa, Kinograms to hold exclusive rights to all news pictures gathered on the trip.

Mr. Thompson has been around the world 17 times and has just returned from a motion picture expedition into Asia, pictures of which will be shown in Kinograms releases in the near future. In a conversation with Captain George McLeod Baynes, president of Kinograms Publishing Corporation who aided Thompson in the release of his Russian revolution picture, "Blood-Stained Russia," Thompson was prevailed upon to establish headquarters in Asia for the newsreel.

Woodhull Will Address North Carolina T. O.

NATIONAL President R. F. Woodhull, of the M. P. T. O. A., leaves the latter part of this week to attend the annual meeting of the North Carolina M. P. T. O. at Charlotte, December 12 and 13. Charles Picquet, president of the North Carolina body, has announced that the convention will start at 10:30 A. M. next Monday with an opening meeting. Mr. Woodhull and C. C. Pettijohn will address the gathering. The meeting of the Film Board of Trade will follow in the early afternoon and the banquet will take place at 7:30. The second day will consist of social activities and business meetings with a speech by Mr. Woodhull at one of the Charlotte service clubs.

In the M. P. T. O. A. president's party will be Mrs. Woodhull, William M. James, head of the Ohio exhibitor association, and Mrs. James; Frank J. Rembusch, secretary of the unaffiliated exhibitor group at the recent Federal trade conference, and A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the national board of directors of the M. P. T. O.

Warners Set January and New December Releases

The first five Warner Bros. releases to go to exhibitors after the new year and a new release for the current month have been announced by the company.

On January 14, Irene Rich's newest starring picture, "Beware of Married Men," will be issued to be followed, on 28th, by Rin-Tin-Tin's "A Race for Life." The February releases will start on the 11 with "The Litle Snob," featuring May McAvoy; Monte Blue in "Across the Pacific" will come from the Warner exchanges beginning February 25. "Powder my Back," another Irene Rich starring vehicle, will be released on March 10.

The new release scheduled for December is "Ham and Eggs at the Front," which has been set for December 24. It is a comedy revolving around the colored troops in France; Tom Wilson, Heinie Conklin and Myrna Loy are the principal players.

Rosson Will Direct "The Escape" for Fox Films

After staying in New York to see the premiere of his Fox Films picture, "The Wizard," Richard Rosson is now en route to the Fox lot on the West Coast to begin work on "The Escape," a modernized picturization of the Paul Armstrong play adapted by Paul Schofield. The story deals with bootleggers and hi-jackers. So far, no one has been chosen for parts in the picture, which, it is said, will probably be started about December 10th. Kenneth Hawks will supervise.

Loew's Boston Theatres Report High Net Income

Loew's Boston Theatres Company reports net income for the year, after depreciation and taxes of $190,020, which is equal to $1.24 a share on the 153,275 shares of capital stock. This compares with a net of $123,450 or 81 cents a share in 1926 and $193,121 or $1.28 a share in 1925.

Goldwyn Issues Warning

Declares Combination of Vaudeville and Pictures Is Ruinous to Picture Industry

SAMUEL GOLDWYN is the latest to come forward with the assertion that the mixing of vaudeville with pictures will eventually bring disaster to the motion picture industry. He is most emphatic in his statement that the two do not mix, and that it is only a question of time when the exhibitors of the country will come to a full realization of that fact.

According to Goldwyn it is practically impossible to have both good vaudeville and good pictures on the same bill, and as a consequence both the picture and vaudeville will suffer, with the public eventually refusing to extend patronage.

As Goldwyn puts it: "The public is simply being fooled, for under such an arrangement it is not getting either good vaudeville or good pictures. Furthermore, the motion picture fans will resent this poor quality because they have already been exhausted by an hour of cheap vaudeville before the picture starts."

Continuing his argument, Goldwyn says that there is room for vaudeville entirely and for pictures separately, but that both should stand on their own bottoms. If the combination continues, he says, the film industry will be forced to make poorer pictures because of the heavy cost the public forces on theatre owners.

Not only will this condition affect the patronage of pictures in the United States, according to Goldwyn, but it will also have a deplorable effect upon the foreign market. Because of the quality of the pictures that have been made in the past, American product has been extremely popular in foreign fields and financial returns from foreign markets have been tremendous. Goldwyn figures that if the quality of American films is lowered we will lose our supremacy abroad, and once lost it may be a difficulty matter to regain it.

New Color Process Due

Inventor Says Cox Multi-Color Lenses and Projectors Will Be on Market Shortly

HAROLD N. COX, inventor of the Cox Multi-Color Process, has announced that marketing of the process will start in the near future. The process is said to enable both filming and projection of pictures in natural colors.

The inventor claims that through this new method all colors of the spectrum, including true blues and purples, are shown on the screen simultaneously, with red, yellow, green and other colors, and entirely free from "fringe," which has detracted from other color processes.

Makeup will be eliminated, if all that is claimed for the invention is true, since the colors are said to appear on the screen naturally as the eye sees them while being photographed. The lack of contrast between subject and background is also said to be eliminated.

As explained by Cox, the effect is accomplished purely optically by use of a panchromatic negative and by means of a single unit lens attachment which can be placed on any camera and removed with the same ease as the regular lense, with which it is interchangeable.

The negative is then said to be processed by regular developing process. Prints are made on black and white stock, and are not tinted, toned nor otherwise treated differently from black and white.

Another feature, according to the inventor, is that, being black and white, it is a single emulsion film, and no more subject to scratching than the ordinary picture film.

For projection, a similar single unit attachment, which is also interchangeable, is used on any projector with the regular lamp house, screen and mechanism.

Lillian Gish Joins United Artists Under Two-Year Contract

UNITED ARTISTS has signed Lillian Gish to a two-year contract, and her pictures henceforth will be released by that company. In making the announcement, Joseph M. Schenck, President of United Artists, said that Miss Gish will make but one or two pictures a year, the first of which will be ready for release in September, 1928.

It is likely that D. W. Griffith, who discovered Miss Gish, and made her famous through "The Birth of a Nation," will direct her in her first picture under the new contract. This has not been definitely decided, however, nor has the first story. A vehicle is now being sought that will suit the talents of both.

Among the most popular successes of Miss Gish in the past that were released through United Artists were "Broken Blossoms," "Orphans of the Storm" and "Way Down East."

D. W. Griffith is again making films for the company he founded in 1919 with Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks. His latest, "Drums of Love," has just been completed.

Christies Buy Site for New Studio

THIRTY acres in North Hollywood have been acquired by the Christie Film Company, which will use the area as a production site for many of the new Christie pictures. Eventually, it is said, the Christie filming producing activities will be centered at the site as the company's expansion program will necessitate larger quarters than the present studio at Sunset and Gower Streets.

The new acreage will be improved and will be enclosed by Spanish walls and decorated with landscape effects which will also be useful in the taking of scenes. Mr. Charles Christie gave it as his opinion that in the future Hollywood will become so thickly populated that motion picture work, at best will be cramped for room. Future studio homes, he said, will be out on the outskirts of the city.

Fox Finishes Three Films During Past Week

"A Horseman of the Plains," starring Tom Mix, "Pigskin," a football story, and "Woman Wise," co-featuring William Russell and June Collyer, were three new pictures completed during the past week at the Fox studios in Hollywood.

Ben Stoloff directed the Mix Western in which Sally Blane has the role of the girl. David Butler wielded the megaphone over David Rollens and Sue Carol in "Pigskin," which deals with the game of football during three generations. Albert Ray directed "Woman Wise."

Two St. Louis Distributing Companies Merge

A deal involving distribution in the St. Louis territory was closed Saturday last, December 3, when the Premier Pictures Corporation was merged with the St. Louis Film Exchange. The merged concern will operate under the name of Premier Pictures Corporation, a new corporation to be formed later to cover that transaction, it is understood.

United Artists Finish Sales Reorganization

ITS sales reorganization finished, Al Lichtman, sales head of United Artists, declared this week that since November 10, when some of the districts in the Middle West were strengthened, all of the Eastern division has been functioning under the new plan of operation and under Cresson E. Smith's supervision.

Boston is the headquarters of District No. 1 of the Eastern division, a district also including New Haven and Portland, Me. New York is the headquarters of District No. 2 of the Eastern division, this district also including Buffalo and Philadelphia.

Washington is headquarters of District No. 3, which district also takes in Atlanta, Charlotte and Pittsburgh. For the present, Detroit, Denver, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle and Canada remain in their original status with their respective sales managers.

Premier Pictures was owned jointly by Nat E. Steinberg, president; Claude W. McKean, vice-president, and Thomas Tobin, secretary. They will continue to act as head officers of the Premier company, and will also own half the stock in the merged exchange. St. Louis Film Exchange was owned by Skouras Brothers Enterprises, which corporation will retain a stock interest in the merged organization, but will not be active in its management.

Ten Features from Pathe in December

Pathe will release ten feature productions during December. Four De Mille features, three Westerns, two feature comedies and a dramatic special comprise the celluloid decade.

"Flying Luck," starring Monte Banks, and directed by Herman Raymakers, will be released on December 4. On December 11 "On to Reno," "Grandma's Boy" and "The Devil's Twin" will be issued. James Cruze personally directed the first picture, a vehicle for Marie Prevost; "Grandma's Boy" is a reissue of the Harold Lloyd comedy of that name; "The Devil's Twin" stars Leo Maloney, and was also directed by him. "The Rush Hour" is another vehicle for Marie Prevost, and was directed by E. Mason Hopper.

On December 18, "My Friend From India," "Almost Human," "The Golden Clown" and "The Desert of the Law" will be released. Elinor Fair and Franklin Pangborn are co-starred in the first, a farce comedy directed by E. Mason Hopper. "Almost Human," another product from the De Mille studio, with Vera Reynolds in the stellar role, was directed by Frank Urson; a Danish production is "The Golden Clown," directed by A. W. Sandberg, with Gosta Ekman and Karina Bell in the leading roles; "The Desert of the Lost" features Wally Wales, directed by Richard Thorpe.

The final release for December will be "The Land of the Lawless," starring a new Western star, Jack Padjan, who was directed by Thomas Buckingham.

Camilla Horn New Lead Lady in "Tempest"

Camilla Horn is now playing opposite John Barrymore in "Tempest," having replaced Dorothy Sebastian. Simultaneously with the change in leading ladies is the announced resignation of Slav Tourjansky as director of the new Barrymore vehicle, and the engagement of Sam Taylor to take charge of the megaphoning.

Miss Horn, who is a 19-year-old German actress discovered by F. W. Murnau, was originally signed for the role opposite Barrymore, but was unable to leave Berlin before November 1 because of contractual obligations to appear in Ufa productions.

Fox Will Release "Come to My House" Dec. 25

Olive Borden's latest starring vehicle for Fox Films, "Come to My House," from the novel by Arthur Somers Roche, is scheduled by Fox Films for release on December 25. Alfred E. Green directed the Fox star, whose leading man in the new film is Antonio Moreno.

National Press Club to See "A Texas Steer"

OFFICIAL Washington and members of the National Press Club, 1,000 or more correspondents, feature writers, editors of Washington newspapers, will attend a preview of "A Texas Steer," the First National special release, on December 15 at the National Press Club's theatre-auditorium. The premiere will serve to dedicate the Club's new $2,000,000 office building and club quarters in Washington. High officials of the government, members of Congress and diplomatic corps and others have been invited to witness the Will Rogers picture which pokes fun at national politics.

M-G-M Renews Contract With Greta Garbo

Greta Garbo, Swedish actress, has had her contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer renewed. She co-stars with John Gilbert in "Love," has just completed "The Divine Woman," and will soon begin working on a new starring vehicle tentatively titled "Heat," adapted from an original story by John Colton.

Miss Garbo became affiliated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in 1925. She was a pupil in the Royal Academy of Art in Stockholm, her birthplace, when she played her first screen role in "The Story of Gosta Berling."

Warner Bros. Schedules Three December Releases

Warner Bros. will start its December releases with "Brass Knuckles," a new Monte Blue starring vehicle which was directed by Lloyd Bacon. This has been set for the 3rd of the month. Next, on the 17th, will be "If I Were Single," in which May McAvoy stars with Conrad Nagel as her leading man under the direction of Roy Del Ruth. The third release for December will come on the last day of the month. It is "Husbands for Rent," based on the play, "In Name Only." The two principal players whom Henry Lehrman directed were Owen Moore and Helene Costello.

Sheehan Director of West Coast Chain

Winfield Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Films Corporation, has been elected to the Board of Directors of motion picture houses in the West, controlling many of the biggest theatres on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Sheehan is now located in Los Angeles with his offices at Fox Films West Coast studio.

Release Dates Set for First National Month

THE five pictures set for release during January, the First National Month, and their dates of issuance include "The Shepherd of the Hills," January 1; "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," January 8; "French Dressing," January 15; "Sailors' Wives," January 22, and "The Noose," January 29.

Every January the salesmen of First National endeavor to capture high ranking in the sales drive which occurs during that month.

Rogers, Davidson Stars of Pathe Dec. 18, Shorts

"Exploring England With Will Rogers" and "Flaming Fathers," starring Will Rogers and Max Davidson, respectively, are the highlights of the Pathe program of shorts for the week of December 18. Eight other numbers are included on the bill. They are: "Just Kidding," a new Rare-Bit; "By Hook or Crook," seventh chapter of the current serial, "The Masked Menace"; Topics of the Day and Pathe Review, No. 51; "Frolics in Frost," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; Pathe News, Nos. 104 and 1, and "Christmas Cheer," the special Æsop cartoon Yuletide release.

"Flaming Fathers" is a Hal Roach production for Pathe, in which Martha Sleeper, Edward Clayton and Lillian Leighton worked, under the direction of Leo McCarey. The Rare-Bit release was edited and titled by Beth Brown. The Pathe Review presents "An Old-Time Playground," "Crystal Magic," "Wooden Fairy Tales," and "Bathroom Art."

Christie 1928 Releases Well Advanced

The comedies of Christie Brothers for Paramount release in January are well ahead of schedule, the cutters and Al Martin, title writer, now finishing the first, "Fighting Fanny," in which Anne Cornwall stars with Jack Duffy as a supporting player. Jimmy Harrison, Virginia Sale and Lorraine Eddy also are in the cast.

Bobby Vernon is being starred in "Save the Pieces," in which he, Francis Lee, Bill Blaisdell, Eddie Baker and Snowball McHenry are working under the direction of William Watson.

These two comedies will complete the Christie product set for January by Paramount. Afterwards Watson is to direct Billy Dooley in a new sailor farce and Harold Beaudine will begin a new comedy with Jimmie Adams.

Players Join "So This Is Love" Cast

Burr McIntosh, Syd Crossley and Aggie Herring have been added to the cast of the Columbia picture, "So This Is Love," now in its third week of production under Frank Capra's direction with Ralph Graves and Viola Dana as the two leads.

United Artists Coast Theatre Opens Dec. 26

AFTER nine months of construction work, during which time some $3,500,000 were expended, the new United Artists theatre in Los Angeles will be opened on Monday, December 26th. The house is located on Broadway, near Ninth Street, in the heart of the downtown Los Angeles business section. The West Coast Theatres will operate the house, which is one of the United Artists circuit. The seating capacity of the theatre is 2,300, the great majority of them being in the orchestra. In the balcony are 800 seats and in the mezzanine 164. Features of the house include elevator service to the balcony, a cosmetic room and a women's smoking room.

News Reel Resume

This week was important in the newsreel field as it heralded the official release of the first issue of the Fox Movietone Newsreel. With a record of the actual scene and sound of an occurrence now a fact, the latest advance of the newsreel brings it right up to the breastworks of reality. What other fields will be left for it to conquer is difficult to imagine. The initial issue of the Fox "talking newsreel" demonstrates that technical perfection in the recording of sound is yet to be attained. When that defect is overcome the perfect reality of an event undoubtedly will have been reached.

Fox News, Vol. 9, No. 20 features scenes of Australia's rowing crowds, Secretary Kellogg and Ahmed Mouhtar Bey in Washington, 17 pairs of twins, Japanese dolls, ocean liner's bell-boys in drill and new styles in feminine footwear. An amusing novelty (football scenes taken by "Looney Lens," cameraman) supplies football movements and huddles presented backwards. A geyser near Seattle shows fire spouting out of cold water.

No. 21 presents a story found in all of the various newsreels, that of the 70th Congress. A religious ceremony in Sofia, Bulgaria, Post Office dealing with misdirected mail, Parisian girls honoring St. Catherine, Italy's marble caves at Carrara are other shots. An unusual sight is the one million volts of electricity which the Germans have been able to transmit. Feminine bathing attire lends the touch of beauty to the reel.

International Newsreel, Vol. 9, No. 98 shows the "dry" navy's attempts to stop smuggling, the New York memorial to Victor Herbert, Japanese and American tall men, the 70th Congress, bear cubs, and expedition to Brazil in search of lost explorer.

No. 99: The bike race at Madison Square Garden in New York leads off the collection of stories which include Christmas shopping crowds, the new Congress and sick children in their mountain health-camp. Pictorial loveliness can be found in abundance in shots with a U. S. air mail pilot over the mountains. Actress' pets and cadets in a horse-drill are concluding numbers.

In M-G-M News, Vol. 1, No. 32, are more scenes of the 70th Congress and new shoe styles for women. Virginia's state flag being returned in ceremony, Secretary Kellogg and the Turkish envoy, horse racing on ice in Switzerland, Japanese dolls and flocks of Western geese are other highlights of this release. An Indian village swept by storm, Pacific Fleet sailors battling and more sets of twins give a novel touch.

No. 33 consists of Britain's camel corps in winter maneuvers, Christmas snapshots, classical dancing in Italy, skating in Switzerland, the new Congress, the bike racers and a foundered ship being aided by Atlantic Coast Guard.

Issue No. 99 of Pathe News starts off with additional scenes of sinking ship receiving aid from Coast Guard. Following views are of the new Congress, Coolidge buying Christmas seals, Cantonese coining money, new fashion displays for the feminine foot, toys, the Vatican choir, cavalry mounted on skiis in winter maneuvers, the new Turkish ambassador, and Arkansan giant. The return of the civil war flag to Virginia is also featured.

No. 100 presents shots of the six-day bike race, Congress listening to President's message, the German goose-step, Marines flying from Florida to Nicaragua, gale sweeping over English vessels, Santa Claus, and the boy sultan of Morocco.

No. 5349 of Kinograms also features the plane rescuing wrecked shipmen, Vatican choir, the new ambassador from Turkey, the collection of Japanese "friendship" dolls. Other shots of interest are the statue in memory of Victor Herbert, the new shoes intended for milady's feet, an orchestra of accordeons and a shot of interest to exhibitors showing the Bray-Pathe expedition after it had traveled a portion of the dangerous Colorado.

Release No. 5350 viewed the new Congress in convention, a garden menagerie, Hungary honoring Kossuth, her national hero, 15-year-old lass and her railroad, Los Angeles dog show for high priced breeds, and girl wrestling with alligators.

The Paramount News No. 37 gives an idea of how American soldiers enjoy a holiday in China and also includes the twin story, the new Turkish envoy, the Vatican choir, the Japanese dolls, Congress on the job and the life saving activities of the Atlantic Coast Guard plane, which is shown assisting doomed ship. Box kites, a Chinese "skyscraper" of bamboo and fire in tower of Vienna building are additional items of interest.

The six day bike racers are again shown in No. 32, along with shots of the opening of the new Congress and the employment of an airplane by the Atlantic Coast Guard to save wrecked seamen. Besides these, there are included scenes of Chinese mobs raiding Soviet consulate, the floods in New York State, French girls in their annual parade honoring St. Catherine, and babies exercising via the radio.

F B O Finishing 1927-28 Picture Schedule

WITH "The Devil's Trade Mark," "Skinner's Big Idea," "Beyond London's Lights," "Sally of the Scandals" and other specials in work and four features practically in the hands of the cutters, production on this season's output of F B O pictures is expected to reach completion during December. It is thought that work on the 1928-29 program will be started the first week of 1928.

Belle Bennett is playing the leading role in "The Devil's Trade Mark," which Leo Meehan is directing. Matt Taylor is doing the scenario for "Skinner's Dress Suit" and Lucila Mendez has been cast for the star role in "Sally of the Scandals," which her husband, Ralph Ince, is directing. Tom Terris is filming "Beyond London's Lights," while Tom Tyler is completing "When the Law Rides" and Buzz Barton "The Bantam Cowboy." Bob Steele is in the last week of "Man in the Rough," and Ranger, the dog, is nearly finished with "Law of Fear."

A NOVEL display in connection with theatre construction is being attempted in Detroit by the Fox Theatres Corp., with the erection of its $10,500,000 theatre on Woodward Avenue above Grand Circus Park. William Buttner, sculpturist in ornamental work, is already at work modeling the Hindu temple design and he has been placed in a huge show window on one side of the theatre, where his work is commanding the attention of thousands of passersby daily. The new Fox will have the largest balcony span of any theatre in the world. Steel work has been completed and plastering is about to commence. The theatre will be opened in midsummer of 1928.

ALTHOUGH Sunday performances are taboo in Ontario and other Provinces of Canada, Manager Charles Querrie of the Palace Theatre, Toronto, arranges a special lobby display for every Sunday, the exhibition comprising posters, still photographs and announcements on early attractions. The lobby is left wide open and plenty of people walk in, during their Sunday strolls, to look around. Each poster is duly marked with proper dates.

MANAGER CHARLES J. JONES, of the Colonial, Harrisburg, startled the business section of the city, by turning a gorilla loose on the streets on December 2 and 3. But it proved to be only a man in the guise of the hairy brute, carrying a placard announcing he would be "caught" by two detectives the following week in the Colonial, where the film play, "The Gorilla," was booked for a six-day run.

FRED MEYER, manager of the Alhambra Theatre in Milwaukee, got all the leading department stores to make a silk stocking drive while "Silk Stockings" was running at his theatre. Each store devoted a large window entirely and exclusively to large Laura La Plante cut outs and stills surrounded by artistic silk stocking displays.

THE Strand Theatre, York, Pa., is materially increasing its sale of tickets during the Christmas holiday season by offering books of six tickets for $2, making a material reduction in the price of tickets if bought individually. The special holiday offer is extensively advertised in the newspapers.

WORD-OF-MOUTH advertising has been found profitable by the Jayhawk theatre, Topeka, Kas. Each week midnight previews of future pictures to be shown at the house are shown to a limited number of patrons. About one month later the picture receives a regular showing and the results of verbal advertising prove a surprise to even the management, it is said.

MANAGER GEORGE OLIVE of the Columbus theatre, 58th St., and 8th Ave., New York, attracted attention to his presentation of "Seventh Heaven" by means of a street worker dressed in the uniform of a French soldier. He carried a rifle with bayonet fixed and marched up and down in front of the theatre. At times he attracted such crowds that Olive was forced to call him in off the street. Which is just another illustration that the simple stunt often registers as sensationally as the biggest, even in the big cities.

Hyman Stage Shows for Earle And Stanley Theatres

EWARD L. HYMAN, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, will produce stage presentations for the Earle theatre in Washington, D. C., and the Stanley in Baltimore, both Stanley-Crandall theatres. Hyman will continue his duties as managing director of the Brooklyn Strand, and the stage numbers he produces there will supply the material for the acts he produces for the two Crandall houses.

This new policy, under which presentations will replace vaudeville at the Earle theatre, will be introduced at that house on December 24, when the first of the Hyman shows will be presented in Washington. The numbers will then be routed as a unit to the Stanley in Baltimore.

It is planned to move the twenty-five piece orchestra from the Metropolitan in Washington to the Earle Theatre. First-run pictures will also be shown in conjunction with this orchestra and with the stage presentations.

The Washington and Baltimore shows will be very similar to the ones in Brooklyn insofar as routine goes. Hyman plans to make up a performance of from six to eight diversified incidents, some of these being taken from Brooklyn intact, while some will be made up especially for the two outside theatres.

The first program for the Earle in Washington, starting Dec. 24, will be made up as follows: the overture played by the Earle Orchestra, with David Breeskin conductor, will be Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" and the Earle Ballett Corps will assist for a flashing finish. The lighting effects will be devised by Hyman as per his Brooklyn custom.

The second incident will be Caesar Nesi, tenor and clarinetist, who will step out from the orchestra to sing Toselli's "Serenade" and the Italian folk song, "Al Frangesa."

Incident three will be on the screen "Franz Schubert," one of the Fitzpatrick Music Master Series.

This will be followed by a ballet presentation, "Meditation" from "Thais," in full stage, with Sascha Kindler, concert master, playing the "Meditation" as a violin solo, standing beside his chair in the orchestra. Incident five will be the Earle Topical Review, and the final stage incident preceding the picture will be "The Jazz Carnival, with several star artists including Vale and Stewart, Walter Smith, baritone; Rostivo, accordionist and whistler;" Caesar Nesi, tenor, and the Serova Dancing Girls.

The choreography of these numbers will be done by Mme. Serova, as has been her custom in Brooklyn, while the stage setting will be done by Thomas Farrar, the Art Director for the Brooklyn house.

College Nights Feature of Show at Hippodrome

A series of college nights, at which the leading colleges in New York City were honored, proved effective as an exploitation aid for the run of "The College Hero" at the New York Hippodrome. This special exploitation was arranged by the publicity department of Columbia Pictures, distributors of the picture.

The colleges sending representatives were Fordham, Columbia, N. Y. U., and City College. The college glee clubs, bands and cheer leaders appeared on the stage as a prologue to the picture presentation.

More Elaborate Programs Offered by Roxy

Roxy is instituting a more elaborate program policy with the current bill at his big playhouse in New York this week. With Tiffany's "Wild Geese" as the screen feature, there is a surrounding program providing a greater number of units than heretofore, and announcement has been made that this policy will be standard for the future.

The current bill offers an overture by the Roxy orchestra. This is followed by a short film titled "The Twenty-Four Dollar Island," produced by Robert Flaherty and released by Pathe. This is projected from the backstage projector while a presentation of New York's passing show with ballet, chorus and the Roxy ensemble occupy the stage.

A special musical setting has been arranged by Werner Janssen. A pictorial presentation of Strauss' "Blue Danube Waltz" with chorus and ballet is another feature. Other divertissements include "A Hat Box," with Maria Gambarelli; "The Carnival of Venice" sung by Beatrice Belkin, "The Pearl Fishers" duet by Douglas Stanbury and Harold Van Duzee and "The Italian Street Song" of Herbert presented by Jeanne Mignolet and the ensemble, Russell E. Markert's Sixteen American Rockets again in one of their dances; Fox Movietone Newsreel, and a scenic number introducing the feature film.

Chicago Exhibitors Aiding Xmas Basket Fund

The Exhibitors Association of Chicago is co-operating with Building Commissioner Chris Paschen to assure the success of the big midnight show which the commissioner is staging at the Chicago on December 17th, the proceeds of which will swell the Christmas Basket Fund. Mr. Paschen is taking the place of the late Paddy Carr as Santa Claus to hundreds of destitute children in Chicago.

New Year's Eve Midnight Shows Scheduled

New Year's Eve midnight shows are being planned for Great States Theatres in eleven cities in which this company operates. Preparations are also under way for Christmas parties in these cities, which will be held the day before Christmas for the kiddies.

Sparkling Devices on Ushers' Uniforms

RADIUM to "high light" the usherettes.

That's the new wrinkle that has been adopted at the Mission Court theater at Fullerton, Calif., by managing director, Harry Lee Wilber.

The winter uniforms of the usherettes include a black velvet jacket with brass buttons and brass belt. Mr. Wilber had the initial "M" cut out from thinnest aluminum and had the same painted with highest grade radium paint.

In the lobby, at the head of the aisles, where the girls stand at attention, the letters show up splendidly, while they glow with a superb green as the girls walk up and down the darkened aisles.

Keen Interest in Contest for Lloyd Prize Indicated

INDICATIONS are that the $1000 cash prize money for the best exploitation ideas submitted by exhibitors for campaigning Harold Lloyd's next Paramount picture, "Speedy," and offered by the star, has stimulated keen interest among showmen. The Lloyd exploitation contest differs considerably from other competitions of this nature in that the prizes are for ideas submitted in advance of the picture's release. It will also have the effect of building up a campaign based upon the ideas and knowledge of the theatre men themselves.

There are no rules to be followed in presenting suggested campaigns. All that is necessary is that the contestant enumerate the methods he would use in selling the picture to the public along the line of lobby displays, street stunts, local and national tie-ups, newspaper advertising and publicity copy and contests to be inaugurated by the theatres which will book "Speedy."

All that is required are ideas, not lengthy descriptions or theses on advertising, publicity or exploitation. The contestant is asked that ideas be submitted in as few words as possible in order that the judges will not be forced to read hundreds of lengthy manuscripts in which the ideas are buried in superfluous verbiage.

As previously announced in the trade papers there will be 14 prizes awarded totaling $1,000. These cash awards will be split up as follows: First prize, $200.00; second prize, $150.00; third prize, $100.00 and the next eleven best suggested campaigns will entitle the entrants to the sum of $50.00 each.

Contestants are cautioned to lose no time in setting down ideas for the proposed campaign as the contest closes December 26 and it is hoped that the winners can be named soon after the first of the year.

It is well to remember in planning campaigns that nothing but practical, inexpensive ideas will be considered, as it is intended that both the 500-seat houses as well as the theatre seating ten times that many people will sell the picture to its patrons by the methods suggested in the winning campaign.

Topsy and Eva Complete N. Y. Tour for "Uncle Tom"

THE return to Los Angeles last Sunday of Virginia Grey and Mena Ray, respectively the "Eva" and "Topsy" of Universal's screen version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" brought to a close a strenuous two-weeks' exploitation campaign for the Broadway presentation of the picture at the Central theatre, New York.

The personal appearance tour in New York of these two screen players developed into one of the most active campaigns of its kind attempted in connection with a picture engagement. Concentrated efforts along the line of interesting school children in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the significant part it played in the Civil War were the highlights of the program carried out by the two diminutive stars.

The campaign was directed and executed by Warren W. Lewis, assistant to Wayne Pierson, roadshow manager for the film. Lewis obtained the co-operation of school authorities and thus was enabled to appear with his two stars at the morning assemblies of several schools throughout the Manhattan district. The Topsy and Eva of the picture were introduced following a short talk dealing with the history of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," its author, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and anecdotes connected with its influence in crystalizing public opinion on the slavery question. These appearances before the school children in the assembly halls of the Public Schools reacted most successfully to motion pictures generally as well as stimulating interest in the showing at the Central theatre. The school principals thanked the Universal representative and expressed their gratification over the entertaining and impressive manner in which an important historical event was portrayed by means of the introductory talk.

Mr. Lewis and his two charges appeared at two school assemblies each morning, thus reaching a large number of children with their information regarding "Uncle Tom's Cabin." After the two stars performed for the children they passed through the assemblage and distributed autographed photos of themselves.

In addition to their appearances at the schools, Topsy and Eva were daily attractions at the toy department of Stern's department store. The store advertised this attraction in the daily newspaper displays. There were also several radio "appearances" from broadcasting stations in the Metropolitan district. On the last day of their stay in New York, Eva and Topsy appeared before a large representation of youngsters who are members of the Brooklyn Eagle's Kiddies' Club. This event took place in the auditorium of the Eagle, and was attended by several hundred youngsters. Added to these duties, there were daily appearances at the Central theatre, where they were introduced from the stage preceding the presentations of the film.

Mr. Lewis opened his publicity campaign for the personal appearance tour with their reception at the Grand Central Station by the Station Master, with whom they were photographed.

Rufus LeMaire to Stage Two Shows for Capitol

Rufus LeMaire, producer of the recent "LeMaire's Affairs," has been signed to produce two special stage presentations for the Capitol theatre in New York.

LeMaire's first Capitol production, which will be offered some time during January, will be a revue to be titled "LeMaire's Minstrels." This number is now in produc-

Key City Reports

New York City

EVEN with good weather prevailing and a few extra thousands of folks swarming through the street to take a peep at the new Ford car, last week, failed to register anything more than a mediocre showing for Broadway houses when receipts were counted up at the close of Dec. 2. Whether the Ford car helped or hurt last Friday is hard to state. The dailies estimated a million sightseers for this attraction throughout the Metropolitan district. Xmas shopping evidently was the big opposition although some of the houses turned in a very fair week.

The Paramount helped things along a bit with "Anniversary Week" and did a nice trade with 'Spotlight' (Par.) and the accompanying Publix show. Another good attraction was 'Love' (M-G-M) at the Embassy. Gilbert and Garbo are strong draws in this town. The Capitol had 'The Thirteenth Hour' (M-G-M), a Lionel Barrymore picture, and played to only fair business, while the Roxy also felt the slump with "The Wizard" (Fox) although the latter picture started off well on the previous week-end. A report has circulated around the trade that there is to be some cutting done on the added attractions at both these theatres but it is not in evidence in either at present. The Roxy, if anything, is elaborating on everything but the length of time given the feature picture. The Strand did nothing to shout about with "The Wreck of the Hesperus" (Pathe-DeMille). Alois Reiser will take up the baton which Nat Shilkret will drop at the end of the current week at this house.

'Silk Stockings" (U) wasn't strong enough fare to keep up the Colony's head and neither was "Sunrise" (Fox) at the Times Square. The latter is just biding its time, probably on account of the lease. Other higher priced shows, 'Wings" (Par.), 'The Jazz Singer" (W. B.) and "Douglas Fairbanks as the Gaucho" (U. A.), are still accounting for excellent business. As previously stated, "Chicago" will follow "The King of Kings" at the Gaiety the latter part of this month. "Helen of Troy" will replace "The Patent Leather Kid" at the Globe this week. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) continues at the Central at a fair pace.

At the U. A.-sister houses, the Rivoli and Rialto, "Sorrell and Son" at the former is still doing an excellent business and there were no tears shed at the trade gathered in by the latter with 'The Rough Riders" (Par.)

Neighborhood theatres also experienced a drop in trade on account of the Xmas shopping season.

Chicago

SATURDAY and Sunday business once again proved a life saver for the majority of Chicago theatres, business during the week being far from satisfactory.

The Chicago Theatre had an average week with "Man, Woman and Sin" as its screen feature and Spitalny's "Herbertiana" and Jules Buffano's stage orchestra rounding out the bill. "Ben Hur" continued to bring fair business to McVickers and the Roosevelt had another good week with "Underworld." Other hold overs included "Seventh Heaven" at the Monroe, which is still going strong and the road show "Wings" at the Erlanger, which again enjoyed good attendance. "Ginsberg the Great" and Vitaphone were the Orpheum's attractions and accounted for average business. The Oriental had a big week with the popular Sophie Tucker as its stage headliner and "The Rose of the Golden West" on the screen. "The Jazz Singer" opened its road show at the Garrick and got away to good business, newspaper criticism being particularly favorable.

The Avalon offered "The Garden of Allah" as its screen attraction and Buddy Fisher and his band held the stage, normal business being done. "The Girl from Chicago" was the Ciptol's screen offering, Fisk O'Hara and Vitaphone affording good entertainment which drew well. Fair business was done at the Tivoli with "American Beauty" as its screen attraction and a lively stage show.

On the northside the Uptown featured "The Garden of Allah," with Benny Kreuger and his band heading the stage show, the bill accounting for average attendance. The Granada offered a bill including "Very Confidential" on the screen, Benny Neroff and his band and Vitaphone and recorded a satisfactory box office statement for the week. The Marbro offered the same feature with Charles Kaley's band and other features on the stage, business being fair.

Kansas City

A TEMPERATURE far below freezing and a good lineup of pictures were productive of a good week's business at virtually all first run theatres of Kansas City this week.

At Loew's Midland "The Thirteenth Hour" played to good crowds all week, the matinee business being stronger than usual, which might have been due to Christmas shopping crowds. At the Newman "The Big Parade," in a return engagement, held up well for a second week's showing. "Seventh Heaven" at the Pantages did a much bigger business that any previous picture in several weeks. "Man Crazy" at the Mainstreet was slightly above normal also.

At the Royal, "Nevada" drew good crowds, which were better than previous pictures have drawn recently, but still below the standard of former Royal crowds prior to the opening of Loew's Midland, which greatly reduced the Royal's attendance. Clara Bow in "My Lady of Whims" played a second week at the Liberty to good crowds, while "The Tigress" at the Capitol also drew well.

Boston

TREMONT TEMPLE'S return to the motion picture house ranks was inaugurated last week with the showing of "The Lost Battalion," which comes for an indefinite stay. Coincident with the showing of the film is the personal appearance of Private Kotoshinsky, the hero of the battalion. The film is drawing such large audiences that the original plan of two shows daily has been changed to one of continuous performances from 1.30 to 10.30 daily.

Returns from practically all of the box offices of the picture theatres this week have been highly satisfactory. The large attendances of the previous week have been maintained everywhere.

"Two Arabian Knights," has been the big picture of the week. Boston likes feature comedy and after a long stretch of dramas and spectacular films as well as numerous Westerns, Loew's State showing of a feature comedy has been welcomed. "Two Arabian Knights" has grossed better than any film for months. "Get Your Man" is the Metropolitan's contribution and is also being welcomed as a feature comedy, playing to the largest audiences of the season. "Steppin' High" is the accompanying presentation.

Although "A Gentleman from Paris" first made its appearance in Boston at the Metropolitan months ago, and has since been making the rounds, it continues to head the down-town bill of one theatre playing to good business. This is at the Fenway Theatre. "Honeymoon Hate" is drawing good crowds to the Keith-Albee Boston all week.

"Seventh Heaven" is the feature at Loew's Orpheum, drawing unusually well for this season.

"One Round Hogan" and "Ladies Must Dress" are the double features at the twin houses, Modern and Beacon, with box office returns well above the average.

Others of the week's successful films are "Figures Don't Lie" at the Washington Street Olympia, "The College Hero," which has been shown several times in Boston in recent weeks, and "The Crystal Cup" at the Lancaster; "The Fighting Eagle" and "Lightning" at the Exeter with "The Fighting Eagle" and "Clancy's Kosher Wedding" at the University.

Next week five Boston down-town theatres will show simultaneously Beery and Hatton's "Now We're In the Air." They are the Scollay Square and Washington Street Olympia, Capitol, Central Square and Fenway Theatres.

Atlanta

THREE days of continuous rain brought a decided slump in Atlanta theatre box offices last week.

To the Howard goes the banner, borne by Clara Bow in "Get Your Man." Also, an unusually good stage unit added a bit of drawing power. Down the street the Metropolitan also played Clara Bow in "My Lady of Whims," but got only a fair house. Conrad Veidt brought a good week, all things considered, for the Capitol in "A Man's Past." Loew's Grand with 'In Old Kentucky," had fair houses throughout the week.

Keith's Georgia claims a little over the average week playing "The Harvester," screen adaptation of Gene Stratton-Porter's novel. "The Last Waltz" and "The Main Event" failed to draw a very good house for the Rialto. The Tudor divided an average week between "Old Code," "Breed of Courage," and "Wild Horse Canyon." Four second runs and "One Increasing Purpose," first showing, proved popular at the New Alamo.

Philadelphia

jfffl PRING FEVER," starring William jfffl Haines, had a big week at the Stanley Theatre. Much credit, however, is due to the added attraction, Waring's Pennsylvanians, which has always been a big drawing card in Philadelphia.

The Stanton swerved a bit from its usual policy in introducing "Underworld," which during its first week played to very satisfactory business.

The Karlton, with "Body and Soul," featuring Aileen Pringle, Norman Kerry and Lionel Barrymore, had a fairly good week.

"Wings," which opened at the Aldine on December 3rd, has been playing to capacity business. The picture was given a splendid send off in the newspapers and will probably have an extended run.

"The Last Waltz" at the Arcadia had very mediocre patronage. This type of picture does not seem to do well in this spot.

The Fox Theatre offered a special anniversary program with the Fox picture "Ladies Must Dress" as the cinema feature.

Splendid business was reported. Topping the surrounding bill was the "Feast of Lanterns," a colorful Chinese fantasy with the Honorable Wu and an entire Chinese cast. Blossom Seeley and Company and Fred Vail and Harry Stewart also appeared on the program.

"The Thirtenth Hour" at the Victoria failed to draw the volume of business expected on account of the extra downtown shopping crowds.

The Globe ran along nicely with "The Big Parade," the first time this picture has been shown at Market Street price.

After a lay off of a week after its run at the Stanley, "The Drop Kick," went into the Palace and did fairly well.

The Fox Locust continues to do a turn away business with Al Jolson in the "Jazz Singer" on the Vitaphone.

St. Louis

IT probably would be very good news to say that the motion picture houses of St. Louis played to record-breaking business this week, but believing that the truth should be reasonably respected, even when talking of theatre attendance, it must be admitted that business could have been decidedly better right down the line from the big first run picture palaces to the very smallest of the neighborhood shows. Business has been off for many weeks. It has only been exceptionally outstanding offerings such as Sousa and his Band that have created any real stir.

At the Missouri Theatre Esther Ralston and Richard Arlen in "Figures Don't Lie" was the screen attraction, while Brooke Johns shook up his stage show and injected some novelties in an endeavor to tone up the box offices. Somehow, Brooke has not been clicking as well as he did prior to his vacation. It does appear that Skouras Brothers split the drawing power of Johns' type of show by importing Ed Lowry to fill a similar role at the Ambassador. Prior to the coming of Lowry, Johns was the real big noise of the local amusement world and he was growing bigger week by week. And then he went on a vacation and Lowry came. Which probably is all right, since, we understand, Skouras Brothers and Famous Players are 50-50 on the Ambassador and the Missouri. The Ambassador showed Clara Bow in "Get Your Man."

The St. Louis Theatre, in conjunction with some Orpheum Circuit vaudeville numbers, showed on its screen Olive Borden and Lawrence Gray in "Pajamas." The Orpheum's screen attraction was "By Whose Hand?", a mystery drama. Loew's State showed William Boyd and Louis Wolheim with Mary Astor in "Two Arabian Knights."

Minneapolis

THE box office sensation of last week in Minneapolis was "Underworld," which came into the Garrick and did a smashing good business. This picture received fine newspaper reviews, and the crowds were so great that it was decided to hold the film over for a second week. At Pantages, Mary Pickford's "My Best Girl" held over for its second week, and continued to be a very big drawing card. Interest in this picture had been stirred up by the "Best Girl" campaign which had been conducted by The Minneapolis Tribune. The State enjoyed a nice week's business with Adolphe Menjou in "A Gentleman of Paris," and this picture was supplemented in fine style by a big stage show in which Nat Nazarro, Jr., and Harry Rose were starred. The Strand did about the average business with Mary Astor and Gilbert Roland in "Rose of the Golden West." Monte Blue in "The Black Diamond Express" was the Hennepin-Orpheum film feature, while the Seventh Street showed "In a Moment of Temptation," the picturization of Laura Jean Libby's love story. "The Way of All Flesh," which showed originally at the Garrick, moved into the Grand and was rewarded by another week of good business. Marie Prevost in "Man Bait" did a normal business at the Astor. Business remains good at the outlying houses. Last week the attractions at the Lagoon, Lyndale, Rialto and Loring included "Chang," "The Way of All Flesh," "Taxi, Taxi," and "The Road to Romance."

The movies had their chief competition from "The Vagabond King," which did a land-office business at the Metropolitan. The weather was bitterly cold, the mercury dropping to 12 below on December 2, a 34 year record for that date.

Baltimore

WITH the exception of Whitehurst's New Theatre, with "Seventh Heaven," doing a standing room only business every day and night during its second week there, business was generally under normal in Baltimore during the week beginning November 28. The Fox picture was held for a third week really by demand, a rare thing for the Monumental City.

"Out All Night," starring Reginald Denny, proved a good drawing card at Keith's Hippodrome with five acts of family time vaudeville, but at Whitehurst's Garden "The Irresistible Lover," featuring Norman Kerry and Lois Moran on the same bill with five acts of vaudeville, proved only a poor business getter. This was the last week of the operation of the Garden under the Whitehursts and many persons who had saved passes throughout the year used them.

"The City Gone Wild," with Thomas Meighan featured, went over only fair at Loew's Century with Wesley Eddy and other entertainers in a big stage act. At Loew's Valencia "The Garden of Allah," featuring Alice Terry, proved only a fair drawing card. The production, which was artistically and intelligently done, seemed to be way over the heads of the people.

At the 4,000 seat Stanley, "The American Beauty," with Billie Dove, her undies, and Lloyd Hughes featured and Jerry and her baby grands on the same bill, only drew fair houses.

Business was bad all week at the Rivoli, where "Tell It to Sweeney" was the feature photoplay with the stage act including Bernard and Gould, singers, and Lucille Middleton, dancer. Some of the loss of business at the Rivoli might be attributed to the fact that that house did not have advertising in one newspaper for two whole weeks.

Warner's Metropolitan had poor houses all during the week except Saturday on "One Round Hogan," with Monte Blue featured and Vitaphone presentations. While men seemed to like the picture, women did not, and it is reported that some patrons stand in the lobby until the Vitaphone presentations are over before entering the playhouse for the movies.

At Ford's Theatre, Cecil B. De Mille's "The King of Kings" began its engagement but only did a fair business with prices ranging at that legitimate house from 50 cents to $1.50 top.

Des Moines

AT the Des Moines "Dress Parade" did not do an unusual business although the picture was very well liked. It was not completely exploited. At the Capitol, "Man, Woman and Sin," while accorded enthusiastic criticisms, was not very well attended. The stage show lacked a band master there, which probably accounted for [illegible] in attendance. At the Strand "In Old Kentucky" was judged a splendid picture and did well, while "Becky," did just as well for the last half of the week.

Cleveland

THIS was an off week at all of the local theatres. In the first place it was the reaction following the previous big holiday week. In the second place, legitimate theatre competition was very strong. In the third place, there were no very alluring first run pictures on exhibition. However, regardless of the value of the pictures, all houses [illegible] stated that their business was below normal.

"My Best Girl" in its second week at the Stillman did fairly well. The Allen did well by comparison with "Now We're in the Air," [illegible] drama was not so well liked as its predecessors. "Figures Don't Lie," conventional and amusing tale, got by at Keith's Palace, just reaching the average mark. Business was only fair at the State where "In Old Kentucky," a new version of an old melodrama, exhibited all the thrills that go to make up a play to appeal to those who like their entertainment exciting. "The Girl from Chicago," also chalked up a fair average at the Cameo. "Out All Night," a typical Reginald Denny picture, was only moderately successful at Reade's Hippodrome. Keith's East 105th St. had a slim week with "No Place to Go," light comedy of well worn situations, which was redeemed by a good cast. The Park did better than average according to report, with the first run neighborhood engagement of "Underworld," and "The Fair Co-Ed" at the Circle didn't fare any better than its sister productions all over town. The Little Theatre of the Movies offered a revival of "Faust," featuring Emil Jannings. The slump that struck all of the theatres affected this theatre in like fashion.

Ottawa

EXHIBITORS of Ottawa, Ontario, had to put up with a great deal during the week of November 28. The Horse Show at the Coliseum drew extensive crowds; there were professional hockey matches and the church and concert season were in full swing, with many functions hinging around St. Andrew's Day, November 30. On top of the counter-attractions, the current pictures proved to be what you might call "just fair."

Those who went to the Regent Theatre to see "When a Man Loves," starring John Barrymore and Dolores Costello, expected to see a second edition of "Don Juan"—and they did. It thrilled the amorously inclined and those who desired to relieve their own love, of whom there were plenty to fill the theatre during the week.

By way of a sudden change, Manager J. M. Franklin presented a British film feature. "Second-to-None," all about the navy. The principals, both male and female, would hardly carry off beauty prizes, but the melodramatic action was stirring to the big crowds.

"Breakfast at Sunrise," at the Centre Theatre, was another of those Constance Talmadge pictures that please all but the serious-minded and, incidentally, cause the proprietor to smile in the box-office way. The general comment was that "Breakfast at Sunrise" was substantially good.

Another John Gilbert re-issue, "St. Elmo," played the Imperial Theatre and it registered like a first-run attraction. Almost anything with John Gilbert's name attached to it is a sure-fire feature.

"Convoy" at the Rex Theatre, neighborhood house, brought in the people after they had seen the posters to find out what it was all about. "The Valley of Hell" packed the Fern Theatre as usual, although the title worked against its popularity in the Fern neighborhood. Patrons also trooped into the Columbia Theatre to see "Subway Sadie."

San Francisco

THANKSGIVING WEEK, proved to be a good one in San Francisco. For two days, Thursday and Friday, the schools were [illegible] many instances, to visit both the downtown [illegible]

"The King of Kings," shown at the Columbia theatre, twice daily at advanced prices, did fairly well, but not as anticipated, in spite of the fact that it was greatly advertised. Some state the reason for this was because the local Rabbis spoke against it, some ministers upholding them. Some, however, claim this even helped the picture.

"The Gorilla" drew good audiences to the California theatre and "Now We're in the Air," shown at the St. Francis theatre, also proved popular—in fact considered one of the best drawing cards the St. Francis has shown for some time. "Madame Pompadour," at the Imperial theatre, did a good business.

"Man, Woman and Sin," at the Loew's Warfield theatre, did very well and the band and smart Specialty Revue, shown on the stage, enthused all. "Jesse James" shown at the Granada theatre, attracted many.

"The Wise Wife" together with six high class acts of vaudeville, drew big crowds to the Golden Gate theatre and the Union Square theatre reported exceptional business last week showing "The Kick Off" and "Always Late" on the screen together with vaudeville. The Scotland Yard pictures, together with others, shown in series by Frank Lacey at the Cameo theatre, have proven very attractive and many make it a point to see them each week.

Oklahoma City

"MAN, WOMAN AND SIN" that played at the Criterion all week didn't bring in the business it should have. The trouble being, it seemed to this reviewer, that the sensational title was not suitable to the picture, which was played with fine restraint. The audience that would be attracted by the title were disappointed in the picture—which, in our opinion, was an excellent production.

"The Texas Steer" did a pretty good business at the Empress this week. Will Rogers, of course, was the drawing card.

"Road to Romance" gave color to the first of the week program at the Capital Theatre and did a very nice business. "Angel of Broadway" finished the week. A very well done picture and well attended.

The Liberty went back to their old policy of changing pictures in midweek, after five or six weeks of one-picture-a-week programs. "The Irresistible Lover" didn't prove so irresistible as a picture. There were those who liked it. It played the first four days. "Wild Beauty" was a good horse picture; it played the last three days. Business was good.

Milwaukee

FOR some unaccountable reason business in Milwaukee theatres was just a bit slack this week. Business was brisk very early in the week but gradually fell off and left the sum total of the week's receipts somewhat short of what was expected. Weather was fair and mild for the first half of the week, changing very suddenly into clear and very cold weather.

"Camille" drew many film fans to the Wisconsin. The picture was very well received although the stage presentation was not as good as it has been in the past few weeks. "Dress Parade" was offered at the Palace-Orpheum where it could well be considered a headliner on the bill. St. John's Military Academy Cadets' orchestra in uniform much like the cadets in the picture, played in front of the theater and in the lobby immediately before every evening performance, and closed the picture in a very effective manner. "A Man's Past," at the Alhambra, did not create much of a stir and was but fairly well attended. "Jesse James" was a popular picture, playing at the Strand, and was quite well attended. "Ben Hur" at the Merrill, the second time in Milwaukee, the first time at "popular prices," was a fair drawing card. The Garden offered "My Best Girl," held over from a short run the week previous. The picture drew satisfactory houses.

Business in the neighborhood houses was quite a good deal better this week than it was in the downtown theaters. "Loves of Carmen," brought good business to the Oriental, Uptown and Tower. "What Price Glory," about which the local censors are becoming disturbed, was featured at the Garfield and did good business. "The Crystal Cup," did fairly well at the Milwaukee. "The Cat and the Canary" is said to have broken house records at the Venetian.

Salt Lake City

THE weather in and about Salt Lake City has been considerably cooler during the past week and theatre business has been exceptionally heavy.

Mary Pickford's "My Best Girl," has shattered all previous records made at the new Capitol Theatre here, which is one of the Louis Marcus Enterprises and is managed by George E. Carpenter. In addition to this picture production, a stage offering was shown, billed as "Jade," a Fanchon and Marco act. "In Old Kentucky" proved to be a very good drawing card at the Pantages, although many expected the picture to resemble the old time play by the same name. This picture was presented in connection with the regular vaudeville bill and a large crowd was in attendance during the entire week's run. Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in "Now We're in the Air" also did a tremendous business at the Paramount Empress, with the management scarcely able to accommodate the crowds. The Victory Theatre had capacity houses during the week, with "The Woman on Trial," starring Pola Negri.

Dolores Costello and William Collier, Jr., in "The College Widow" is reported to have gone over very well and it is stated that Dolores Costello is becoming an exceptionally attractive drawing card in the Salt Lake territory.

Rod La Rocque and Mildred Harris in "The Cruise of the Jasper B" filled the Gem Theatre to overflowing.

The second run theatres also did a splendid business this week. The Rialto Theatre offered successfully as a second run Ramon Novarro in "The Road to Romance."

Albany

WEATHER was a big factor in determining last week's business at the motion picture theatres of Albany, Troy and Schenectady. It rained on Monday night and on Friday night there was two inches of slush on the streets, a combination that cost the theatres hundreds of dollars in the aggregate. The remainder of the week might be termed satisfactory from the box office standpoint.

The Leland in Albany, with "Mockery," ran bigger than "Gorilla" the week previous. Some idea of the business being done by this theatre in particular so far this winter can be gained by the fact that a comparison between the receipts of "Mockery" one day last week, with a like date a year ago, showed a gain of $103. At the Clinton Square theatre, 'Alias The Lone Wolf," featuring Bert Lytell, a former Albany matinee idol, ran extremely heavy, despite rain and snow and came within an ace of hitting the record week for the fall and early winter. The Mark Ritz reported only a fair business with "Ginsburg, the Great," which had previously flopped in Troy.

Although the Mark Strand in Albany admitted that there was nothing to brag about in connection with the week's run of "A Texas Steer," the picture held up well throughout the week despite unfavorable weather conditions. In fact, on Tuesday night, there was a line waiting for the second show. The worst disappointment of the week, so far as Albany was concerned, was "The Big Parade," shown at Harmanus-Bleeker Hall, at a 25 cent admission and which failed to draw the expected crowds. It was figured out later on that the picture had already been seen by approximately 50,000 residents of Albany. Identically the same thing occurred to the picture at the Griswold, in Troy, last week, except that the picture was taken off on Thursday night and replaced by double features. Just what influence this will have toward the advertised week's run of "Ben Hur" at these same two theatres, can only be surmised.

At the Lincoln in Troy, 'The Fair Co-Ed" ran to good business for four days and then showed a slump. The Troy theatre ran to good business on Saturday and Sunday with "Man, Woman and Sin," and to but fair business the remaining two days. It was succeeded by 'The Garden of Allah," which ran to above average business the remainder of the week. At Proctor's Fourth Street House in Troy, 'Metropolis" contributed its full share to the box office. At the State in Schenectady, "Man, Woman and Sin," did only normal, while "Man Crazy" at the Strand, failed to pull. "Annie Laurie" at Proctor's created but little comment.

Central Penn.

THE French film version of "Les Miserables" made a distinctly favorable impression when it was shown in the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, a fact considered rather remarkable inasmuch as those in the cast were practically unknown in America. Moreover another commentary on the play's success in Harrisburg was the fact that it attracted a new class of patrons to the theatre, many of whom had never been seen there before. Notable among these were a large number of school teachers who, Manager Charles J. Jones, of the Colonial, believes, were reached through the great literary and historical value the Victor Hugo masterpiece has to educators generally. Yet patrons who saw the film declared it was far from being merely "educational." Viewed from the box office angle the French-made play brought more than satisfactory results.

"The Thirteenth Hour," starring Lionel Barrymore, had a big following at Loew's Regent throughout the week. Mystery plays always have a strong appeal to Harrisburg audiences.

Bebe Daniels played in "She's a Sheik" at the Victoria but the comedy proved only an indifferent success. The film attraction at the State was "Publicity Madness," with Edmund Lowe and Lois Moran, and was quite well received.

"Two Arabian Knights," with Mary Astor, produced lots of mirth at the Russell, on its second appearance in Harrisburg. Tom Taylor and his pals in a first run production of "Cyclone of the Range," provided thrills for the audiences at the Broad Street.

Tampa

NOTHING used this week seemed to develop into what you could call a "draw." The theatres all had a very satisfactory line-up; the weather was warm as summer, and the business was good all thru, but only a day or so went over the average receipts.

"Man, Woman and Sin," opened the week for the Tampa and it did nicely, as did "Out All Night," used the last half, but neither could pull 'em any better than the average Tampa business.

"The American Beauty" was featured the first four days at the Victory and it did fair. For the last half "Not for Publication" and the five act vaudeville bill, the second week of this "enlarged policy" packed 'em in much the same as the first week.

The Strand had three good ones. "The City Gone Wild" opened the week, and with the Meighan following here, did better than average. "In Old Kentucky" also proved a good card and "The Beauty Shoppers" was well liked. The Franklin kept up to average with "Slaves of Beauty," "Hook and Ladder" and "Rangers of the North."

Wolf Fangs

Melodramatic Tale of Sheep Country

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is an intensely melodramatic but somewhat implausible tale of the sheep country, revealing Thunder, the dog-star as the hero. Of itself the story is fair enough but it is glaringly overdrawn in spots to make of a dog hero too heroic a figure.

There seems little reason why Bill Garside should be such an ornery wretch, nor why his neice, Ellen should be subjected to such humiliation and torture, unless it be to incite one to wait with glee for that inevitable moment when Garside must fall the mangled prey of the hungry pack.

There are some exceptional shots of Thunder and for the most part the story is really gripping. It is a thrilling, if not elevating sequence, when Thunder, released from the trap by the girl, is forced to battle his rival for supremacy of the pack with the life of the girl also at stake. These two wild beasts are seen ferociously attacking each other to all intents and purposes in a battle to the death. In fact it is a bit too realistic when the pack closes in on the victim, as it is alleged is inevitable in these combats.

There are other scenes in the picture just as thrilling as this one and just as realistic. There is also a pretty romance, or as pretty as one may be in these surroundings.

Drawing Power: Should go well where they like tense melodrama. Exploitation Angles: The battle to the death for leadership of the pack. You can bill it as a real thriller with a wonderful dog-star.

Theme: Puppy turned wild because of the brutality of the sheepherder gains his leadership of the pack and returns in time to save the girl who had befriended him from the further brutality of her uncle.

Distributed by Fox. Released November 27, 1927. Length, 5,331 feet. Cast: Thunder, Caryl Lincoln, Charles Morton, Frank Rice, James Gordon. Directed by Lew Seiler. Story by Seton I. Miller and Elizabeth Pickett. Scenario by Seton I. Miller.

Very Confidential

Story Thin But Mood is Bright

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS impression of the rubber-stamp tale of a shop girl who goes out to get her society man is brightly tinted and pleasing to the eye. It strives to please, and soon does so—not "in spite of" but rather "because of" its adherence to a formula which has been worked over and refined and which has succeeded well, and often, in the past.

Madge Bellamy is pretty, she has opportunity to wear pretty clothes, and there are pleasing backgrounds for atmosphere as well as added visual appeal. After all, there's no reason why this sort of thing should not go on being perennially popular. Success is a tonic theme, and to a great number there is fuel for the hopes and aspirations of the many who dream of a future affluence through the magic of romance involving dashing young millionaires.

The story it tells is that one about a department store model who sets her cap for a prominent millionaire and who gets her man by posing as somebody quite up in the social scale though in reality she is at the fashionable winter resort for the sole and sordid purpose of selling smart sport clothing to the Debbies. Of course, she 'fesses up, after the chap falls in love with her, but he doesn't care about anything by that time and another social light "marries a former shop girl," thus writing his own headline for the newspapers.

Drawing Power: Should prove a fair attraction in all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Good opportunity for clothing store and automobile agency tie-ups. Bill as romantic comedy with a swagger society setting.

THEME: Romantic comedy dealing with adventures of clothes model masquerading as a celebrated sportswoman at a fashionable resort. She realizes her ambition to marry a dashing young millionaire.

Distributed by Fox. Released, November 6, 1927. Length, 5,620 feet. Cast: Madge Bellamy, Robert Allen, Patrick Cunning, Mary Duncan, Joseph Cawthorn, Marjorie Beebe, Isabelle Keith, Carl von Haartmann. Story by James K. McGuinness and Randall H. Faye. Scenario by Randall H. Faye. Director, James Tinling.

The Last Outlaw

An Average Western

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

GARY COOPER, Paramount's new Western star, has an average sort of Western vehicle in his latest. The star is fairly well known now, so perhaps with proper exploitation the picture may go over in good shape, but to us it cannot be classed with those of the other Westerners who rule their particular roost. Being the tale of a wanderer, who becomes sheriff of a town infested with gunmen and rustlers, the star has many opportunities to outwit his enemies, dazzle them with his gunplay and outgeneral them in most nearly every way. He carries on gallantly to save the ranch of pretty Betty Jewel, the heroine, who is being ruined by the greedy cow-stealers.

In the course of the plot, the girl, whose brother was brutally shot down by a member of the rustling gang, lays that crime at the door of the innocent sheriff. So there is that everlasting misunderstanding between them—the girl thinking him a despicable murderer and he trying to do his best for her. A kid friend of the hero (Little Billy Butts, who, by the way, is a good little actor) tells the girl of her error and everything is smoothed out to the satisfaction of all but the rustlers, the leaders of whom are crushed to death in a stampede.

Of a familiar stamp are some of the highlights of the production. Here you will find the hero rescuing the girl from a runaway horse, defeating the rustlers in various ways and other episodes which have been appearing constantly in the outdoor drama since its inception. Betty Jewel and the kid actor fulfill their roles nicely. Jack Luden takes the part of the girl's fiery brother. Flash, the hero's horse, does quite a bit of pantomime, too.

Drawing Power: Okay for the little houses catering to Western fans. Not so good for first and second runs. Exploitation Angles: Use cowboy regalia and cut outs of star and his horse. Stress action.

THEME: Western drama of young wanderer, who becomes sheriff of frontier town. He cleans out the crooked element and saves stock of young girl, whom he later wins.

Distributed by Paramount. Released, July, 1927. Length, 6,032 feet. The Cast: Gary Cooper, Betty Jewel, Jack Luden, Billy Butts, Herbert Prior and Jim Corey. Story by Richard Allen Gates. Director, Arthur Rosson.

Hook and Ladder No. 9

Should Satisfy Average Audiences

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

AN old fashioned thriller, this tale of the love of two firemen for a girl will probably best react upon the audiences congregating in the neighborhood and second and third run houses throughout the land. The old reliable fire alarm, the shooting flames and falling timbers are to be found in its climax, melodramatic and serial-like, and one that will rouse the enthusiasm of the movie-goer who wants to see all situations in the picture worked out according to the conventional plot pattern.

The story tells of the bitter hatred borne by one fireman for his former friend because the latter has won the attentions of the girl he, himself, desired. The two lovers are played by Dione Ellis and Cornelius Keefe, the former giving an average interpretation while the latter, a new comer, graces his role with a pleasing personality. Edward Hearn has the most difficult assignment of the three, as he has to take the part of the sulker, who loved the girl to distraction, bitterly hating the man who won her. Hearn looks like a grief-stricken chap, morose and sullen.

Fire purges all these little human frailties out of his system, however, for one night the tenement in which the girl makes her home is being rapidly consumed by flames and the firemen are called to quell the blaze. Hearn then realizes the situation—that his one and only love is in danger. He proves his devotion to her by working hand in hand with her husband, the two making superhuman efforts to save the girl and her baby. By means of a human chain they accomplish the rescue.

The fire scenes carry a punch and the rescue is a fairly done piece of work.

Drawing Power: Fair. Exploitation Angles: Use fire hoses and ladders to attract attention.

THEME: Melodrama of two firemen and a girl, who is won by one of them. The other fireman, still loving the girl, comes to hate her husband, but when she is in danger from the flames, he willingly works with his enemy to achieve her rescue.

Distributed by F B O. Released, November, 1927. Length, 5,240 feet. The Cast: Dione Ellis, Cornelius O'Keefe, Edward Hearn, Lucy Beaumont, Thomas L. Brower, Mary Gordon. Director, F. Harmon Weight.

The Racing Romeo

"Red" Grange Scores Again

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE "Galloping Ghost" of the gridiron has a dandy comedy number in this special from F B O. "Red" last year surprised a numerous coterie of fans and critics by giving an unlooked-for performance in "One Minute to Play." He is as natural as ever in this fast moving number of the roaring roads and the dirt tracks. Grange is at home in front of a camera. His easy grace and pleasant good natured features fit nicely into his latest opus, of which it should be said that it has more than its share of laughs, thrills and love interest. One is convinced that Grange could leave his football activities and get along very well in the silent drama. The only other athlete who has to date distinguished himself (as a movie actor) is Babe Ruth.

Every time "Red" entered the racing event in his home town he always came in last. His ambition to win this classic event seemed hopeless, when the champion racer comes to town with his movie troupe and enters the race so that he can defeat "Red," whom the village belle has promised to marry if he wins. The fact that he is racing against a champ serves to spur "Red" on to greater efforts, and for once the wand of victory seems ready for his grasp. These racing scenes take up a considerable part of the picture, but so well are they presented that they never tire nor grow monotonous. "Red" licks the sneering champ after a terrific struggle to maintain the lead. There is excitement and tension in abundance.

Jobyna Ralston as the petite heroine is good, while Walter Heirs and Trixie Frigenza are sometimes extremely comical.

"The Racing Romeo" ought to burn 'em up. Its director, Sam Wood, fashioned a fine production from the story by Byron Morgan.

Drawing Power: Good. Exploitation Angles: See the press book.

THEME: Racing drama of country youth who has to beat the world's champion auto racer to win girl, who has promised to marry him if successful.

Distributed by F B O. Produced by Sam Wood. Released, October, 1927. Length, 5,992 feet. The Cast: "Red" Grange, Jobyna Ralston, Walter Heirs, Trixie Friganza, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Warren Rogers, Ashton Dearholt, Jerry Zier. Director, Sam Wood.

The Angel of Broadway

Strikes a Serious Note

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A STRONG moral tone is dominant in this camera story of a chorus girl who rose to success with her gibes at religion. The featured role, portrayed by Leatrice Joy, is one taxing the talent of the star. It is not easy to impersonate successfully the twisted character of a carefree show girl who mocks religion and who comes to realize, bitterly, that she had done an evil thing. Miss Joy works with sincerity, is especially good in those moments when, haunted by her conscience, a spiritual revolt against her fickleness overcomes her. In these difficult moments of hysteria she is much more impressive than in her scenes as the double-crossing chorus girl.

The well known figure of the Salvation Army lassie plays an important part in the production. It is her garb and bonnet that the chorus girl dons to give a burlesque on things religious to a pleasure-seeking night club crowd. The chorus girl finds she has no spiritual strength to face the crisis when she learns that her manager is a hypocrite and that, by deceiving her sweetheart, she is sending him on the downward path also. So there is heartrending in the climax and the evil is sifted out of the story only after much weeping and spiritual struggling.

A very good bit of characterization is done by Elise Bartlett as the girl of the streets. Hers is a role all in one mood—and that of sombre despair.

The picture leans towards the moral preachment tone, but it has its comedy to leaven the pathos. Its climax is too weak, and the thread of spiritual regeneration looks a trifle frayed toward the end.

Drawing Power: Between fair and good. Exploitation Angles: The introduction of the Salvation Army into story. Emphasize cast and director. Night club scenes.

THEME: Drama of girl who imitates Salvation Army lassie in night club show, making her parody of religion a drawing card at her club. Young truck driver, who worships her, finds out her double dealing. After stirring climax, the girl realizes her folly and repents. She and the young man find happiness together.

Produced by De Mille Pictures. Distributed by Pathe. Released, September, 1927. Length, 6,555 feet. The Cast: Leatrice Joy, Victor Varconi, May Robson, Alice Lake, Elise Bartlett, Ivan Lebedeff, Jane Keckley and Clarence Burton. Director, Lois Weber.

A Harp in Hock

Schildkraut and Young Coghlan Shine

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

ASPERSIONS have often been cast upon hokum, one of the movie mainstays. Hokum, seen so often, has become commonplace. Often do critics cry against hokum, overlooking the fact that you cannot go very far without it. The masses do not seem to mind hokum, therefore movie producers display common sense when they inject large slices of this miscalled sentiment into their productions. "A Harp in Hock" has hokmu—the old sort of hokum, too. But it is presented in moderation and you can easily forget its presence because of the two figures in the picture's somewhat antiquated plot—those of the elder Schildkraut and young Coghlan.

Perhaps you could call theirs' a duet performance. Everything else in the picture is merely incidental to the affection which exists between these two. Briefly the plot concerns the adoption of a little Irish boy, an orphan, by an old Jewish pawnbroker and the threatened loss of the boy which faces the old man. The storming waters of discord are allowed for a time to interrupt the happiness of the old man and the lad; after [illegible], when the loss of the boy seemed imminent, all trouble is dispersed and life goes on for these two with serene quietude.

Rudolph Schildkraut as the pawnbroker, detested by his neighbors, gives the best portrayal. His is a characterization of a lonely man, whose love for a child becomes an overwhelming passion. Finely expressed, for so young a man, is the character of the Irish lad, played by young Coghlan. He is worth watching whether he is fighting or saying good-bye to Schildkraut. Bessie Love and Joseph Striker contribute the romantic element to the piece.

Drawing Power: [illegible] draw. Exploitation Angles: Mention "names" in cast and the type of story. [illegible] gilded balls.

THEME: Heart drama of old pawnbroker who adopts young boy. His neighbors, despising him, try to get the boy away from him. They succeed for a time, but after a while he is able to legally adopt the child. His neighbors come to realize their misinterpretation of his character.

Produced by Renaud Hoffman. Distributed by Pathe. Released, September, 1927. Length, 5,999 feet. The Cast: Rudolph Schildkraut, Junior Coghlan, Bessie Love, Joseph Striker, May Robson, Louis Natheaux, Elise Bartlett, Mrs. Chas. Mack, Adele Watson, Lillian Harmen, Clarence Burton, Bobby Mack. Director, Renaud Hoffman.

The Wise Wife

Phyllis Haver in First Stellar Vehicle

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A MARITAL comedy, somewhat spicy, is served up as the blonde Phyllis Haver's initial starring vehicle. This young lady, whose forte is a vampish role, has the dizzy part of a young wife who arouses her spouse's waning interest by flirting with another man. The title refers to her wiles and strategies employed against the other woman, Jacqueline Logan.

This type of entertainment will be especially enjoyed by married folk, we imagine, as there are satire and parodies on the intricacies of married life. But for other audiences it is just a bit over fair, unless they are of a sophisticated sort. Furthermore, Phyllis Haver can do much better; Miss Logan seems to have accomplished more with her role. Anyway, these two offer plenty of contrast. They are very catty in their maneuverings to get the innocent male, who really has little to do as the action rests between the two women.

The tale has oft been told before of a straying husband, fascinted by another woman, who is magnetized by his own wife fighting with subtle weapons to retain his affection. With a plot like this many interesting and comical situations can arise. It is a piquant mixture of male incredulity, feminine fickleness and impetuousity desiring what is beyond their reach.

As a vehicle for the talented Miss Haver, however, it does not click very well. Miss Logan comes very near to running away with the honors. Her interpretation of a little flirt is nicely done. E. Mason Hopper, the director, has kept the action spruced up, which is as it should be in a comedy of this type.

Drawing Power: Okay for first runs and other houses. As it is of a light nature do not promise too much. But as it boasts some well known names and was written by well known author it should do good business. Exploitation Angles: Press book has something to aid you here.

THEME: Marital drama of wife and another woman, who battle for the husband. The wife wins out after she has changed her mode of dress and aroused her husband's jealousy.

Produced by De Mille Pict. Distributed by Pathe. Released, October, 1927. Footage, 5,610 feet. The Cast: Phyllis Haver, [illegible] Striker, Fred Walton, Robert Bolder. Director, E. Mason Hopper. Story by Arthur [illegible]

Breakfast at Sunrise

Diverting and Fair Enough

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

QUITE in keeping with the previous light comedies that were decorated with Constance Talmadge's personality, her newest effort may be no great shakes as a masterpiece of celluloid fiction, but it does tell its slight story in a diverting manner. The title is intriguing—and the star has a way with her. And neither the plot nor the Talmadge lady get out of mood.

Mal St. Clair, always dependable with this kind of material (remember his "Grand Duchess and the Waiter"?) hasn't had much to work with—and if he goes slightly De Mille it is because he was forced to drug the eye to hide the defects of the story. Hence he uses plenty of decorative sets. The bedroom, in particular, is nearly spacious enough for a six-day bicycle race.

The piece has much in common with a philandering playboy who delights in having the ladies at his beck and call. The heroine of the tale is a lively young busybody determined to keep the philanderer guessing by flirting with a youth who knows a thing or two about the proprieties. She arouses his interest and the more play ful figures in the story go about their business.

There isn't much to it, but it carries a slight "kick" and succeeds in making itself fairly amusing.

Drawing Power: Depends upon star's personality. Title has possibilities to draw them. Exploitation Angles: Teasing the title and playing up talent of star for light comedy.

THEME: Farce-comedy of vivacious young woman who sets her heart on teasing play-fellow by flirting with serious youth. Falls in love with latter.

Distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Cast: Constance Talmadge, Don Alvarado, Alice White, Bryant Washburn, Paulette Duval, Marie Dressler, Albert Gran, Burr MacIntosh. Director, Mal St. Clair.

The Forbidden Woman

Conventional and Picturey

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANY story which has a background of Northern Africa can sure be counted on as carrying a deal of intrigue which has to do with romantic or matrimonial entanglements—and some military incident to give it action and suspense. "The Forbidden Woman" is entirely in this alley—and very picturey to boot.

It starts off rather auspiciously, but sloughs off into an ordinary tale carrying an unusual amount of unnecessary footage. The central figure (played with much emphasis by Jetta Goudal) is the Eurasian wife of a French colonel who acts as spy for the Arabs. It develops into a triangle—revolving around two men in love with the same woman. The colonel discovers that his brother, a professional violinist, is in love with his wife. With his military power he is able to humble his relative. Meanwhile, the wife gets involved in several difficulties through her espionage—as well as her admiration for the temperamental fiddler.

The director keeps it melodramatic all of the way. In outline it is consistent even if its story is difficult to swallow as genuine. In all, a first rate number of its kind, though there is hardly any suspense to it. The finish, however, is really unconventional. The acting is satisfactory as turned in by Miss Goudal. Joseph Schildkraut is rather stagey as the violinist—and Victor Varconi is not forgetful of the fact that he is trouping every minute.

Drawing Power: Good. Title and cast should draw them. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and feature players.

THEME: Domestic triangle story of brothers—one of whom is married and the other single. Latter falls in love with wife of relative.

Dsitributed by Pathe-De Mille. Length, six reels. Released, November, 1927. Cast: Jetta Goudal, Victor Varconi, Joseph Schildkraut, Ivan Lebedeff, Joseph Norman. Director, Paul L. Stein.

Love

Not So Hot, But Gilbert and Garbo Put It Over

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

EVER since John Gilbert and Greta Garbo began flashing their distinctive high-pressure brand of romance they have established a following that measures success for their pictures—a success clearly evident by the long patient lines in front of the box-office. John and Greta sure have that indefinable something. Here they bob up in a film version of Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina," which has been "doctored" here and there to conform to celluloid lines.

You may please be advised that the picture hasn't the sex appeal of "Flesh and the Devil." For one thing, John seems to be more suppressed—a trifle tired, you might say. But Greta takes the honors anyway, and it is to her partner's credit that he lets her get away with it.

The film becomes repetitious in that the lovers must suffer and suffer—which compels them to show little variation of their romantic expressions. The heroine must needs check out her unresponsive husband for the big love of her life. But the newfound apple of her eye becomes as petulant as a small boy when he registers jealousy over her mother love for her child. The scene doesn't make for much sincerity.

It is staged creditably, even though the Russian atmosphere suggests an English influence. The wolf hunt is very badly presented. But taken altogether it offers good entertainment. Surely anything that John and Greta do in the way of expressing their volatile or suppressed emotions is interesting. And there's a title tacked on which will arouse curiosity.

Drawing Power: Fine. Title and popularity of Gilbert-Garbo team will do the work. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and feature stars.

THEME: Drama of triangle with discontented wife seeking love and solace from young officer.

Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn. Released, December, 1927. Length, nine reels. Cast: John Gilbert, Greta Garbo, George Fawcett, Emily Fitzroy, Brandon Hurst, Philippe de Lacy. Director, Edmund Goulding.

"Four Faces West"

(Fox-Van Bibber—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is a good story here, with possibilities for some good subtle comedy that is sacrificed for the slapstick and knockabout type It would seem that a vehicle of this kind, which has a more or less snappy theme on which to build, would lend itself more to the subtle variety than to the slapstick for some real humor. Instead the laughs must come from such incidents as rough and tumble fights with taxi-drivers and eccentric falls and ridiculous antics by Tyler Brooks, who plays the Van Bibber role.

Van is the gay and somewhat worthless young nephew of a wealthy uncle who has kept him well supplied with funds, but who has suddenly tightened up the purse strings just as Van owes a $250 balance on the necklace he has given his lady love. The jeweler demands the necklace back within the hour unless Van can produce the $250.

The youth is stumped momentarily, but conceives a story by which the uncle must reach his partner's office within a half hour or lose $50.000. Van then outmaneuvers a taxi driver and dons the disguise. He drives the uncle into all sorts of difficulties, as the taxi-driver chases them on a bicycle. When the tangle is eventually straightened out and Van's cleverness revealed to the uncle, after the latter has taken a terrible beating at the hands of the taxi-driver, he agrees that the boy is clever and entitled to the $250. And so all ends happily.

"Horse Play"

(Universal—One Reel)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

ALL the old gags that go with a novice horseman in his first attempt to ride, are sprung on Pa McGinis in this comedy of the Keeping Up With the Joneses series. They are funny, there is no getting away from that, but as in most of this series the comedy is too forced and there is entirely too much of it.

The insistent Ma McGinis, unfortunately for Pa, encounters the Joneses on a horseback party in the park. The next day Pa takes his first lesson and undergoes some rough treatment. With the aid of a derrick attachment he keeps on or adjacent to the horse's back. But Pa is too sore to take his meals sitting, so the second day they lead out a nice docile and beamy ex-fire horse to make it easy for him.

Things go fairly smoothly until a fire alarm sounds and the mechanical engines go dashing down the street to the chagrin of Pa's mount. The steed will not be outdone by any new contraption, so he takes the bit in his teeth and dashes to the fire, with Pa doing his utmost to keep seated. Some of the antics are really funny and will give a laugh or two to the most hardened movie-goer.

"The Newlyweds' Advice"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

SNOOKUMS and the monkey are a hard team to beat in these two-reel comedies. What mischief one doesn't do the other does; usually before the conclusion of the two reels things are in a much tangled mess. It is so in this one, even to the wrecking of an entire bazaar. First of all Snookum and the monkey become entangled in a brawl that completely demolishes the Newlyweds' sitiing room, when they hurl all objects in the room at each other.

Then they take Snookums to the bazaar and he becomes entangled in a bunch of balloons which take him aloft, while his frantic mother and father jump from booth to booth, wrecking all of them in their attempt to rescue the youngster. There are enough gags sprung to keep the parents completely embarrassed throughout, but they are completely overshadowed by the personality of the youngster and the antics of the monkey.

"Flaming Fathers"
(Roach-Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

MAX DAVIDSON is given full play for his comedy talents in this Hal Roach two-reeler which has a humorous situation or two, but which has entirely too much repetition for it to be continuously funny. The beach scene with the crowds rushing to the disturbance three or four times is apparently just to make a two-reeler of what could be a meaty one-reeler.

Davidson is funny in spots, but his humor comes only out of situations. As a matter of fact there is more humor in the dash of the big cop along the beach than in any other sequence, and that is funnier the first time than when repeated a second and third time.

Davidson is the father of Martha Sleeper, who is under suspicion of being about to elope with her boy friend. So when they start for the beach papa accompanies them. His bathing suit, many times too large, and his ludicrous appearance amuse the kids along the beach and they swarm about him continuously. Eventually a huge dog takes possession of the suit and sends papa into the surf, from where his exit is demanded immediately by the cop. The daughter and boy friend take advantage of the situation to do their eloping, while papa becomes entangled with the cop, whose coat he gains possession of in the melee as mama puts in an appearance. Mama's presence only adds to the hilarity of the kids and the cop finally departs in disgust, as papa is chastised by mama for permitting the elopment.

"New Faces for Old"
(F B O—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE Beauty Parlor series reaches its eleventh release in this latest excursion into the field of comedy by Al Cooke and Kit Guard. These two assistants of Lorraine Eason and Thelma Hill are really the principals of the comedies, as their adventures are given more footage than the girls' constant predicaments and Danny O'Shea's efforts to help them. They are at times funny, and probably their efforts to appear amusing will cause chuckles. But they ought to employ newer gags; the two work with moth-eaten comedy situations.

The title has nothing to do with the contents of the picture, which deals with the two assistants' antics in a night club where they consumed everything on the menu, and then disclosed the fact that they were broke, and the adventure which befell O'Shea and the two girls, who were robbed while on their way to meet hungry Al and Kit.

The most laughable situation that arises is a scene showing the two beauty parlor assistants trying to fool the night club proprietor that they have been insulted and will refuse to pay their checks because of flies in the coffee. In punishment they are set to work to entertain the night club audience.

Arvid Gilstrom directed the Witwer story, which was adapted by Tom McNamara.

"Models in Mud"
(Educational—One Reel)

ASIDE from the ordinary and carrying a distinct flavor all its own, this Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge novelty release is a welcome addition to any program. It is not so much that the scenes are different from any other scenic—the shots are taken from foreign countries and are interesting in their way—but that they are presented in a noval fashion, are introduced by a type of cartoon animation which puts an audience into a receptive frame of mind. It is often the case that a series of scenes become monotonous in their slow unreeling, just one flash following another until the reel is ended. The idea carried out here—that of interspersing animated figures which presage the next few shots and give an inkling of what they are about—forms the nonsense portion of the by-line of the Hodge-Podge reels—some sense and some nonsense.

The animation work is of a high order, as is also the continuity. The quartet of scenes which make up the reel include Mexicans cultivating their land, Eskimos and their dogs, Chinamen and their homes in little sampans, and Italians skiing on the snow-covered Alps.

Robert E. Gillaum conceived and edited the reel, which Archie N. Griffith embellished with his animated work. Painstaking care is apparent in this release. It is to be recommended. RAYMOND GANLY.

"Nothing Flat"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

GEORGE DAVIS is starred in this Mermaid comedy, a fair one in gag appeal and likely to mildly entertain audiences. In the course of its unfolding are unearthed situations of a somewhat old type, the I-hit-you, you-hit-me brand. Davis, the former English clown, is a capable comedian, and with the little bits he has to work with he keeps the laugh situations at least not below the average. The idea behind the plot is that of a fellow whose girl thinks him a champion athlete, and the fellow's success in living up to his girl's expectation, but not through his own ingenuity, however. Davis enters all the athletic contests and emerges from the greater portion of them with the laurel wreath of victory. But he was aided in achieving this by the presence of a cop, who is after him, and who, consequently, he endeavors to outspeed.

As the situation stands the girl's father is backing the elongated George, therefore he cannot disappoint his future father-in-law. An amusing incident occurs among the spectators. One chap, feverishly watching the various contests, tears to shreds another's hat, coat and vest in his nervous fingers.

Phil Dunham has the part of the father, Lucille Hutton, his pretty daughter, and Stanley Blystone, George's rival in love. Stephen Robert directed and Dwight Warren did the photography.

"Some Pets"
(Universal—One Reel)

A SNAPPY kid comedy is this one-reeler featuring Arthur Lake. It is better than the general run of the series and fairly exudes youth and animation. There is a certain freshness about it that can only be found at the ages of those who dominate the picture.

Arthur, as usual, bests his rival Buddy and drives off with the girl, but only after a series of amusing episodes. The arrival of Arthur's girl cousin arouses the jealousy of his best girl, who is out motoring with the boy friend. The latter pair quarrel and the best girl is walking home, when she is overtaken in the flivver by Arthur and the cousin. Arthur introduces the cousin and Buddy drives up to patch up affairs. A well placed horse shoe punctures a tire on Buddy's sporty car, and Arthur drives off with both girls, much to the chagrin of Buddy.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"A Rattling Good Time"
(Universal—One Reel)

THE "Clarion" staff, headed by its owner and his pretty daughter, launch forth on a picnic in a dilapidated old Ford that produces quite a bit of humor of the rougher slapstick and situation type. They encounter an unscrupulous old constable, whose trick sign does not prohibit fishing when anybody is looking. So they are all pinched for illegally fishing. Harold the dumb reporter and Alice liberate them by temporarily disposing of the Sheriff. They make their getaway in the flivver and are pursued by the sheriff on his donkey. The machine blows up on the road, leaving Harold and Betty embraced and unmindful of the catastrophe.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Winning Goal"
(Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS collegiate series evidently aims to be seasonal as well as entertaining. Here we have an ice hockey match as the means of settling the mild feud between Ed Benson and Don Trent, both of whom are enamoured of June Maxwell, and the hockey match has all the action and thrills of a Madison Square Garden event. This George Lewis, who stars in the series, is a very versatile chap and the story is even better than the majority of those that have gone before.

Benson is manager of June Maxwell's lunch room in the college town and it is prospering until Trent opens a rival room. Then neither can make headway so they agree to close one of them, depending upon the result of the Sophomore-Junior hockey game. Benson's sophomore team accumes an early lead and seems to have the game well in hand, when Trent arranges to have the star fouled. Benson is badly injured and retires from the game, after which the Juniors go into the lead and hold an advantage of one goal until two minutes of the end of the game. Benson gamely struggles back to the ice at that stage and scores the tieing and winning goals.

The real college atmosphere fairly permeates the two reels and there is enough comedy interspersed to balance the tensity of the hockey game and events leading up to it. The picture is the type that should prove popular in any house.

"Hello Sailor"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

DIRECTED by Mark Sandrich and assisted by his brother, Wallace Lupino. Lupino Lane, Educational's ace comedian, tries his hand at a sailor-boy role and, through no fault of his own, is only fairly successful with it. Both he and Wallace are a good pair of comics, but here they have little to do except push each other. They do this with regularity throughout most of the two reels, and then mingle in a rough-house fight, funny and well done. But the two-reels, when everything is considered, can be judged as a case of misspent opportunities. For would not, ordinarily, a hilarious comedy result when you have two sailors visiting the same girl on shore leave, and when the same girl has a twin sister, who complicates further the situation?

The second half is much better comedy than the first, when [illegible] ship and traveling via a bus to the girls' home. Here they propose to the twin sisters thinking them to be one person, and they fight it out when they realize that both have been answered in the affirmative. The [illegible] of ruins when they finish their little argument. The two [illegible] instead of one, and all ends happily.

"Exploring England With Will Rogers"
(Pathe—One Reel)

WILL ROGERS takes his audience on an instructive tour of many of the historic [illegible] ing single reeler, whose titles are in the usual humorous Rogers' vein. This is a combination [illegible] arranged and displayed in pithy fashion. There [illegible] humorist conveys the audience down the Thames, where Summer estates are displayed and the different river conveyances revealed. It is a reel that should fit in well on any program—CHESTER J. SMITH.

RED LION, York County, is to continue to have two theatres under different control, despite reported efforts of interests friendly to the new Red Lion theatre to acquire stock control of the old Red Lion Opera House. These interests are said to have bought 145 of the 380 shares of the opera house stock, but the opera house association members have 222 shares, or considerably more than a majority interest, with thirteen shares in the hands of neither group.

The opera house, built twenty-two years ago as a community center, is a fine brick building, seating 1,100, with walls of such thickness that they could support side balconies capable of seating 500 more. The addition of these balconies is contemplated, along with some other improvements, which, it is said, could be financed with money now in the treasury. There is a fine basement once used as a market place, and consideration is being given to a plan to resume the holding of market there in the winter months, outdoor markets being in vogue at present.

The new theatre in Red Lion was opened about a year ago and is a fine, modern structure. There is said to be ample evidence that the town can support both theatres successfully. The present board of directors of the opera house consists of Dr. L. M. Hyson, Howard M. Sheeler, J. M. Finchbaugh, William A. Thompson, Dr. Clarence N. Trout and A. Scott Fry. C. E. Buell, of Westminster, Md., recently leased the house and he has taken into partnership Benjamin F. LaMotte.

The new Red Lion Theatre is operated by Walter J. Rotherseis, who formerly for a number of years conducted the opera house.

With a specially arranged program, the Rialto theatre, Williamsport, celebrated the completion of its first year of operation, the week of November 28. General Manager William P. Kansas City

THE Sunday closing fight in Ash Grove, Mo., is developing into one of the most interesting cases of its type in several years. The town's business men, to combat the reformers, have organized a 100 per cent Enforcement League and are determined that the town's one motion picture show shall stay open on Sundays, or that all other places of business in the county, which includes Springfield, Mo., a town of 60,000 persons, shall remain closed. The league went to Springfield this week to gather evidence in the case. Greene County will be either wide open or closed for all business on Sundays, the league has determined. The row started two weeks ago when the Rev. T. C. Pennell, pastor of the Ash Baptist church, recalled an ancient blue law which prohibited unnecessary work on Sunday. Gasoline stations and stores were not mentioned. The business men of the town sided with L. D. Metcalf, exhibitor, resulting in the organization of the 100 per cent Enforcement League. The league also opposed the coming of Willard W. Harmlin, county prosecuting attorney and former State senator, to prosecute the motion picture show. Elmer G. Wadlow, the town's only lawyer, organized the club and is acting as attorney for Metcalf. The league will go even further, it is said, and ask the State legislature to close all theatres of Missouri if citizens want to go back to blue laws.

Kansas City schools have adopted motion pictures as a means of training students and others in the methods used in fire drills. Pictures were taken this week of fire drills in Kansas City schools and will be shown before the Kansas City Safety Council and other organizations.

North Kansas City, Mo., has outgrown its present motion picture theatre and a new structure, comprising bowling alleys and other enterprises, as well as a theatre, will provide a new, modern 750-seat house. The building was designed by Kenne & Simpson, architects, Kansas City.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Cody, the latter better known as Mabel Normand, denied that there was any intention on either of their parts in seeking a divorce in Kansas City this week.

C. W. Allen, feature branch manager of the Pathe-DeMille exchange in Kansas City, has been transferred to Oklahoma City, Okla., where he will become Pathe branch manager.

J. F. Burke, home office for Educational; Charles Knickerbocker, Columbia branch manager in Butte, Mont.; Joe Daly, traveling auditor for Fox; Beverly Miller, representative of National Screen Service in St. Louis, and Maurice Safier, Warner Bros.' home office representative, were Kansas City visitors this week.

The Empress theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., has been taken over by B. C. Cook, manager of Economy Film Service, Kansas City, and will be operated by the Empress Theatre Corp. J. P. Ghoson is associated with Mr. Cook in the theatre. The Centerville Aidome, Centerville, Kas., has been razed and a theatre will be built on the same site.

Elmer Dillon, shipper at the First National branch, received a liberal quota of rice the other night. The "Mrs." formerly was Miss Helen Brown.

When Louis Kopulos, who owns three theatres in Kansas City, has to do some quick thinking and moving, he usually does it. Monday evening at 6:15 Mr. Kopulos's car, containing all his film for that night, was stolen. To the exchanges he rushed and found that other prints of his schedule were available. Later that night his car was recovered and the films were not molested.

John Graham, Tiffany booker, received a fat check from the home office this week for obtaining dates above a quota.

New York & New Jersey

EITHER there seems to be a lull in trade news of this business or else a flock of changes are being made, theatres being merged with circuits, circuits being merged with other big chains and plenty of other excitement. At the present there doesn't seem to be much stirring except that things are again said to be happening down on the lower East Side of New York City.

One report has it that a big price war is imminent—but this may have had its inception with the fact that five cent movies have again made their appearance after an absence of several years. And then, it is said that certain agreements entered into by opposing circuits have not been carried out to the exact letter.

Another report states that it won't be long now before the whole lower East Side will be under control of a single circuit and that there won't be any more wars.

The latter rumor would seem the most logical of all.

On the upper East Side of the city there will occur a transfer of two theatres during the month of January, according to a report this week. These are said to be the Park Lane and Park Plaza theatres, which appear to be scheduled to go under the Loew banner.

Benjamin King and Jonas Marx have taken over the Pantheon Theatre in New York City. This house is located at Burnside and Harrison Avenues, seats about 900 and was formerly operated by Morris Wolf.

Some of the boys are speculating as to who will be the operator of the recently completed Ward Theatre, Westchester Avenue, Bronx. This enterprise has been reported as an independent one, but it is said that several circuits are dickering for ownership. Louis Geller's Monroe Theatre is the opposition in this section.

A recent change of theatre ownership was incorrectly reported last week in these columns when a paragraph stated that Gerhauser Brothers had taken over the Avon, Garfield, 16th Street and Eden theatres. To the contrary, Gerhauser Bros. disposed of a theatre, the Eden, which they have operated for the past 15 years. Messrs. Jenoell and Pickelner purchased the Eden and their holdings now consist of this house and three others mentioned above.

The Kingsway Theatre, Brooklyn, one of the A. H. Schwartz circuit, is temporarily closed to permit alterations. A big stage will be installed and it is said that this house will change from a picture presentation policy to one of pictures and vaudeville.

After disposing of their Eden Theatre, Brooklyn, to Jennell and Peckelner, the Gerhauser Bros., pioneers in the exhibiting end of this industry, will take an extended vacation.

H. Pollak is managing the Melrose Theatre, the Bronx.

The Park Palace Theatre, 73 Park Avenue, Brooklyn, has been taken over by F. de Somma and a partner. These two also operate the Alhambra, 5th Avenue, Brooklyn. John Tidesko was the former owner of the Park Palace.

Henry Liman is operating Jimmie Sammon's Sunshine Theatre, Coney Island Avenue, Brooklyn. This house was taken over some time ago by the Insular Amusement Corp., owners of a Sayville Theatre, Long Island.

It is rumored that General Manager Fink, of the A. H. Schwartz chain of theatres, recently severed his connection with that organization.

A new 1,000 seat theatre at Hawthorne, N. J., will be added to a recently formed New Jersey theatre circuit, of which Nat Marcus is the general manager. This firm also operates houses in Woodridge and Highland Park.

A successful operation for appendicitis was recently performed on Mrs. Fellerman, wife of Max Fellerman, Pathe-DeMille salesman. Mrs. Fellerman is said to be rapidly recovering.

A. S. Beck, who has a chain of shoe stores in New York City and who at one time had a chain of theatres (Mr. Beck may still have some) is opening up another store right next to the entrance of 729 7th Avenue. Now, the interesting part of all this is that there will be a good-sized marquee under which the film boys may seek shelter from inclement weather. In behalf of the Curb, thanks are proffered to Mr. Beck.

Walter Henklemann will continue to manage the Eden Theatre, Brooklyn, recently taken over from the Gerhausers by Jennell and Peckelner. Henklemann has been at this house for eleven years—which is quite some time in this business.

Messrs. Juskowitz and Smollen, affiliated with the Walter Reade Enterprises of New Jersey, also conduct a successful fight arena in Philadelphia and in the summer time have fight privileges at Connie Mack's baseball park. These two are also both graduates of Cornell and have not lost their enthusiasm for football. This, it is said, was strongly evidenced at the recent Cornell-Penn game.

Walter Hoffman, of Roth Brothers' circuit, is showing the boys his new grip for a golf stick these days.

B. W. Ryan, manager of the A. H. Schwartz Albemarle Theatre, is said to have left his position at that house.

Stanley Sobelson, New Jersey theatre operator, will open his new Elizabeth Theatre, Elizabeth, about January 15. Mr. Sobelson recently took over the Rialto Theatre, Ridgefield Park.

Des Moines

JOSEPHINE BAUMGARTEN, until recently an employe of the booking department of Fox Films at the Des Moines office, has severed connections with Fox. Prior to her work at that office, she was assistant secretary of the Iowa Theatre Owners' Association. Miss Baumgarten will undoubtedly continue in some line of film work.

Due to the fact that the name "The Roxy Theatre" is a copyrighted name, Youngclass and Latta who named the Rex theatre, which they bought recently, the Roxy, have again renamed the house and will call it The Foxy. They have the ownership of the two theatres at Perry, Iowa.

Universal claims the lead in the bowling contests with three games won against F. B. O. last week. Universal, Famous Players and F. B. O. tied the week before for second place with Pathe taking the leading score. The team of Famous Players claim that they were not able to do so well because they did not have the support from the girls in the rooting stand that they had the week before.

O. H. Garland, salesman for Pathe, is now out of bed but will not go out on the road until this week. He has had a severe attack of the grippe.

Dewey Maaske, who has the Maaske hall, will show pictures there. He has purchased the projection machine owned by the Odd Fellows.

Perry, Iowa, voted for Sunday shows in a heated battle, with 1,416 for and 1,153 against, when Youngclass and Latta, who bought the two houses there, urged that the town have a chance to change their opinion from the vote out on Sunday shows that they gave them four years ago. A number of adjacent towns will probably put the matter to a vote soon as in the majority of cases the election has been to ask the return of Sunday shows.

A. C. Wilson and I. H. Hildreth, traveling auditors for Fox Films, have been at the Des Moines office the past week.

Lionel Wasson, who has been at Waterloo doing special publicity on the new theatre there, which is being built for the A. H. Blank-Publix chain, has returned to Des Moines, while Herb Grove, manager of the Des Moines theatre in Des Moines, has gone to Waterloo to take charge of the opening of the hause at Waterloo. This theatre is to be christened the Riviera and is now scheduled to have its opening on December 29. Lionel Wasson is taking charge of the Strand theatre in Des Moines while Jess Day is managing the Des Moines theatre.

Harry David, executive of the Publix Shows here, is making his headquarters at Omaha instead of Des Moines for a time.

The Gem theatre, Des Moines suburban house, has been sold by Roy Jones, who built the house and has run it for the past several years, to Fred Worrell, who was manager of the Rivoli theatre at Oskaloosa, one of the Hostettler houses.

A. J. Levy, formerly of Kansas City, is now on the staff of Pathe in Des Moines. He is assistant to Les Phillips, sales manager.

Youngclass and Latta have purchased a new screen for the Grand theatre at Perry. This house has not been in operation since it was bought by the partners, who announced at the time that the theatre would be remodeled before opening.

E. F. Woods, who recently bought the Isis theatre at Lynnville, last week bought 75 new chairs for the theatre. He is making quite extensive repairs in the theatre, has redecorated it and put in a new heating system as well as repairing the booth equipment. The theatre is a 300 seat house.

C. B. Stombaugh, western division sales manager, and Mr. Hill, feature sales manager, visited the Des Moines office of Pathe.

Charles Fenton of Gilman, who has the Fenton house there, and M. R. Pettit, of Winterset, were callers last week.

J. F. McLoon, traveling auditor, was another from the home office to visit the Des Moines branch.

The Capitol theatre has bought two machines equipped with Peerless lamps and two new spotlights.

The Lyric Theatre at Walnut, Iowa, which has been under the management of E. B. McCord, has been sold to Arthur A. Johnson, of Harlan, Iowa. He is making several changes in the house.

Grantham and Peters, of Fairbank, Iowa, who have the Polly theatre at Fairbank, have purchased the Arlington opera house at Arlington on lease and have bought the theatre equipment from the former owner, A. R. Bird.

Minneapolis

A MEETING was held in Minneapolis last week between the local Film Board of Trade and four members of the Milwaukee Film Board of Trade. The men who came to Minneapolis were Ben Koenig, secretary of the Board, Sam Shurman of M-G-M, Charles Trampe of Midwest, and P. McCarthy of First National. Among problems discussed were those arising from the fact that the Minneapolis and Milwaukee territories overlap in Wisconsin.

The Bayport theatre at Bayport, Minn., which has just reopened, is managed by E. E. Iverson, formerly of Brainerd, Minn. The interior of the building has been remodeled and the equipment thoroughly overhauled.

Minneapolis was visited last week by Bill Danzinger, special representative of the Harold Lloyd corporation.

Last month the Gem theatre at Littlefork, Minn., was opened by Jean Jewett and E. J. Chilgren.

Late this month the new theatre at Huron, S. D., will be opened by manager Donald J. Harris. The theatre is to be known as the State as a result of a name contest held recently by the manager. There is a seating capacity of 700 and one of the special features is a glass-enclosed, sound-proof room where mothers may take crying babies and continue to watch the show without disturbing the rest of the audience.

Finkelstein & Ruben is planning more elaborate Christmas parties than ever before for children. Thousands of children in the northwest will be made happier because of the firm's holiday program.

Finkelstein & Ruben entertained 51 Montana boys and girls this week at a theatre party at the State theatre in Minneapolis. The children were visiting in the city on their way home from Chicago, where they attended the International Livestock show and the sixth annual junior club congress.

Minneapolis' "thrift stockings" are full to the top this year, according to the city's banks and trust companies. Merchants are looking for a record period of holiday shopping, as there has been a fine crop in the northwest, and there should be plenty of money to spend, not only on Christmas, but on the movies. Exhibitors n general are looking forward to a very busy and prosperous winter.

Philadelphia

JOHN FREEMAN, who was formerly manager of the Grand theatre in Chester, has been transferred to the Keystone theatre as house manager. Tom Lancaster, known in this territory for many years as a vaudeville performer, has been appointed by Marshall W. Taylor, joint manager for the Zimmerman interests in the Stanley Company, as resident manager at the Queen theatre in Wilmington, Del.

Elaborate ceremonies marked the breaking of ground for the Jules E. Mastbaum Rodin Museum on the Parkway in Philadelphia on December 7th. This museum, which will house the collection of Rodin masterpieces secured by Mr. Mastbaum during his lifetime, was provided for in a clause of his will. The speakers included Mayor Kendrick, E. T. Stotesbury and the French consul in Philadelphia.

Following a meeting of the board of directors of the Stanley Company of America, it was decided to name the new 5,000 seat theatre being erected by the Stanley Company at 20th and Market streets, the Mastbaum theatre instead of the Jules theatre, as originally planned. It was felt that the name Mastbaum would better perpetuate the former president of the company than the mere title Jules.

Present plans provide for a formal opening of the Stanley Company's Kent theatre in Kensington, the northeast section of Philadelphia, about January 1st. This is a 2,000 seat house and will be the most elaborate and up-to-date neighborhood house added to the Stanley chain in Philadelphia during its history.

Mrs. Charles Segal, wife of the owner of Segal's Palace, the Apollo, and several other neighborhood theatres in Philadelphia, is now a patient at the Jefferson Hospital, where she will remain for some time.

Marshall W. Taylor, one of the district managers who has charge of the Stanley, Wilmington and Chester houses and also of several theatres in Philadelphia, has moved to Doylestown, Pa.

Cleveland

AT BARACH, division manager in this territory for Warner Brothers for the past two years, has resigned. Barach's resignation, to become effective this month, is due to poor health. For the past three weeks he has been ill, and has been advised by his doctors to take a long rest in a milder climate. So he and the femily will mgirate to Florida as soon as possible.

Max Milder is now in Cleveland and will take over the management of this division for Warner Brothers. Under a new sales policy, three sales managers will supervise sales in the whole country, thus abandoning the position of regional division manager. Milder will handle the central states, including Ohio. Max Milder is not a stranger in Cleveland. Many years ago he was located here as manager of the old General Film exchange.

It is hard to record sorrow in this season of general rejoicing, but friends of Roy Smith, manager of the Palace theatre, Huntington, West Virginia, paused in their tasks last week to extend their sympathy in the recent loss of his 14 year old boy. LeRoy, Jr., hurt his knee playing football. Peritonitis set in and the boy could not be saved. Roy Smith is a brother of Lemotte Smith, of the Smith Amusement Company, operating picture houses in Alliance, Warren and Huntington, W. Va.

Nat Charnas is back in Toledo after a two weeks' wedding trip through the east. Now Nat can settle down to the task of supervising the new 2,000 seat picture house and office building that he, Feigley and Sourbier have broken ground for.

The office and service departments of the Standard Film Service Company in Detroit are now all under one roof. The poster and shipping departments were moved last week from the old Joseph Mack building to the new Film Exchange building, where the company has its Detroit office.

Lowell Cash, who has been out of the picture business for the past few months, has returned to the fold again, this time as manager of the Union Square theatre, one of the houses belonging to the Universal-Variety chain.

Charles Winer, division manager in these parts for Tiffany-Stahl, will temporarily take charge of the company's Cincinnati office. H. H. Hern, who was manager of the Cincinnati Tiffany exchange, has been transferred to Indianapolis. His successor in Cincinnati will not be appointed until after the first of the year. In the meantime, Weiner will give the exchange his personal attention.

It is understood that Carl Fish, one-time owner of the Alhambra theatre, Akron, is again operating the house. He sold the theatre to C. W. Rossell and company. It recently went into the hands of a receiver and Fish is running it under the receivership.

Schine's new Ohio theatre in Lima, which opened last week, is playing a combination policy of feature photoplays and first-run vaudeville.

Laurence Mellert is managing the Lakewood theatre. He succeeds L. Hofmeister, who has been transferred to the Detroit. Both houses belong to the Universal-Variety circuit.

Harry L. Gold, assistant sales manager for United Artists, and William Rosenthal, special representative, attended the premiere of "The Gaucho" in New York last week.

L. P. Stinchomb, well known Cleveland exhibitor with a long record as owner and manager of the Pearl theatre, has purchased the capitol stock in R. S. Theatre Company, operating the Ridge theatre.

One hundred and fifty men of the Southern Railroad men attended the Cameo theatre last week in a group.

San Francisco

SAM GORDON has started work also on his theatre at Napa, which will be rushed through to completion.

The Computation of Spotlight Diameters

IN view of the fact that spotlights are in such common use in theatres, it is remarkable that so little has been published concerning the optical workings of these light projectors. This lack of printed information, naturally, has resulted in the average projectionists remaining in ignorance of the fundamentals governing spotlight operation, from an optical standpoint.

Mechanically, the spotlight is a comparatively simple affair, and there are few experienced projectionists who cannot walk into the projection room of any theatre and give satisfactory spotlight performance.

Optically, however, the spotlight is but little known, and there are, indeed, few projectionists who can, with any given set of conditions, calculate in advance what size of "spotlight" or "flood" will be obtained when the lamp is trained onto the stage.

"What Causes Ghost?"

Ever the presence of the central "ghost" in the light beam is a mystery to the average projectionist, and it seems impossible to make him understand that this "ghost" is the result of using uncorrected condenser lenses, and is caused by spherical aberration in the lenses, bending the edge light rays down toward the center of the beam. This, in turn, causes the "spot" to have bright edges and makes the center of the "spot" appear darker by comparison.

When the spot is focussed to its smallest size the ghost formed by errors in the lens is not visible, but another ghost may appear if the center of the positive carbon has a deep depression since, under this condition, the crater is practically being imaged to form the small spot and the dark center of the crater shows up in the spot on the stage.

Most projectionists believe that the ghost which appears when the spot is spread out into a flood is also a result of the condition of the crater, but this is not true, since spherical aberration in the condenser lens is responsible for it.

How to Calculate "Spot" Size

The writer does not recall ever having seen in print a method for calculating the size of the spot which would be obtained for a given set of conditions and for any degree of focussing. Recently, however, he received a report from F. A. Benford, of the General Electric Company at Schenectady, N. Y., which was prepared at the request of some one who wished specific information on a method for making such calculations.

We are printing much of Mr. Benford's report, and are giving his formulas in the hope that they may be of service to those projectionists who wish to keep them on hand for reference purposes.

Benford's report is as follows:

"To the best of the writer's knowledge there has never been given, in the optical treatises that are ordinarily available, a rule for finding the size of spot given by a condensing lens when used as a "spotlight." The reason for this omission is, obviously, the fact that the position of the light source in spotlight practice is between the principal focal point and the condenser; that is, the operating focal length, F, is less than the principal focal length, Fo, of the lens, and the ordinary rule relating object, image and focal length does not apply.

"A further reason is the fact that an image is not formed, and the beam must be investigated through some other property than that of imagery.

"It is self-evident that the accuracy of conditions are not severe in a problem of this nature, and, therefore, simple methods are to be preferred. In the following solution the accuracy is about as good as the fundamental data of a condensing lens. Thus a condenser rated at 9 inches focal length will vary nearly 0.40 inch between the focal length of the center and the focal length of the edge; and, moreover, the focal length is different, depending upon the direction of passage of light, whether from plane to convex, or from convex to plane. Some experimental data bearing on this phase will be given later.

How Formula is Derived

"Suppose a light ray is traced from the principal focus to the condenser (at a distance Fo from the focal plane) to the edge of the lens and this ray makes an angle with the axis that is evaluated from the equation:

$$\text{Tangent } \frac{a}{2} - \frac{D}{2\,Fo}$$

where d is the active diameter of the lens.

"We may regard this angle $\frac{a}{2}$ as a constant for any given lens, and this assumption is the basis of the following solution: From any point on the axis, a ray to the same point on the lens will suffer an equal refraction, $\frac{a}{2}$, and given an initial angle $\frac{b}{2}$, with the axis, the angular half width of the beam is obviously where $\frac{s}{2}$ is the angular radius of the light source as measured from the edge of the lens.

"The angle $\frac{b}{2}$ is obtained from the relation tangent $\frac{b}{2} - \frac{d}{2F}$ and

$$\text{Tangent } \frac{s}{2} - \frac{\frac{b}{2}}{\frac{r\cos.}{F}}$$

"When F is less than Fo, the angle $\frac{W}{2}$ will be positive, indicating a diverging beam, but when F is greater than Fo, the beam will converge to a focus (image) and then, space permitting, it will diverge into a "spot."

"The initial diameter of the spot can be computed from the relation

$$D = \frac{2\,r\,T}{Fo} \text{ - - - - One}$$

where

D = diameter of spot, in inches.
r = radius of light source, in inches.
T = throw, from lens to screen, in inches.
Fo = focal length of condenser, in inches.

"The initial size is the least size to which it is possible to reduce the spot by sharp focussing.

Correction for Distortion

"If an arc or a monoplane filament is used as the light source, the computation of $\frac{s}{2}$ is influenced by the fact of the source being foreshortened when viewed at a large angle from the normal. In this case

$$\text{Tangent } \frac{s}{2} - \frac{r\cos.\frac{2b}{2}}{F}$$

"It is customary to place the light source between the condenser and the focal point, rather than beyond the focal point, because the first position gives much higher intensities in the spot.

"It is an experimental fact of common observation that the outer part of a 'spot'

Publix' 3,000 Seat Denver Theatre Holds Gala Opening

THE Denver Theatre, new $2,000,000 Publix amusement palace held a gala opening Saturday night, Nov. 19. The new theatre, a 3,000-seat house, compares favorably with the larger Publix houses in Boston, Chicago and other cities of the nation of like size.

The architecture of the theatre is that of the French Renaissance period. The decorations are rose red, ivory and gold. On entering there is a grand lobby more than 100 feet in length and 30 feet wide, with huge crystal chandeliers suspended from the ceiling and French beveled mirrors studding the sides.

From the grand hall one enters the foyer, also 100 feet long and 30 feet wide. Winding from the foyer are two circular stairways that lead to the mezzanine promenade, entirely surrounding the grand foyer. On one side of the promenade is a music room which overlooks the hall. Decorating the walls of the promenade are more than 30 original paintings, some valued as high as $5,000. The design of the auditorium is such that, despite the fact that it seats close to 3,000 persons, there is a feeling of intimacy. The design of the auditorium is also that of the French Renaissance period.

Through the theatre are art objects of great value and interest placed at vantage points. Hand-tufted rugs adorn every room and especially hand-woven carpets of appropriate and blending design are used for other floor coverings.

Needless to say every modern appliance had been installed for the convenience of the patrons. There is nothing like it in Denver or anywhere between Chicago and the West Coast. It is futile for anyone to attempt to describe this "castle of dreams" as so many patrons have so appropriately named it.

Two Big Fox Theatres Under Way in St. Louis and Detroit

STEEL deliveries started last week for St. Louis' new Fox Theatre at Grand and Washington Blvds.

Starting with the stage section, steel bearing plates almost half a foot thick and two feet square are being bolted to 275 concrete footing piers that extend 15 feet below the street level and form support for the steel structure. Framing steel for the Main Auditorium and Grand Lobby floors will follow the setting of the bearing plates, and erection of the first floor beams. Three steel derricks are on the ground, with masts 150 feet high and swinging lifting-booms almost as long.

By New Years Day balcony steel deliveries will be made, and work will start on the main framing of the world's largest clear span balcony. Main roof trusses will be riveted on the ground and swung into place about the first of February.

A thousand open-grate mushrooms in the auditorium floor will draw the used air down through the chamber which occupies the whole basement under the auditorium and distribute it through a duct to a recirculation chamber on the roof, where it is reconditioned before being forced down again. The vertical recirculation chamber of masonry lined with sheet metal rises 110 feet, the equivalent of nine stories, and has almost 10,000 cubic feet of air constantly rushing through it.

What is said to be the largest clear span balcony in the world, the largest roof trusses ever used in Detroit, and the longest columns without a splice that have been erected for any Detroit building—are some of the unusual features to be noted with the near-completion of the steel work on tthe mammoth new Fox theatre, which is is brighter than the center. This is particularly true if the condenser lens is placed so that the convex side faces the light source and the flat side faces the screen. In this case, the refraction of the edge of the condenser is greatly increased due to the high angle of incidence on the convex face, and the crowding of the edge light inward toward the center produces the high intensity noticeable around the edges of the spot.

"If the condenser is placed so that the flat side faces the light source, leaving the convex side to face the screen (as is commonly the practice), the angle of incidence is more equal to the angle of emergency and there is less crowding of the edge light toward the center of the beam, with the result that the spot is more evenly lighted from edge to edge.

"Formula number 1 gives only the smallest size of spot which can be obtained with any given size of light source and condenser lens. In other words, it represents the image of the course."

In next week's article a table will be given which will show the size of flood and spot for complete range of spotlight lenses of different diameters and focal lengths.

Immensity of the structure is made forcible by the elaborate arrangements that were made necessary for the delivery of the steel work to the job. Some of the huge girders required three flat cars to carry their full length. Trucks of 50-ton capacity were used in bringing the steel from the railroad yards, and 35-ton derricks were called into play to raise the girders and trusses from the ground.

The new Fox house is to seat almost 6,000 people. It will be Detroit's largest theatre.

Systematic Course Prepared to Meet Present-Day Conditions

An announcement which should prove interesting to theatre men in general is that of the Moving Picture Theatre Managers Institute of New York City which, in a recent communication, reports the opening of a school for training men in theatre management on January 16, 1928.

Bearing in mind that management of today's motion picture theatre is a highly specialized profession the faculty has prepared a systematic course to meet these conditions.

The students will be placed under instructors, each of whom has specialized in his particular vocation, and in each branch will receive training from fundamentals to the advanced stage; they will not only have access to a large collection of text books but will have actual practice in theatre management. The classroom will actually be a small theatre in order to provide the proper atmosphere. In addition, the Institute will maintain a laboratory where theatre apparatus of many types will be found.

A catalogue describing the course in detail can be secured by communicating with the Institute at 135 West 44th Street, New York City.

Indiana Theatre Orders Kilgen Organ

During the week ending November 5th, 1927, Geo. Kilgen & Son, Inc., Pipe Organ Builders of St. Louis, Mo., shipped a two manual Organ to the Ritz Theatre, 2933 W. 11th St., Gary, Indiana, which is now being installed.

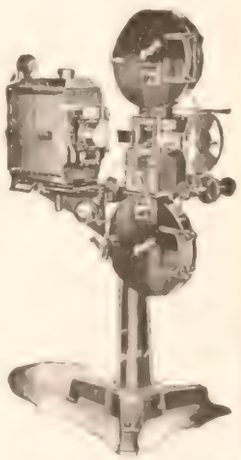
Evidence of Value



Records of performance is the basis of preference for Simplex Projectors. That is one fact brought out through a recent investigation conducted to determine the trend of future projection requirements of Motion Picture Theatres.

There are, of course, sound reasons why Simplex Projectors maintain their efficiency, have longer life and give exceptional service. But these reasons are scientific and are less in evidence than results actually obtained by thousands of owners over a long period of time.

Another important fact revealed is that Simplex Projectors are generally preferred and used by small theatres as well as by large when selection of equipment is made on the advice of seasoned engineers and projection experts.

This fact is most significant. Interpreted it means that Simplex Projectors are intelligently bought—that when cost is considered in terms of service delivered, when equipment money is invested with a view to securing largest possible returns—there is a pronounced preference for Simplex Machines.

Whatever your requirements are—whether you need new projectors or replacement parts, whether you need arc light or mazda lamp equipment, buy for service—the kind of service that is represented and assured by Simplex Projectors.

New York City.

August 4 1927.

Gentlemen:-

When we installed your ROBERT MORTON ORGAN, STYLE 39, with an 88 note DOUBLE TRACKER ROLL DEVICE, in our Rose Theatre, we did so with a good deal of speculation as to whether a small organ would answer our purpose and give the required results.

We wish to commend you upon this type organ. You have answered a long felt want for the smaller type theatre. The organ has the quality of tone, fast action, orchestral, theatrical and symphonic characters which can only be found in the larger type organs.

We are contemplating two additional theatres of similar size, and are pleased to inform you that we will place the same type organ in both theatres.

After operating the organ for over eight months, we wish to add that you have solved the problem of the smaller type theatre in this ROBERT MORTON ORGAN, STYLE 39.

Very truly yours,

Unshackled

Is the fickle picture-going public, irksome at last and tired of the sameness in pictures, turning its back on the obvious, the inane and the overdone? Is that same court of public opinion unlocking the shackles that have bound Hollywood and its serious creators to the conventional?

It is hard to tell. Yet several hopeful signs appear on a dubious horizon. There are indications here and there that story tradition is breaking down with the public and that Hollywood is being given a freer hand to do something different.

Logic in story construction and dramatic characterizations are gaining in favor. Thus, a greater leeway to writers is assured and with it naturally comes the opportunity for variations in theme and a wider canvas over which the dramatic brush may sweep. One of the hopeful signs for the future.

¶ Plenty of evidence these days that the other boys are all het up over the way PARAMOUNT NEWS is running away with the news reel business. ¶ Be calm, gentlemen. It's the law of Progress. ¶ Today's public demanded a new, improved news reel working on 1928 lines. PARAMOUNT NEWS supplied it. Naturally exhibitors buy it. ¶ PARAMOUNT'S licking the field by a day or more on American Legion Paris film by special airplane meeting the Leviathan far at sea. And repeating on Ruth Elder Azores reel by diverting a passenger steamer 300 miles off her course. Are just workaday events for PARAMOUNT NEWS. For twelve years, I have had the privilege of wishing the motion picture exhibitors of America a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

And each succeeding year, these wishes have been realized with increasing fullness. Year after year, the Christmas Season has brought our industry to the close of an epoch of new progress and new prosperity. So glowing have been the fade-outs of Old Years, that high hopes for the New have been far removed from the usual holiday platitudes, and anticipations of things better and finer have been cherished as certainties.

Nineteen hundred and twenty-seven has been a year without parallel for exhibitors and producers alike. The Merriness of our Christmas is assured; for it comes at the end of a twelvemonth of unprecedented progress. We enter into the Yuletide Season with a sense of having brought motion pictures nearer to that goal which we never shall acknowledge having reached. And, with the promise of a past so unique in its achievement, we move on into 1928, knowing that the industry will conquer new kingdoms and wishing each other a full share in the treasures to be won.

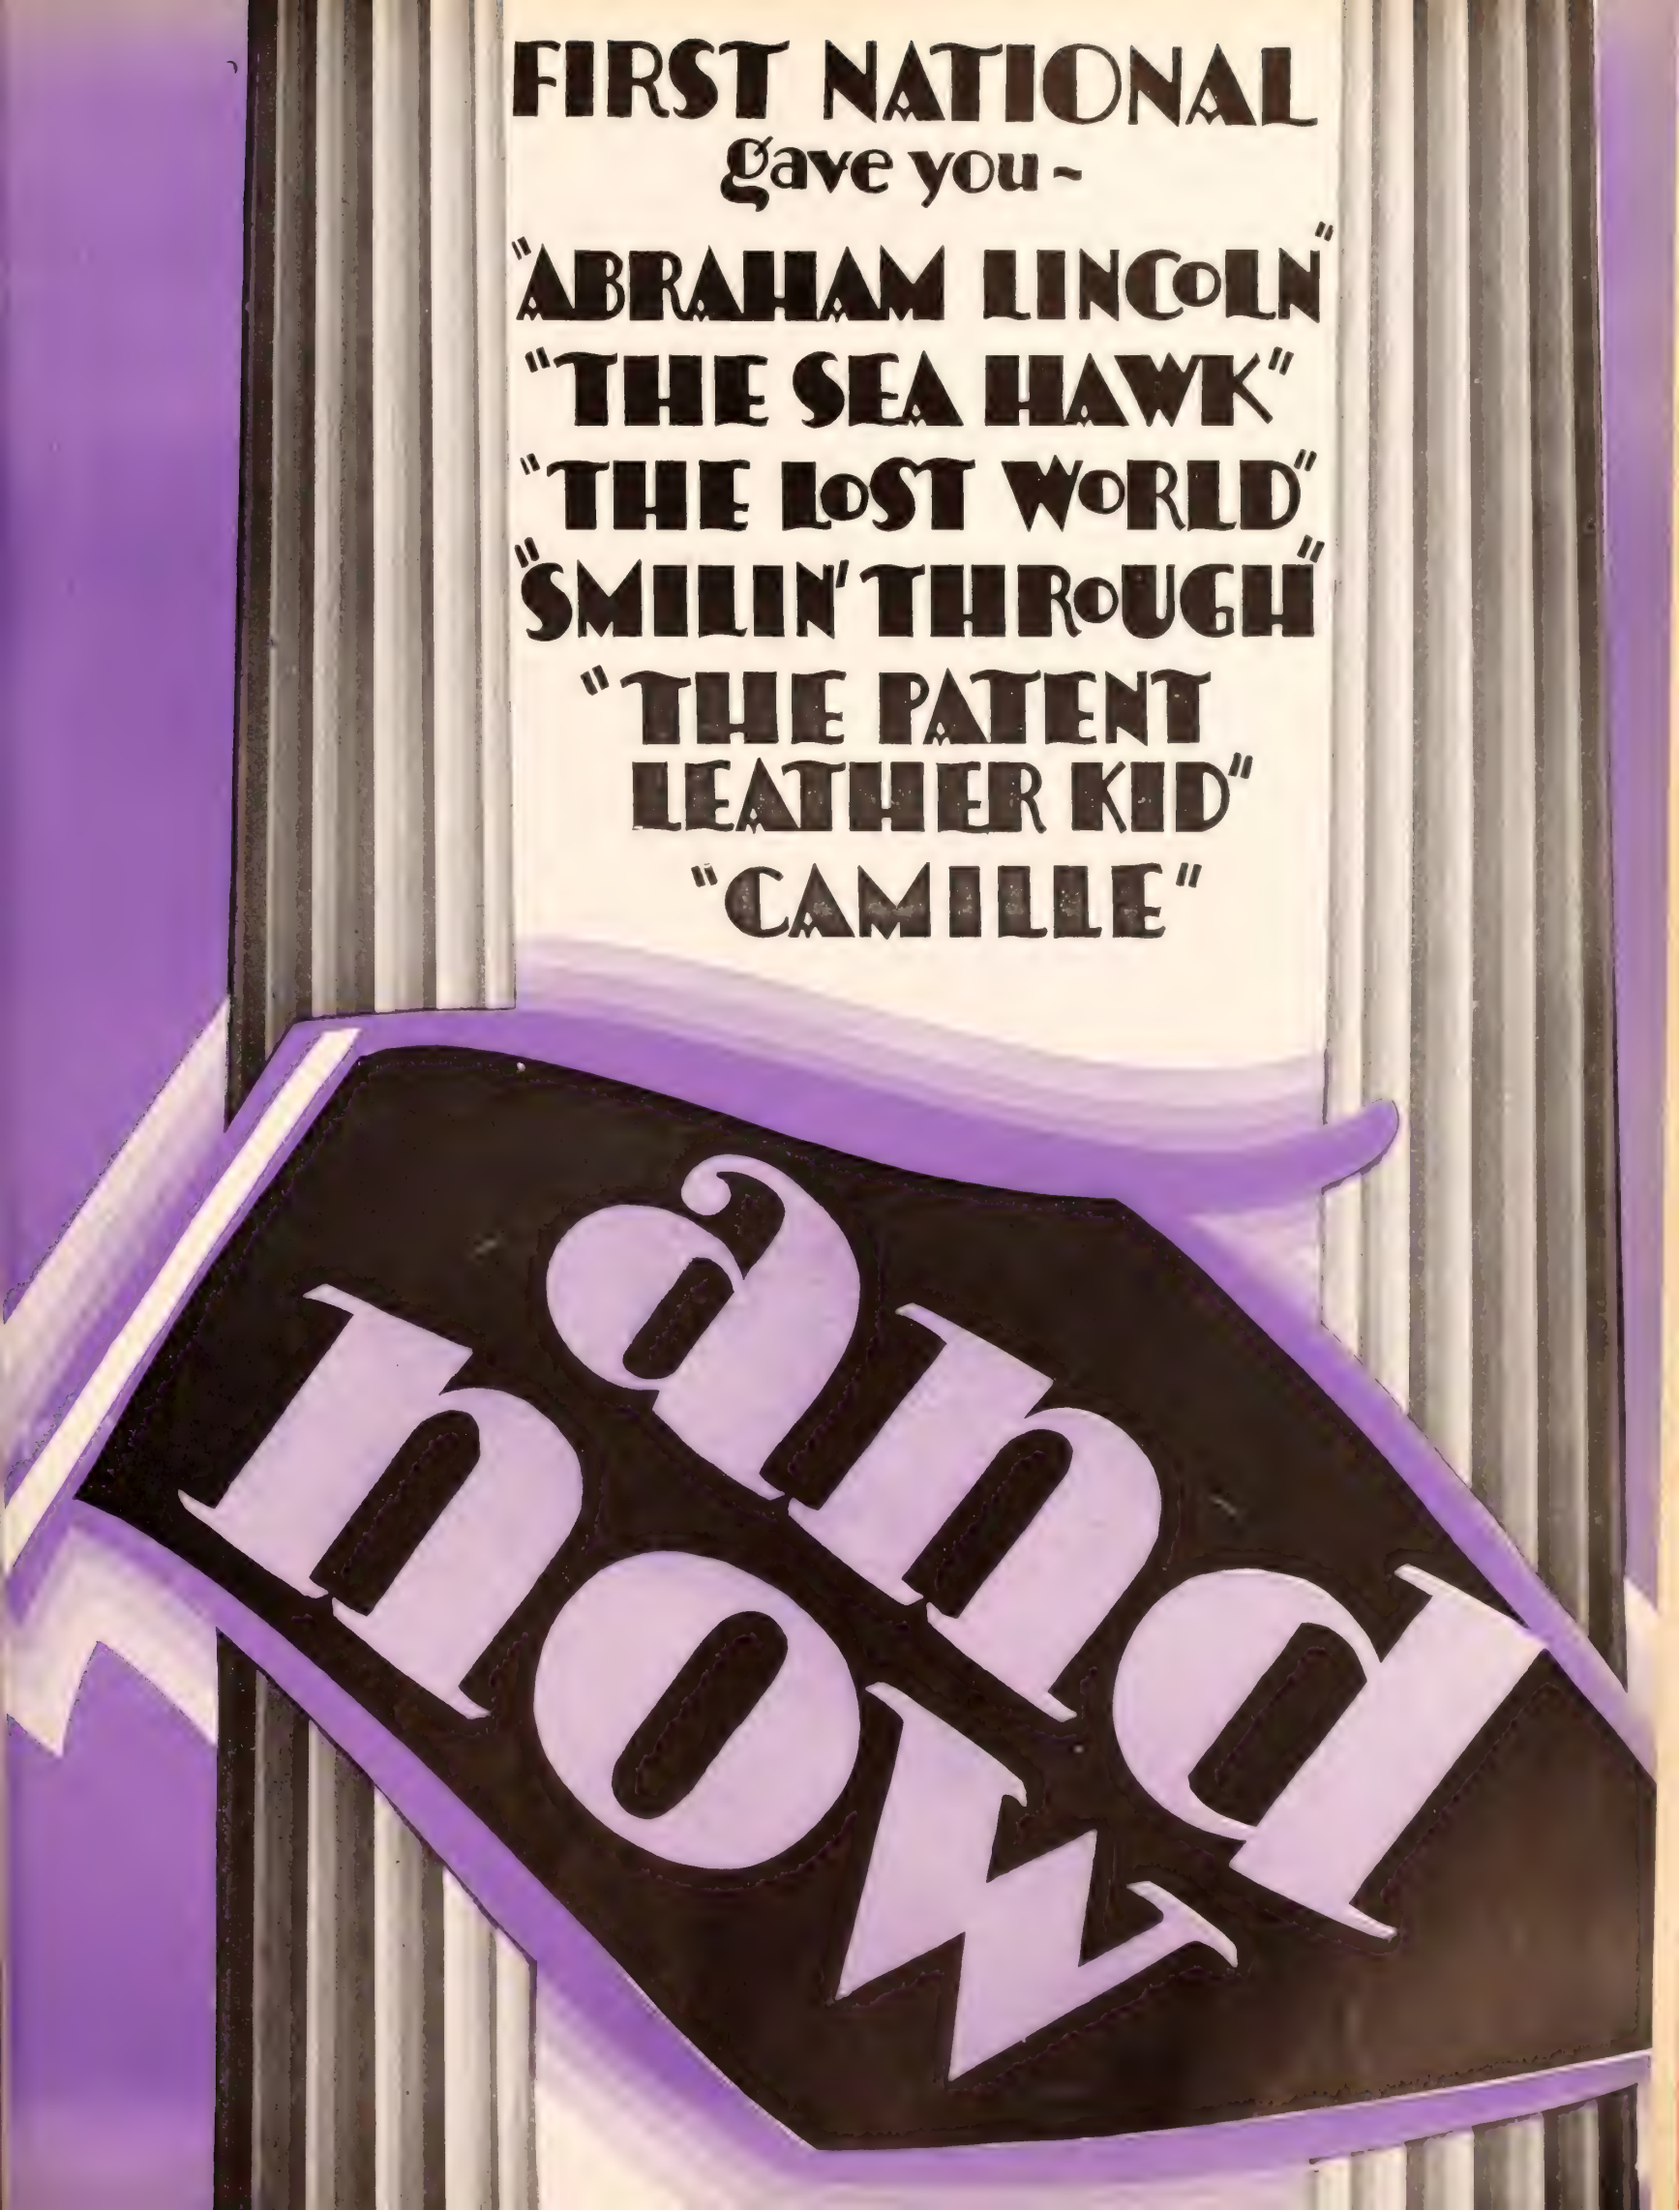
Announcement



EFFECTIVE this week, Motion Picture News announces the appointment of Raymond E. Gallagher as Advertising Manager and Paul M. Abbott as Manager of Accessory Advertising.

Both have been members of the staff of The News for several years, and their appointments are promotions, based upon merit.

Mr. Abbott, as Technical Editor of The News, has established a reputation second to none in his field. He is now given full charge of accessory advertising, which is a highly specialized field and steadily growing in importance.

Mr. Gallagher, who had valuable experience in production and distribution, as well as advertising, before coming to us several years ago, will have exclusive charge of film advertising. He is widely known in the industry, both here and on the Coast. His many friends in the trade will, I know, feel as we do—that he has won, by merit of fine service, the promotion to the important post that is now given him.

The Ford Advertising Campaign

Judged by the Ad. Rules of this Industry It's Crazy

By William A. Johnston

BY all the advertising rules of the motion picture industry, Henry Ford is undoubtedly crazy.

After receiving from the newspapers of the country the most remarkable publicity ever given anything for which the public pays money, Mr. Ford turns about face and buys full pages for five days in about 2000 newspapers at a total cost of nearly $1,500,000. Not only this but the fool dealers in Ford cars added to this some $400,000 worth of space out of their own pockets.

The most powerful papers in the land had been giving Mr. Ford the top center columns of their first pages, putting to one side such news as concerned only the next president of the United States; not only that but they wrote lengthy editorials explaining why they did such an unusual thing, said editorials redounding immensely to the prestige of the new Ford car.

All this space cost Mr. Ford not a nickel.

And then he spends a million and a half—only one tenth of a campaign still to follow—illustrating his models, their selling points and where they may be seen and purchased.

So we are also writing an editorial about Mr. Ford and his car.

The man is undoubtedly crazy.

* * * *

Of course there are things to be said in defense of the man's sanity.

For instance: however much you may inflame the public imagination about a new car, likewise a new star or a new picture—however much you receive or acquire of what is known as general publicity, you still have to tell the good public where and why and when they should spend their money for the thing publicized.

It would be nice if the newspapers would also give away this specific information: but if they did they would go out of business altogether or else back to the newspaper size that followed the war of the American Revolution.

And in that case if a man went suddenly crazy like Henry Ford and wanted to advertise he couldn't do so.

* * * *

Another thing: a crazy manufacturer like Ford arranges, in advance, a margin between the cost and selling price of his car which permits him to advertise it.

He doesn't admit to himself—or his bankers or board of directors—that the thing he makes is so utterly mysterious that his manufacturing executives must have salaries that are the marvel of the civilized world.

He doesn't "shoot the works", and then suddenly find that he is lucky to sell a thing for all it costs to make it.

Then, again, his dealers don't have to hire brass bands and give away premiums to get the people in to buy the car.

And perhaps his advertising—his sturdy willingness to stand openly behind his goods—takes the place of all these various bribes and tricks to win the public favor.

Perhaps he regards advertising as a great economic factor—like his steel supply, and railroads, like every effort and element of manufacture and distribution.

Perhaps he figures it as a great factor in

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

A WIRE from the West assures us that the well known banking interests of the well known picture industry have made a discovery. It is nothing less than this: that overpaid and under—competent production executives are responsible for the high cost of pictures. Which is no less astounding, it would seem, than a present day discovery of the law of gravitation. The next discovery to be made is what causes the high cost of executives.

WE are assured gravely right along by the editorial writers that the big bankers are now in the picture business. One has only to converse a few moments with the said big bankers to learn that this is true. But as to their running the business there arrives out of the said conversation a sizeable doubt. You get the impression from some that they'd like to run away from it. It is also quite plain, whether they will admit it or not, that they are at a loss to know just how to untie and retie the present day Gordian knots of the business they are so heavily interested in.

WE have a banker in the picture business who does know something about it, whether he will admit it or not. We refer to Joseph P. Kennedy of F B O. He has his feet on the ground; he has a distinct policy of production and sticks to it, which is rare in this field. He also sticks to his production budget, which is an admirable thing. Then again—and importantly—he has lots of backing; and the backing, we happen to know, is both sage and solid. So we dare to prophesy that he will go far. He is now announcing a jubilee sales month in February next. We have many sales drives in the business and we let our advertising pages take care of them. The pictures announced, however, come from the studio team of William Le Baron and Edwin King and this fact plus Mr. Kennedy's enthusiasm over them leads us to believe they will be worth watching.

THE departure to Europe of Sidney Olcott seems to us to be of more than passing importance. The best of the European directors have been coming over here for the past two years. Is the tide now turning?

We have little doubt that Sidney Olcott, at the British Lion Studios, where he goes on an indeterminate contract, will make pictures which the American market will have seriously to consider. His ability is well established. He can work within a budget. He knows his Europe—and in this important respect he will do much toward those reciprocal relations which must come about between film Europe and the United States.

A SHREWD and important observer told us a few weeks ago that the much talked of merger of the Stanley and Keith-Albee theatres would not happen. Apparently he was right. There has been nothing so far except headlines.

The Keith-Albee Orpheum merger is a sound financial affair and puts this large group in a strong position.

West Coast in the meantime, with Hayden Stone as the active factor, is apparently developing a Mid West Wesco of most important proportions. With a juncture with Stanley we would have here the largest group of theatres in the country.

Later on these two great camps may be able to negotiate a union.

But much water will flow under the mill before that comes about, if ever it does; and many things may happen one way or another.

UP from the sticks come two of Broadway's current presentation features.

At the Roxy there is a "fashion revue," these many years the annual or semi-annual "big noise" in theatrical affairs on the Main Streets of the country.

Equally "out-of-town" are the antecedents of the "atmosphere stunt" which introduces the Tod Browning-Lon Chaney screen thriller featuring this week's bill at the Capitol. The "stunt" consists of a bit of by-play in which a green spot-light searches about here and there in the auditorium, is brought around to the screen and then a pistol shot is fired as the leader of "London After Midnight" flashes on the screen

Ever admirable is the man, the idea or the thing that from an humble beginning ultimately reaches the top. Mediocrity never does that, only to merit is the road open.

Both the Roxy fashion revue and the atmospheric device at the Capitol are meritorious showmanship inventions, and they have made good on Broadway. Only remarkable is the fact that this is a reversal of the usual order—or is that only a myth?—that the "big ideas" originate in the "big theatres" and then by the imitative filter through the entire scheme of showmanship.

There are more good ideas to be borrowed from the showmen of the small towns, gentlemen of the Broadway picture palaces. You've made a beginning, now go and look further.

"THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY," premiered at the Globe, New York, the other night, is the first full-length motion picture satire. It's a bold attempt to give the screen something different—and how!

The foibles, frailties and ironies of twentieth century married life are moved back a couple of thousand years, via wise-cracking sub-titles, to ancient Greece. The result is corking comedy, which never falls into slapstick, but is sophisticated and merry nearly all the way.

Maria Corda is remarkable as Helen and Lewis Stone gives a capital performance as Menelaos, the husband. Then there is Ricardo Cortez as Paris, the lover. He fills the role adequately. George Fawcett, in a minor part, shines as always.

A most unusual picture is this. Alexander Corda, the director, has handled the whole matter very skillfully. The sets and background would do justice to a super-spectacle, and, of course, their very dimensions and excellence serve to bring out the comedy stuff in high relief.

The picture is one of the season's best. No doubt about that. Also, it gives exhibitors an opportunity to show what they can do with an out-of-the-ordinary film. The possibilities are there, but run-of-the-mine showmanship won't do. Like the picture, it will have to be unusual.

THE Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, under the [illegible] orous presidency of Bruce Gallup, has amended its constitution so as to admit trade paper men in a lay membership classification.

This strikes us as a constructive step, which may well be productive of very fine results. The amendment, which passed unanimously, is as follows:

"Any male person of good moral character, over the age of 21 years, who is and for six consecutive months has been employed by a publication, magazine or newspaper, classified as a trade publication in the motion picture industry, shall be eligible to lay membership in the association."

A. M. BOTSFORD, advertising director of Publix Theatres, takes strenuous exception to an illustrated article, printed in our issue last week, with reference to the advertising of presentations. Mr. Botsford writes:

"IN your issue of December 16, page 1887, you carry an illustrated story that I think you would be willing to correct, with complete knowledge of the facts.

"This story purports to set forth the fact that the de luxe theatres (particularly mentioning two Publix Theatres) are neglecting the motion picture advertising and devoting practically its entire space to the other elements of the theatre's program. To make this point you have unfairly, and I presume innocently, depicted two ads, which, taken by themselves, make your point perfectly clear. The thing which you have neglected to explain in your article is that these ads are separate and individual ads on the stage show, and in the same issue and during the same week other ads were taken which did full justice to the picture.

"A natural inquiry as to why it is necessary to take an ad on the stage show is answered by the fact that in these two cases, Omaha and Dallas, there were two personality leaders who had made their debuts in the town that particular week. Jimmy Ellard went to Omaha from Des Moines, where in the last eight months he has been so successful a personality that he has (and actually without the pictures having much to do with it) turned the house from red into black. His reputation and ability, and his drawing power in every way justified a special advertisement to be taken on him. This is consonant with every principle of good showmanship.

"The same thing is true in Dallas. The personality leader who made his debut that week was Art Landry. I may say that a personality leader has come to mean a definite box-office reaction in the Palace Theatre, Dallas. The patrons of that theatre have come to judge a great portion of their entertainment by the personality leader, and in order to properly merchandise the Palace Theatre show it was absolutely necessary that the personality of Art Landry, a Victor recording artist, should be established in the minds of the patrons, hence the special advertisement on Art Landry, also special tie-up advertisements arranged through the Victor dealers in Dallas.

"By every principle of good showmanship these ads were entirely justified. To pick them out and set them down by themselves as indicating the fact that the motion picture itself has been neglected, is not only unfair but is entirely untrue.

"For some particular reason the present agitation about the manner in which de luxe theatres are handling their stage shows to the detriment of motion pictures, is leading some journals into wrong channels, both in publishing interviews which are manifestly inspired with particular axes to grind and in trying to make points by false and misleading representations.

"I am sure you, of all people, would not care to be placed in this latter category and will be glad to correct the false impression that has been created.

"I will be glad, at any time to suit your convenience, to argue with you on the thesis of stage presentations in the de luxe theatres, and how it affects motion picture production and motion picture theatre grosses. I really think a little more insight on the part of those who are publishing one side of the question would be valuable to a proper understanding of what it is all about."

WE are interested in Mr. Botsford's offer to discuss the effect of presentations on picture production and theatre grosses. This is about the livest topic we know of in the industry at the moment. Mr. Botsford's letter is itself eloquent testimony to that fact. An article from him on this particular angle of the subject would be, we are sure, widely read. We shall be glad to have him submit it for publication.

that important matter of personality, prestige, public good will.

But, then, why continue to argue in favor of a man crazy enough to tell the public when and why and where people can buy his goods when he gets so much free publicity?

In the business of motion pictures advertising is regarded as an expense, and a most irritating one.

And so it will continue to be regarded till men come along who know what advertising is and how to apply it, and who will see that it gets into the budget before the latter is milked dry.

"Presentation" In the Big Cities Backfires on Towns

Many Patrons See Elaborate Shows Away from Home and Return To Complain About Their Local Theatres

By J. S. DICKERSON

Associate Editor, Motion Picture News

THE adding of some sort of presentation number to the film bill, as has been done in many of the best theatres of the United States, has been the topic of much conversation—and still is, for that matter. No small amount of adverse opinion can be found in practically every branch of the industry relative to the practice and this criticism is not confined to any one section or any one class of people.

Plenty of exhibitors join the anvil chorus, even though they themselves are among the alleged offenders.

But, no one has as yet reported that the cash customers are complaining and in that fact lies the answer to the continued use of the presentation act in the houses where the custom has been inaugurated and to the added number of theatres that are adopting it in various parts of the country.

In the minds of an audience, all shows are comparative. When the big city downtown houses give more for the money than has been served locally, it is viewed as a bargain only until such a time as competition gives an equally big show for the same admission and then the public readjusts its expectations to a new standard.

The idea back of presentation acts, vaudeville or even better pictures, of course, is fundamentally, so far as the individual theatre is concerned, attracting new patrons to the theatre and the taking away from some other houses a part of their hitherto natural patronage. How far this theory actually works probably defies actual measurement.

Generally speaking, it is safe to say that the presentation act has allowed the big houses to set new attendance records and permitted them to charge admission prices that would never have been possible with a straight picture policy. Therefore, for the big house the presentation idea is justified and a success, although there are some wrinkled brows where the presentation act theatre owners also have second string houses unable to meet the competition of the first string theatres.

In other words, there is nothing wrong with presentation and a big show for the money if you have only the one class of theatre to take care of.

The net result, however, when all classes of theatres are concerned and all theatre owners are considered, is quite another matter.

It Has Backfired

To epitomize it, it could be said that the presentation idea has backfired. It was designed to meet a condition, existing in the large theatres with a big investment "nut," where a larger gross revenue than it was fair to expect straight pictures could command, was necessary.

But when the neighborhood theatre, hurt by the competition of the presentation house, tried to hold its business by a similar policy so far as was practicable, the standard of entertainment, as the public saw it, was simply stepped up a peg. Also, a greater number of people became acquainted with the more-for-the-money standard and, in turn, the public demand extended further away from its initial starting point, the big new house, in the big town.

At the present writing, it can be safely asserted that it has not only reached the neighborhood houses in the large cities and the first runs of nearby towns but actually has worked its way down into the small villages.

Modern transportation, makes Oshkosh a neighbor of Chicago and Grand Island, Neb., next door to Omaha. When Oshkosh residents see a Chicago Loop presentation show, in a Loop theatre, as they do in sufficient numbers to act as more than scouts, Oshkosh theatres hitherto considered the equal of either New York or Chicago, suffer in comparison. The greater number of people who journey to Omaha, on whatever mission, if any, and all of these are bound to see the big show in the big new theatre, the greater number of people begin to feel the local exhibitors are not keeping up to date and the more often they stay away from the local shows, because of this undefined idea that they are no longer getting their money's worth.

So, Grand Island, not without misgivings, tries to keep his patrons happy and satisfied. Some sort of presentation, a pretty cheap imitation usually, of course ,is tried out with fairly satisfactory results. Business is better, new faces are noted at the box office window, the gross is bigger and sometimes the net is pleasing.

Towns Feel the Pinch

But again the pinch is felt by the "20 mile away towns" and then in turn there is the attempt to do something to meet this falling off in business on the average picture. (The big ones don't seem to be hurt.)

It is in this class of town that there is more than just loud wailing on the part of the theatre owner. He has no illusions about how far he can go in the matter of overhead or just how much he is handicapped by the lack of a fine new theatre.

The net result, so far, of the presentation backfire in the small town houses is to seriously decrease attendance. Exhibitors are reluctant to reduce admissions with rental prices at their present level and there is considerable opinion that smaller prices would not materially increase business anyway. Also to complicate this situation, is the insistence of distributors in certain instances that their productions be shown at a specified top, usually above the regular price, which the theatre owners are afraid is already too high.

So the average small exhibitor is watching his gross and net shrink slowly, except on the big features, hoping for better times but fearful of the final result.

Net Profit Is Less

Where circuits operate in the smaller towns, there will undoubtedly be an attempt to supplement the film bill, with some sort of a stage show. Just how far anyone can develop presentation for the smaller towns on a profitable basis is a matter of varied opinion. Vaudeville, except for an occasional "wildcat" act, is too expensive for the average town, and the quality of the acts available too uncertain.

Music seems to hold forth the best opportunities, and in this connection there has been a notable advance. Organists good enough to be featured are playing good instruments, and in many cases very capable small orchestras have been developed. Where this has been done, business is holding up well, but the net profit is still much less than the theatre owners have been making, and there is a good deal of complaining.

The demand for better pictures (usually for less money) is as great in the smaller towns as in the large ones, where it is admitted that the picture is still the actual box office attraction.

The difference in gross business between the box office attraction in the presentation houses and the average feature is easily twenty-five per cent. A competent Middle West managing director in a new house playing stage acts, admits that the feature is seventy-five per cent of the draw, and then adds the paradox, that without the presentation numbers he could not get his present top price or play to half the people that he does with the present policy.

So the whole problem comes back to its starting place.

You can't blame the presentation house people for using something that they all agree is essential for their particular needs; you can sympathize with the theatre owners who can't compete on the same basis, and certainly we have to admit that the public will select what they believe is the best for their money.

Butterfield to Invade Northern Michigan for State Circuit

THE W. S. Butterfield Theatres are planning early invasion of Northern Michigan, which when completed will give them a complete circuit of the state. With a booking office planned for Chicago or Milwaukee and a unit show that will cover the larger houses, one or two vaudeville acts will also be available for the smaller towns.

The plans call for the erection of theatres extending from the Soo to Calumet, Michigan, and down to the Michigan border on the West side of Michigan to Milwaukee. This Peninsula expansion program will be in charge of E. J. Miller, who for fifteen years was connected with the Fitzpatrick and McElroy circuit.

Butterfield will build theatres at Battle Creek, Jackson and Muskegon. During the year the circuit has opened new houses at Ann Arbor, Flint, Kalamazoo, Grand Haven, East Lansing, Niles and Saginaw. Other houses are under way at Jackson, Battle Creek and Muskegon.

William P. Gray Passes

Active Manager of Publix in New England Succumbs on Coast, Where He Had Gone for Rest

WILLIAM P. GRAY, active manager of Publix theatre in the New England territory, passed away last week at Beverly Hills, California, where he had gone for a stay of several months to regain his health and strength. He departed for the west coast from Boston three weeks ago. His health had been impaired following an operation in Boston in September.

R. D. Maron, head of the Gray Supply Company in Boston, accompanied the remains back from California to Boston, where they arrived last Wednesday. The body was at once taken to Lewiston, Maine, his former home city, for services and interment.

Gray was born in Denver 48 years ago and when a small boy returned to New England with his parents. He had his first venture into what approximates show business as organizer and manager of a professional basketball team which toured the country. The venture was a marked success, and, as a result, Gray decided to devote his efforts to activities to amuse the public.

With the advent of motion pictures he leased a hall on the fourth floor of a building in Portsmouth at $20 a week and established his first motion picture theatre. His box-office statement for the first night showed 50 cents. Within a few weeks it was netting a profit of $200 a month.

Gray's next venture was in Portland, Maine, where he bought a dance hall and added a motion picture theatre to it. This prospered from the start and he built larger theatres and established branch offices in other parts of the New England states. In 1921 he was stricken with pneumonia, but he insisted that a telephone be installed in his bedroom and from his bed he directed the activities of the 114 theatres that comprised the Gray Circuit. Since that time new theatres have been added, bringing the total to 150.

Gray was president and treasurer of the Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Corporation. When Publix took over and expanded the Olympia Theatres, Inc., Gray was made active head of the company. This is the holding company for New England Publix Theatres.

New Commissioner Urged

New of Hays Organization Asks Trade Representative for Far East Territory

BERT NEW, Washington representativeof the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America is seeking increased funds for the motion picture section of the Department of Commerce, so as to permit the employment of a film trade commissioner in the Far East.

Members of the sub-committee of the Department of Commerce were appealed to to provide the necessary funds for the protection of the American film industry. It was pointed out to the sub-committee, of which Representative Milton W. Shreve of Pennsylvania is chairman, that when an emergency arose in Europe last year steps were immediately taken to provide for a trade commissioner in that area.

Within the past few weeks, Mr. New declared, there has arisen in the Far East an emergency very similar in nature. No less than four countries—Australia, New Zealand, India and the Straits Settlements—are agitating actively against American films and are very likely to pass legislation which will materially cut down the showings of American films. Besides this, in China and the Dutch East Indies, our pictures have been pirated and illegally shown, and in Japan local production of films is rapidly threatening to drive American motion pictures from the market.

"This state of affairs is all the more serious because the Orient has tremendous potentialities as a market for American films," he pointed out. "In 1913 we sent about 4,000,000 feet of films to this territory as against 17,000,000 feet to Europe; in 1926 this had reached a total of 62,000,000 feet, only 1,000,000 less than to Europe, with Australia standing as our largest quantity market in the world, India eighth, Japan tenth and New Zealand twelfth. This rate will be about maintained in 1927, but in the face of the difficulties just mentioned future expansion in this region is problematical unless the motion picture industry can secure the special type of service which has proved so beneficial to it in Europe during the past year and a half."

Sunday Show Movement Spreading in Kentucky

Since the recent state and city election in Louisville there is a widespread movement in favor of opening theatres on Sunday, throughout the state of Kentucky. Within the last week, an announcement has been made by exhibitors that theatres in Paducah, Frankfort, Ashland, Danville, and one or two other points, will soon be open on Sunday. Already the houses in Louisville, Lexington, Covington, Newport, Bellevue, Dayton and Hazard are operating on Sunday.

The suggestion has even been made that an effort will be made at the coming session of the Kentucky Legislature to repeal the "blue Sunday" law, and, instead, legalize Sunday shows.

But Few Picture Firms Secure New York Papers

In papers filed with the Department of State at Albany during the past week, the following companies proposed to engage in the motion picture industry in New York state, either in the production end of the business or in the operation of motion picture theatres: F & S Amusement Corporation, $10,000, with Carl Mittenthal, Murray Bernstein and Harry Ostrov, New York City; Sesom Theatre, Inc., $10,000, Peter Lewis, Lillian Cunningham, New York City; Florence Abramson, Middle Village.

D. S. Mitchell, Sales Chief for "U," Dead

DONALD S. MITCHELL, sales manager, on the West Coast, for Universal, died last Sunday in the Dante Sanitarium in San Francisco following a sudden heart attack. His wife was in Honolulu at the time of her husband's passing, but has rushed back to San Francisco. Mr. Mitchell was only 33 years old, one of the youngest executives in the industry. Strangely coinciding with the news of Mitchell's death was the letter of congratulation from the stricken man to Morton Van Praag, his newly appointed superior, who had just been raised to the post of Western sales director.

Mitchell was born in Whitewater, Wisconsin, and started in the film business as shipping clerk with Universal's Los Angeles office in 1915, ultimately working his way up to the rank of salesman. After leaving the Laemmle company, he returned to it in 1921 and the following year was appointed short subject sales manager and later assistant exchange manager. He ascended to his West Coast position in 1926.

Bill Would Ban Block Booking and Blind Booking

Measure Introduced by Senator Brookhart Would Give New Powers to Federal Trade Commission

By CLARENCE L. LINZ

Washington Correspondent, Motion Picture News

WASHINGTON, December 13.—Block booking would be made illegal, as would blind booking and restraint upon the leasing of motion picture films, under a bill introduced in the Senate December 13 by Senator Brookhart, of Iowa.

The ban on block booking would become effective six months after the enactment of the bill; blind booking would be illegal after 18 months from enactment, and after six months after the adoption of the bill it would become unlawful for any producer or distributor to allocate, lease or rent films to theatres which are affiliated directly or indirectly with such producer or distributor, or with any other producer or distributor, without affording all competing exhibitors an equal opportunity to bid for such films in free and open competition.

Administration of the act would be vested in the Federal Trade Commission, and violations of its provisions would be punishable, upon conviction, by a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or both.

Brookhart's Statement

"A continuous supply of attractive motion picture subjects is essential to the successful conduct of a film exchange or motion picture theatre," it was explained by Senator Brookhart in introducing his measure. "Certain producers and distributors who, by means of direct ownership or through total or partial stock control, leases, operating agreements, or otherwise, are also exhibitors, enjoy a controlling advantage over distributors and exhibitors who are not so affiliated. Such controlling advantage is theirs by virtue of controlling the production as well as the distribution and exhibition of films. Their control of production and distribution has resulted in conditions that have made it necessary for many exhibitors to affiliate with the producers and distributors in order to obtain an adequate supply of suitable motion picture subjects, such affiliations being established by means of giving to a producer or distributor control of such exhibitor's theatre or theatres through total or partial stock control, leases, operating agreements, or otherwise, or by former exhibitors acquiring a substantial interest or control in a producer or distributor.

"As a result of this condition, theatres controlled by or affiliated with one distributor are in many cases operated by another distributor. There is an increasing number of cases of control of a theatre or group of theatres by two or more distributors. Such common, interlocking interest or control by one distributor in the theatres of another distributor results in restricting the supply of suitable copyrighted motion picture films obtainable by exhibitors who are not so affiliated with a producer or distributor. The continually increasing control of motion picture theatres by producers and distributors results in restricting the number of motion picture theatres in which may be exhibited the film productions of producers and distributors not affiliated with motion picture theatres.

"Certain practices have grown up in the distribution of films, the continuance of which tends to increase the restrictions above described and threatens to create a monopoly in the business of producing, distributing and exhibiting copyrighted motion pictures. These practices consist of (a) blind booking and block booking; (b) unfair discrimination in the allocation of product in favor of exhibitors affiliated with producers and distributors and to the prejudice of exhibitors not so affiliated."

What Bill Provides

The important sections of the bill follow:

SEC. 3. A continuous supply of attractive motion picture subjects is essential to the successful conduct of a film exchange or motion picture theatre. Certain producers and distributors who by means of direct ownership or through total or partial stock control, leases, operating agreements, or otherwise are also exhibitors enjoy a controlling advantage over distributors and exhibitors who are not so affiliated. Such controlled advantage is theirs by virtue of controlling the production as well as the distribution and exhibition of films. Their control of production and distribution has resulted in conditions that have made it necessary for many exhibitors to affiliate with the producers and distributors in order to obtain an adequate supply of suitable motion picture subjects, such affiliations being established by means of giving to a producer or distributor control of such exhibitor's theatre or theatres through total or partial stock control, leases, operating agreements, or otherwise, or by former exhibitors acquiring a substantial interest or control in a producer or distributor. As a result of this condition, theatres controlled by or affiliated with one distributor are in many cases operated by another distributor. There is an increasing number of cases of control of a theatre or group of theatres by two or more distributors. Such common, interlocking interest and control by one distributor in the theatres of another distributor results in restricting the supply of suitable copyrighted motion picture films obtainable by exhibitors who are not so affiliated with a producer or distributor. The continually increasing control of motion picture theatres by producers and distributors results in restricting the number of motion picture theatres in which may be exhibited the film productions of producers and distributors not affiliated with motion picture theatres.

Certain practices have grown up in the distribution of films, the continuance of which tends to increase the restrictions above described and threatens to create a monopoly in the business of producing, distributing, and exhibiting copyrighted motion pictures. These practices consist of (a) blind booking and block booking, (b) unfair discrimination in the allocation of product in favor of exhibitors affiliated with producers and distributors and to the prejudice of exhibitors not so affiliated.

Blind booking and block booking is the system of [illegible] to view the product he is to lease and to select such part thereof as he deems suitable to the tastes of his [illegible] is compelled to [illegible] a given [illegible] for [illegible] a given [illegible] an exhibitor to lease films which are not suitable for [illegible] films which from the descriptive matter he concludes his patrons will demand and which he must have in the successful conduct of his business. This system of [illegible] to show films of poor quality or to suffer the loss of [illegible] producer or distributor having no theatre affiliations, because the latter by block booking successfully monopolize the playing dates of the exhibitors.

This practice of blind and block booking is frequently waived for the benefit of theatres affiliated with pro[illegible]

By the practice of arbitrary allocation of product theatres affiliated with producers and distributors are arbitrarily given the choice of product without affording the unaffiliated exhibitor competing with such controlled or affiliated theatre the opportunity to bid or compete for such choice product.

SEC. 4. Six months after the date of this act it shall be unlawful for any producer or distributor of copyrighted motion picture films in the current of interstate commerce to lease or offer for lease for exhibition in any theatre or theatres copyrighted motion picture films in a block or group of two or more films at a designated lump-sum price for the entire block or group only and to require the exhibitor to lease all such films or permit him to lease none; or to lease or offer for lease for exhibition such motion picture films in a block or group of two or more at a designated lump-sum price for the entire block or group and at separate and several prices for separate and several films, or for a number or numbers thereof less than the total number, which total or lump-sum price and separate and several prices shall bear to each other such relation as to operate as an unreasonable restraint upon the freedom of an exhibitor to select and lease for use and exhibition only such film or films of such block or group as he may desire and prefer to procure for exhibition, or shall bear such relation to each other as to tend to require an exhibitor to lease such an entire block or group or forego the lease of any portion or portions thereof, or shall bear such relation to each other that the effect of such proposed contract for the lease of such films may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any part of the certain line of commerce among the several states, to wit, the business of the production, distribution and exhibition of motion picture films.

SEC. 5. After eighteen months from the date of this act it shall be unlawful for any producer or distributor of motion picture films, in the current of interstate commerce, to make or enter into any contract, agree[illegible] films for exhibition to the public, unless such copyrighted film or films have been completed and are available for immediate release and without first affording the exhibitor desiring to lease such film or films an opportunity to view a projection of such film or films upon a screen if he so desires.

[illegible] it shall be unlawful for any producer or distributor to allocate, lease, or rent copyrighted films to theatres [illegible] distributor without affording all competing exhibitors [illegible] open competition.

SEC. 7. Administration of this act is vested in the Federal Trade Commission, which is hereby authorized [illegible] for giving effect to the provisions hereof, including the power, after full hearing, to fix the differentials which may be observed between the price of a block or group of films and the price of a separate and several film or films less than such block or group as mentioned in section 4 of this act.

SEC. 8. Any person who shall knowingly and wilfully violate any provision of this act or any order, [illegible] sion, shall, upon conviction in any district court of [illegible] than $10,000 and not less than $1,000, or to imprison[illegible] and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

Half Million Building Expansion Program for First National

A HALF million dollar building expansion program at First National's Burbank studios will be inaugurated at once, according to announcement by Clifford B. Hawley, president of the company, who has just returned from the west coast. The work will extend over a period of three months.

The program calls for the erection of additional stages, a building especially devoted to scientific photography, and additional executive offices for the fast growing personnel at the studio.

In regard to the extension plans, Hawley said: "We are definitely committed to a policy of expansion of all our activities, of which the details will be announced by Mr. Watterson Rothacker shortly after the first of the year, and which I expect will have definitely developed by the time of my next visit in the early Spring."

Congress in Movietone

Second Issue of Fox News Reel Accurately Depicts Important Events of Week

THE opening of the seventieth session of Congress is the leading subject in the current issue of Fox Movietone News, released as issue No. 2 on December 10th. It marks the first time in history that the scene of the Congress and its voice are reproduced on the screen.

The attendance at the opening was not limited this year, as it was in former years, and the Fox cameramen shot all of the interesting highlights. From the first exterior scene of the Capitol, with accompanying street noises, to the customary speeches from the House of Representatives dais, the subject is given an accurate and unique treatment.

Speaker Nicholas Longworth is shown taking the oath of office, and William Tyler Page, clerk of the House, is heard as he reads President Coolidge's annual message to the assembled Representatives.

While the Congressional opening is the feature subject in the Movietone issue, it is not without other unusual attractions. Events in connection with the dedication of the Women's Transept at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City are seen and heard. The singing of the choristers and the music of the Cathedral organ blend perfectly into the beautiful interior setting. On the ground of the proposed Transept, Bishop Manning is heard in an eloquent dedicatory address, following which a giant steam shovel bites into the earth to start excavation.

Scenes are shown and the incidental sounds heard, even to the gurgling of the liquor and the smashing of bottles, as $600,000 worth of confiscated Scotch is destroyed at the Army Base in Brooklyn.

In a Movietone interview, Miss Kathlyn Sullivan tells of her duties as one of the three San Francisco policewoman, while the concluding scene, showing a group of serenaders in a gondola on the Grand Canal in Venice, lends a touch of variety, which is enhanced by the reproduction of the Italian songs.

M-G-M Studios Active

Production Nears Peak With Eight Features in Work and Thirteen in Cutting Room

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER studios are in the midst of the greatest production schedule since the tri-studio merger of three years ago, with eight features in production, thirteen in the process of cutting and editing, and a large number in the final stages of preparation for actual filming.

Robert J. Flaherty and W. S. Van Dyke recently departed for the South Seas where they will co-direct "Southern Skies." This makes three big specials before the camera and two others in the cutting room.

Of the pictures now being filmed, John Gilbert is starred in "The Cossacks," which George Hill is directing; Norma Shearer is starring in an unnamed vehicle which Sam Wood is directing, and William Haines is being starred under the direction of Jack Conway in "The Smart Set."

Joan Crawford and James Murray are featured in "Rose Marie," adapted from the very popular musical comedy stage success. Lon Chaney is making "The Big City," which Tod Browning is directing, and Tim McCoy is working in "Riders of the Dark." George K. Arthur and Karl Dane are being directed by Robert Z. Leonard in "Baby Mine."

Norma Shearer is preparing to do "Trelawney of the Wells" under the direction of Sidney Franklin. Other stories are being prepared for John Gilbert, Greta Garbo, Ramon Novarro and George K. Arthur and Karl Dane.

Lon Chaney is next to be starred in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," while two other stories soon to be filmed are, Gaston Le Roux' "The Convict Ship" and Peter B. Kyne's "Tide of the Empire."

Two of the specials in the cutting room are "The Trail of '98," featuring Ralph Forbes, Dolores Del Rio and Harry Carey, and King Vidor's twelve reel production, "The Crowd," featuring James Murray and Eleanor Boardman. Other pictures now being cut and edited are, "The Divine Woman," "The Patsy," "The Wind," "Law of the Range," "Spoilers of the West," "His Night" and "Mixed Marriages.'

Business Associates Fete Moe Silver

Moe Silver, who recently was advanced from the Boston office to the home office of the Mark Strand Theatre Corporation in New York, where he took over the position formerly held by the late Walter Hays, was a recent guest of honor at a dinner given by business friends at the Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston. He was made the recipient of several gifts, including a platinum watch and chain from his New England associates in the picture industry, and was lauded in many speeches.

Toastmaster for the occasion was Thomas H. Meehan, of Worcester. Speakers included Moe Mark, Major Sidney H. Cliff, Sunday motion picture censor for the Department of Public Safety, who represented Governor Fuller; John M. Casey, Boston city theatre censor who represented Mayor Nichols; Judge J. Ablert Brackett, of Boston; Mayor John J. Whalen, of Chelsea; Joseph M. Levenson, Max Levenson and Nathan Sallinger, directors of the Mark Strand Corporation.

Tom Mix's Father Passes on at Dubois Home

Edwin E. Mix, father of Tom Mix, died suddenly at his home in Dubois, Pennsylvania, of heart failure on November 29. He was 73 years old. He is survived by his widow, with whom he celebrated his golden wedding anniversary two years ago, and Mrs. Esther Bell and Mrs. Emma Yoder, both of Dubois, besides the film star.

The elder Mix was born at Mix Run, near Dubois, spending the first 30 years of his life there. He then went to Dubois and assumed charge of the horses of the lumber mill owner, John E. Dubois. Young Tom got his training in horsemanship while his father was in charge of these horses.

Fox Planning Third House at Philly

FOX FILMS is having plans drawn up for a new theatre at 17th and Market Streets, Philadelphia, one block from the present Fox theatre, which, it is rumored, will be dismantled and converted into an office building. The proposed house will seat 4,000 and, with the office structure with which it will be housed, will represent an expenditure of $4,000,000, this sum exclusive of the cost of the site, it is said. A policy similar to Roxy's in New York will prevail to be started shortly after February 1, when plans have been completed by Howard Crane of Detroit.

The Fox-Locust and the recently opened Fox theatres have been offering Stanley strong opposition, the Fox and the Stanley both having gone in heavily for presentations.

The site of the present Fox Theatre is sought, it is reported, by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

First National P. C. T. Merge

Alliance Also Brings in Stanley Company and Powerful Subsidiaries of British Concern

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES, INC., of New York, has entered into an alliance with Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd., of England, the largest theatre holders on the other side of the Atlantic, which provides for production, distribution and exhibition of pictures. It is the first large international alliance, and it gives First National product a wide preference in all of the numerous theatres controlled by P. C. T.

The deal, which is a three-way affair, was engineered by E. Bruce Johnson, vice president in charge of foreign distribution for First National. The contract was signed in London on November 29, and was ratified by the First National Board of Directors during the week. The announcement of the consummation of the contract was made in London by Will Evans, managing director of P. C. T.

The alliance is a considerably involved one, bringing together three powerful units, the British angle of which is governed by a strong group of financiers. The different units in the agreement are Standard Film Company, Ltd., and Film Investment Company, Ltd., of England, as one party, First National Pictures Co., Inc., of New York, which controls First National Pictures, Ltd., the English distributing unit of First National, as another part, and the Stanley Company of America.

The provisions of the agreement bring about a consolidation of Pathe Freres Cinema, Ltd., with First National Pictures, Ltd. The former is the parent organization of Pathe Gazette, Pathe Pictorial and Eves Films, while the latter holds the franchises for the United Kingdom for all First National releases, as well as the British rights for the product of Deutsche Film Unione, a German concern owned equally by J. Von Lustig and Richard Weininger, German bankers, and by First National Pictures, Inc., of New York.

E. Bruce Johnson

As another angle to the completed contract, First National Pictures, Ltd., and Pathe Freres Cinema, Ltd., will form a combined company under the name of First National-Pathe Company, Ltd., which will confine its activities to distribution in the United Kingdom.

Productions also figures prominently in the deal, a part of which provides for a unit to function under the title of First National-Pathe Production Company, Ltd., with a capitalization of $1,000,000, of which the British interests will subscribe 51 per cent and First National 49 per cent. The third unit will be a theatre unit, which will build a 5,000-seat house in the West End of London..

To adequately provide for the tremendous distribution angle Pathe and First National exchanges in England will be merged, with the better office of each concern in each of the key cities being retained.

Production plans have been provided for to a certain extent in the agreement. It is definitely decided that six pictures will be produced immediately in England by the combination. The first of these will be "Confetti," while the others have not yet been announced.

Will Evans, who has largely guided the destinies of P. C. T. through some trying periods, particularly those immediately following the war, has been named as managing director of all three companies. The directors will be, in addition to Evans, E. Bruce Johnson and Major Rex Benson, the latter head of Robert Benson and Company, British bankers.

It is figured that the consummation of the deal brings together combined assets of more than $150,000,000. The Stanley Company lists assets of $100,000,000, P. C. T., $25,000,000 and First National, $17,500,000. The assets of the Standard Film Company, Ltd., and the Film Investment Company, Ltd., will bring the amount well over $150,000,000. The two British companies are controlled by a group headed by Lords Ashfield and Beaverbrook, Major Holt, son of the governor of the Royal Bank of Canada, and Will Evans.

How New German Quota Works

Authoritative Article by News Correspondent on Drastic Regulations; American Profits Not Necessarily Cut

By HEINRICH FRAENKEL

Berlin Correspondent, Motion Picture News

MY cable published in an earlier issue has given the outlines of the complete overthrow of the principles which have been governing the German import situation for some five years.

While so far there has been no limit for imports, the only restriction having been the necessity for the distributor to handle an equal footage of home made and foreign productions, the new regulation provides for an actual limitation of imports, according to the estimated demands of the market.

Starting April 1, 1928, up to June 30, 1929, the total amount of foreign features distributable on the German market will be limited to 260. There will be no restriction, however, for educationals, news-reels and "shorts" up to 1,500 feet. No foreign feature, after April 1, may be distributed in Germany without a license. During 1928 only 85 lessons will be issued, and another 85 during the first half of 1929. The balance of 90 licenses will be kept by the authorities as an Emergency reserve, to be disposed of at their discretion. Transfer of licenses will not, under any circumstances, be permitted. District distributors ("state righters") may join their claims for licenses.

How the Scheme Will Be Worked

Individual distributors will share in the total allowance of 170 features on a special scale worked out according and in proportion to the amount of German features handled by them in the period from Jan. 1, 1926, to Nov. 19, 1925. Every picture actually in production at the end of this year and censored until April 30, 1928, will be credited to the renter handling it, improving his position in the future scale, apart from allowing him the right to import a corresponding foreign feature under the old Kontingent law which, after all, is still valid until next April.

The result of this stipulation will naturally be a tremendous filling of production during the next few weeks, and, obviously, December 31 will be the first stamp day of scores of pictures, just in time to prove their owner's position in the fight for foreign picture rights. Anyway, the short time will not allow of materially altering the figures of the following list showing the amount of German features censored for individual companies during the critical period, thus disclosing their future possibilities for handling foreign product:

Emelka	48
Ufa	35
Parufamet	32
National	24
Phoebus	22
Bruckmann	20
Terra	16
Aafa	15
D. L. S.	12
Domo-Strauss	10
Matador	10
Dtsch. Nordische	9
Hegewald	9
Fox	7
Rofa (Sophar)	7
Pantomim	7
Meinent	6
Ziehm	6
Albö	5
Defina	5
Prometheus	5
Messtro	2
Ama	2
F. P. S.	2

Companies with one picture only are not considered at all. As far as the American companies are concerned, Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn (Parufamet) are rather high up in the list, Fox and Universal (Matador) are just in the middle. First National (Defina), with the bad luck of having only started some months ago, is still way down. Anyway it might be expected that the company's rapid German production will add considerably to that modest 5, as long as there is time, and will prominently figure among those who will start several productions, just a few hours before going home to change for their new year's eve party.

What About Newcomers?

So far, there has been no official statement regarding the rather important problem, what (if any) allowance newcomers in the business should get who have no record of former year's business. Obviously it would be rather unfair to give them no chance of handling any foreign product. Evidently the "Emergency reserve" of 90 licenses will be used by the authorities in cases like that.

It might seem strange that the new regulation has been scheduled for 15 months instead of 12, viz., up to the end of June, improve their owner's position in the fight 1929. This is due to the fact that the agreements of the recent Geneva conference will take effect July 1, 1929, which is bound to alter the whole position and to, probably, necessitate another entire revision of the import situation. Motion Picture News readers will remember that the object of the Geneva conference having been the abolition of all import restrictions granting possible exceptions, no such exception has so far been officially discussed; as far as films are concerned. As a matter of fact, the former German situation did not call for any official discussion on the point, as the old German Kontingent law (just as the new British quota law) did not provide for any restriction proper of imports, but just for a regulation according to home production. The new German settlement, however, obviously is an import restriction, and thus falls within the sphere of the Geneva conference.

Why the System Was Changed

The reason for the sudden decision to do away with the old quota system, and to actually limit the number of imports,—this reason will be obvious to Motion Picture News readers who remember some startling figures published a few months ago and emphasizing the fact that the German market is hopelessly overcrowded with material and that, as a matter of fact, at least 50 per cent more pictures are offered than the market can swallow without an indigestion resulting in the increasing difficulty to get play dates, and in the impossibility to have any picture properly exploited.

It is all very well to say that the elementary economic law of supply and demand would have righted matters after all. Economic principles are all right. But sometimes, before they set to work, a dozen sound companies may have busted. That's why the trade (or rather the government) preferred to take matters into their own hands, as long as there is time. It is another story how the scheme will work in practice, and still another one, what will happen after June 30, the year after next.

Effect On U. S. Business

There is no doubt that the American business (standing for roughly 90 per cent of what is called "foreign imports") will most considerably suffer by this change; anyway, as far as quantity of features placed on the market is concerned. While so far the American footage on the German market almost equalled the German one, the future relation will probably average something like 2:1, in favor of Germany.

On the other hand, it must be borne in mind that the necessity to release the pick of the best product only, on a less crowded and much sounder market, allowing once more 100 per cent exploitation,—that all this, combined with the obvious decrease of overhead expense corresponding to the lesser volume of business, will, after all, result in profits decreasing not nearly as much as, under the strain of the first shock of the news, some American executives controlling vast business interests in Germany, might imagine.

The essential thing at the moment seems to be to "keep steady," and quietly wait for developments and for the actual working of the scheme.

Rumor of M-G-M News Withdrawal Denied

RUMORS circulating about that the M-G-M News would be withdrawn by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were dismissed as idle gossip this week by Fred Quimby, short subject sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who declared that the newsreel is here to stay. "In the short space of four months," Mr. Quimby stated, "M-G-M News has developed. Right now M-G-M News has reached a position that other news reels have struggled years to attain. Any talk of suspension of M-G-M News service is utter nonsense and we are right now accepting new contracts and renewing contracts for this service.

Ontario T. O. Elect Officers for 1928

The Ontario Division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Canada recently elected new officers for 1928 at its annual meeting held at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto.

J. C. Brady, previously the head of the defunct Motion Picture Exhibitors Protective Association of Ontario, was again elected president without opposition. The new vice-president is Harry Alexander, of the Park Theatre, in Toronto. Elected treasurer was S. Major, proprietor of Major's St. Clair and Major's Rogers Road Theatres in Toronto. Nat Taylor, of Toronto, was appointed secretary. On the directorate are Roy O'Connor, of the Prince of Wales and Greenwood Theatres, Toronto; M. A. Pollakoff, Kingswood Theatre; A. Lester, Doric Theatre; and H. P. Redway.

Vandals Destroy Grand Riviera in Detroit

After binding and gagging Paul Schultz, watchman, three men demolished the moving picture machines, slashed stage curtains, and scattered an offensive liquid around the interior of the Grand Riviera Theatre, in Detroit, this week. Although the damage amounted to several hundred dollars, it was covered by insurance, according to Charles W. Munz, president of the Munz Theatrical Enterprises and owner of the house. Despite the depredations, performances were given as usual. The theatre, seating nearly 3,000, is located on one of the city's main thoroughfares, and offers picture-presentation shows at popular prices.

Roxy Shows for Fox Detroit House, Rumor

S. L. ROTHAFEL (Roxy) was a Chicago visitor last week, which revived rumors that the "Roxy" shows, which will go into the new Fox Theatre in Detroit, may travel on to Chicago, where they will be seen at Marks Brothers' houses. It is impossible to obtain confirmation of this report from any of those interested.

"Chicago" Opening at Gaiety December 23

"CHICAGO," transferred to the screen by Pathe-DeMille, will open at the Gaiety Theatre, New York, Friday evening, December 23rd.

Cecil B. DeMille personally supervised the production of this picture. Frank Urson directed and Leonore J. Coffee adapted Maurine Watkins' play to the screen. Phyllis Haver has the principal role of "Roxie Hart."

Elmer Pearson Becomes Navajo Chieftain

At a gathering of more than 2,000 Navajo Indians at Sainumo Altar in the Painted Desert of Arizona, Elmer Pearson, first vice-president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., was made an honorary chief of the Navajo tribe, the Indians christening him Chief Many Eyes.

The bestowal of this honor by the Indians was due to the fact that Pathe, co-operating with J. R. Bray, has a company of 100 people at the Painted Desert and in the Grand Canyon making a picture called "The Bride of the Colorado," previously titled "Menace." The braves with their ponies and families flocked to Camp Pearson on the Painted Desert and to the vicinity of the canyon to watch the progress of the picture unit.

Chief Sanguinetho of the Navajos performed the ceremony of receiving Mr. Pearson into the tribe, accompanying his actions by a speech in his native tongue welcoming the Pathe executive, to which Mr. Pearson replied, extending the greetings of the United States Government. Scenes of the picture were shown to the guests at the conclusion of the festivities.

Czechoslovakia Will Not Establish Film Contingent

The motion picture industry of Czechoslovakia at a meeting last November in Prague was informed by a representative of the Department of Commerce of Czechoslovakia that the establishment of a contingent law was not possible in view of the fact that Czechoslovakia, with 24 other European states, at the Economic Conference at Geneva, Switzerland, had resolved by signed resolutions not to set up contingents against other countries.

War Between Films and Vaudeville in Detroit

The war between Detroit downtown picture and vaudeville houses remains a highlight among the events occurring along theatre circles. During the past few months, Charles H. Miles' Oriental, booking through Pantages, Loew's State and B. F. Keith's Temple have been vying for public favor by means of heavy advertising and highly rated name acts.

Paramount Reports 9 Months' Profits

THE Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, in its consolidated statement, which includes earnings of subsidiary companies, reports Combined Net Profits of $2,118,101.85 for the three months and $5,650,427.31 for the nine months ended October 1, 1927, after deducting all charges and reserves for Federal Income and Other Taxes. The nine months figures include $698,214.32, Paramount's undistributed share of earnings of the Balaban & Katz Corporation, a 65 per cent owned subsidiary.

After allowing for payment of Dividends on the Preferred Stock, the above earnings amount to $3.40 per share for the three months and $9.00 per share for the nine months, on the average number of shares of Common Stock outstanding.

Frank Wilstach Succeeds Beatty With Hays Organization

FRANK J. WILSTACH will join the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., on January 1st, according to an announcement by Will H. Hays, president of that organization. Wilstach will take over many of the duties now handled by Jerome Beatty, who has resigned to join First National Pictures.

Wilstach is the author of "Wilstach's Dictionary of Similes" and the life of "Wild Bill Hickok, the Prince of Pistoleers." For two years he was with Producers Distributing Corporation.

He has a nation-wide newspaper acquaintance and has done a great deal of writing for newspapers and magazines.

Orpheum Adds Pictures to Vaudeville Bills

Merger With Keith-Albee Brings Radical Change to Western Circuit; Poli Invasion On

THE Orpheum Circuit has yielded to motion pictures. After having played nothing but straight vaudeville in the Western houses on the circuit, the new policy of a combined vaudeville show with a feature picture is the result of the merger just announced by the Keith-Albee and Orpheum circuits. Official announcement of the merger, as prophesied by MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week, was made on December 8th by officials of the Keith-Albee and Orpheum circuits, and confirmed by Maurice Goodman, general counsel of the former organization, from the Palace Theatre building in New York.

The Orpheum Circuit, which operates in all of the principal cities of the West, has held staunchly to vaudeville since the circuit came into existence. The only variation was a news reel. It is now planned to add the feature picture to the regular length bill and not to cut the vaudeville numbers.

On the other hand the Keith-Albee Circuit, which operates in houses of various classifications, has in many of the houses played pictures and "family" vaudeville. The Keith-Albee booking control of Pathe and Pathe-De Mille product undoubtedly influenced the Orpheum to change to the new policy, as it gives them a source of picture supply to meet the keen competition. The Orpheum will use independent product, however, as well as that of Pathe-De Mille.

Along with its consolidation with the Orpheum, Keith-Albee interests have also completed the first step in the invasion into the territory served by the Poli theatres in New England. This week it completed the purchase of a site in the heart of the business district of Worcester, Mass., for a theatre which will seat 3,600 persons, the largest house in that city.

In addition to the purchase of the Worcester property, announcement has been made that Keith-Albee are negotiating for sites in New Haven, Hartford, Waterbury, Bridgeport and Meriden, Conn., and in Springfield, Mass. It is said that in all of these cities transfer deeds will be ready to go on record within the next two weeks. Report has it that the contemplated building program involves an expenditure of $20,000,000.

The property purchased in Worcester is located directly opposite the Worcester postoffice, and consists of three parcels, the Rice building, fronting on Main street, with a frontage of about 100 feet; the building of the City Central Company, and the property of Dr. Thomas J. Barrett. Demolition of the present building will go forward at once, and the proposed new theatre will be rushed with all speed. It is understood that plans for the building are already being prepared and that completion of the theatre is expected within a year.

Famous Canadian Drops Vancouver Office

The Western division office at Vancouver, B. C., of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has been abolished, and H. M. Thomas, Western division manager, has moved to Toronto, Ontario, where he will have his headquarters at the head offices of the corporation. Mr. Thomas will make periodical trips through the Western territory from Toronto.

On his way East from Vancouver, Mr. Thomas made inspections of all Famous Players theatres in Western Canadian cities. It is understood that district supervisors will be appointed to keep in touch with groups of theatres in the various Western Provinces.

French Entertainment Tax Brings Heavier Return

During the first seven months of 1927, the French state tax on entertainments amounted to 47,662,000 francs as against 47,662,000 francs for the same period of last year; this is an increase of nearly 5 per cent. Motion picture theatres contribute more than [illegible] francs to these taxes, according to information received from Trade Commissioner George R. Canty in Paris by the Department of Commerce in Washington, D. C.

N. Carolina Convention

Record Breaking Meeting Endorses and Pledges Its Support to Woodhull and M. P. T. O. A.

AT an attendance record-breaking meeting of the Theatre Owners' Association of North Carolina, held December 12th and 13th, resolutions of endorsement were given R. F. Woodhull, president, and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, for the able manner in which the affairs of the organization had been conducted during the past year. Endorsement and approval were also given the present program, aims and activities of the M. P. T. O. A., and the asemblage pledged its whole-hearted support to the parent organization.

The meeting, the sixteenth annual one of the North Carolina association, was held at Charlotte, and was the most enthusiastic ever held in the State. So far advanced is the State organization that a resolution was adopted making it necessary for proposed new members to submit their names for approval to a membership committee before being admitted as members. In this way it is hoped to keep out undesirables who would be a detriment to the organization, which is now nearing 100 per cent in membership.

As an indication of how well conducted are the affairs of the North Carolina exhibitors, the banquet at the convention was presided over as toastmaster by the Rev. Murdock McLeod, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Pinehurst. The pastor expressed himself as recognizing the tremendous education and entertaing value of the screen, and his belief in its possibilities and desires to find a point where there can still be closer co-operation between the pulpit and the silent art.

Among the dignitaries present at the meeting, and who addressed the session, were: National President R. F. Woodhull; National Chairman of the Board of Directors, A. Julian Brylawski; Frank G. Conklin, of the National Service Department; Ohio State President, William M. James, and Charles C. Pettijohn, of the Hays organization.

The newly-elected officers of the North Carolina association are: Charles W. Picquet, President; U. K. Rice, First Vice-President; W. E. Stewart, Second Vice-President, and Nat L. Royster, Secretary-Treasurer.

Mayor F. M. Redd of Charlotte welcomes R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., to the North Carolina theatre owners' convention

Seven Fox Releases in Month of January

Fox Films has scheduled seven features for January.

At the top of the list, scheduled for New Year's Day, is "The Gateway of the Moon," the Dolores Del Rio vehicle which has a story laid in the South American jungle. Another important production, listed for the 29th, is "A Girl in Every Port," presenting Victor McLaglen as a sailor with many love affairs. There are to be ten episodes in this picture, each one laid in a different corner of the world.

"Woman Wise" and "The Branded Sombrero" will be released on January 8. The first production has a cast composed of 12 different nationalities. Two features are also set for release on January 15, "Sharp Shooters," a story of the American navy in foreign ports, and "$5,000 Reward," which has Tom Mix appearing as a Texas Ranger.

Completing the January attractions from Fox Films will be "Holiday Lane," a comedy-drama to be issued on the 22d.

Washburn Playing in "Skinner's Big Idea"

Bryant Washburn, who played the original title role in "Skinner's Dress Suit," the old Essanay film about a dozen years ago, has again been chosen to play the role of Skinner in "Skinner's Big Idea," which Lynn Shores will direct for F B O. This will be Washburn's fourth appearance in the role of Skinner, as he also played in "Skinner's Baby" and "Skinner's Bubble" for the old Essanay film company.

Production is to start on the new F B O film next week with Martha Sleeper and Hugh Trevor playing the juvenile roles.

Simultaneous "The Dove" Shows in 127 Cities

On January 21st, the national release date of "The Dove," Norma Talmadge's first United Artists Picture, 127 first-run exhibitors will play the picture simultaneously. Loew and Publix have booked the picture for their circuits, so United Artists estimates there may be 300 first runs playing "The Dove" simultaneously on that date.

Christmas Eve "The Dove" opens at the United Artists-Rialto in New York. Christmas Day it opens the new United Artists Theatre in Chicago.

Billboard campaigns, beginning January 15th and extending for one month, have been contracted for by United Artists with the General Outdoor Advertising Co., New York, for 13 key cities and 60 towns surrounding them.

New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Washington, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Boston, Toronto, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Milwaukee are the key cities in which "paper" on "The Dove" will be posted.

Three towns in Maryland, two in Virginia, 18 in Ohio, 11 in Pennsylvania, 8 in Wisconsin and 11 in Missouri will also be posted with the United Artists paper.

W. A. Finney New Loew Western Division Chief

W. A. Finney has been appointed division manager for Loew's theatres in the Western division, with headquarters in Pittsburgh. He will be in charge of Pittsburgh, Canton, Akron, Cleveland, Toledo, Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis, Louisville, St. Louis and Kansas City. All bookings, business and various transactions for 11 cities will be made from Pittsburgh, making that city a theatrical center of its own. Offices have been established in the Penn Theatre.

Finney started with the Loew organization 16 years ago in Memphis, Tennessee. Two years ago he was transferred to Baltimore, where he had charge of three theatres.

Managers School Limits First Class to 35

Announcement was made this week by the directors of the Moving Picture Theatre Managers Institute of New York that the first class will be limited to about 35 students. The school will open its first class on January 16.

The course is to comprise three months' intensive training. Classes will be held daily, except Saturdays and Sundays, from 9:30 A. M. to 4:30 P. M. The subjects have been subdivided under three main headings: Management, Advertising, and Theatre Technic. According to the announcement students enrolled in the first class will include men with experience in theatre operation as well as those who have had no previous training in this work.

Universal Has Own Vaudeville Agency

BECAUSE of the growing number of houses in the "U" Chain working under a vaudeville policy, the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., has decided upon the formation of its own vaudeville agency. William Stephens, who has been handling all the Gus Sun Vaudeville Agency, has been appointed to head the new agency which will commence operation immediately under the name of the Chain Vaudeville Exchange.

The Chain Vaudeville Exchange has opened offices on the first floor of the Colony Theatre Building, Broadway at 53rd St., New York City. The Chain Vaudeville Exchange will have about 14 weeks to offer acts in the east and has already lined up a list of standard acts.

New York Governor Prefers Comedy Films

GOVERNOR ALFRED E. SMITH of New York prefers comedies to dramas, when it comes to screen entertainment. He makes no bones of the fact. The Governor has a projection machine at the Executive Mansion in Albany, and he finds entertainment on many an evening through newsreels and comedies loaned by the Albany exchanges. On such evenings, the Governor generally invites a few friends to become his guests. But as for dramas, they are off the list.

The other day the manager of an Albany exchange sought to have the Governor view a certain feature picture, probably with the idea of having the Governor later on issue a favorable word or two concerning the picture. But when the Governor found that it was a drama, he refused to look at the picture.

Increase in Surplus of Famous Canadian

The surplus brought forward for the past fiscal year by Famous-Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, and affiliated companies, before providing for income taxes of 1927, was $708,267.78, as compared with the surplus of $399,639.65 for the previous fiscal year, according to the eighth annual report issued at Toronto by J. P. Bickell, vice-president of the corporation.

It is pointed out in the remarkable statement that the operating profits of $1,191,877.66 were the largest in the history of the company, the comparative figure for the previous fiscal year being $800,581.61. Depreciation for the past 12 months is put down as $299,715.06, the land, building and equipment assets being designated as $6,328,603.26. Another large item in the assets is $8,611,521.44 for franchises, contracts, leaseholds, etc.

The number of theatres owned, operated or controlled by Canadian Famous Players is 126, or an increase of 25 over the total of one year ago. Regular dividends were paid on the First Preference stock and two dividends of $2 per shape each were also paid on the Second Preference stock during the year.

Final Ban on Sunday Shows in York

A final ban was placed on the Sunday motion picture show in the city of York, Pennsylvania, where a battle for a liberal Sunday with regard to amusements has been waging for the last two and one-half years, when the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania ruled on December 5 that the ordinance adopted by the York City Council on August 10, 1926, was constitutional.

The decision ended the controversy led by the ministerial organization, which began a fight after Ed. R. Moore held a Sunday motion picture showing in the Hippodrome Theatre. Moore conducted these shows for six months.

Fred C. Bothwell, amusement proprietor, brought injunction proceeding in the York county court to prevent the city from enforcing the ordinance. He lost in the lower court and then carried the case to the Supreme Court, which found that the ordinance is legal.

First National Ahead of Production Schedule

New Cycle of Ten Features Now Under Way or Due for Shooting at Early Date

CLIFFORD B. HAWLEY, President, and Richard A. Rowland, Vice-President in charge of production for First National, just back from an inspection trip to the coast, are immensely pleased with production activities at the coast studios under the supervision of Watterson R. Rothacker. Production work is reported five months ahead of the schedule, with a new cycle of ten pictures now under way or ready for the call of "camera" within the next few days.

The Harold Bell Wright story, "The Shepherd of the Hills" directed by Al Rogell, has so pleased First National executives that it is now being considered as a road show attraction. The production was made under the supervision of Charles R. Rogers.

Work is now under way on the Colleen Moore starring vehicle, "Lilac Time," which is being produced by John McCormick and directed by George Fitzmaurice. Miss Moore has the role which Jane Cowl scored heavily in on the speaking stage.

In another production now under way Richard Barthelmess is being directed by Alfred Santell in "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," from the novel by John Fox, Jr. Barthelmess only recently completed "The Noose."

Milton Sills has started work in the Jack London story, "Burning Daylight," with Charles Brabin directing and Doris Kenyon as leading woman. The next for Sills will be "The Barker," which George Fitzmaurice will direct.

Billie Dove wil start work in a few days in "The Heart of a Follies Girl," from the Adela Rogers St. Johns' story. Alexander Korda will direct. Ken Maynard has started "The Canyon of Adventure," a western of early days in California, with Al Rogell directing. Charlie Murray will be featured in an original story written by Harry Green, which Bernard McConville is preparing into continuity form.

The C. C. Burr production, "Chinatown Charlie," with Johnny Hines as the star is ready to get under way under the direction of Charles Hines. Edna May is cast for the role opposite the star. Allan Dwan's new production for Robert Kane, "The Mad Hour," is in work with Sally O'Neill and Donald Reed in the leads. "Do It Again," featuring Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes went into work last week with Marshall Neilan directing. "Lady Be Good," with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall is ready for filming. Richard Wallace will direct.

The Harry Langdon comedy, "The Chaser" is almost ready for the cutting room. Six other pictures are already in the cutting room. They are; "The Shepherd of the Hills," "The Whip Woman," "Sailor's Wives," "The Noose," "Flying Romeos" and "Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath."

"Love" Music Will Be Broadcasted Dec. 20

STATION WPAP will broadcast the entire showing of "Love," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture playing at the Embassy Theatre in New York, at a special performance to be given 11:30 A. M. on December 20 before an audience of radio critics, newspaper reviewers and motion picture figures. The picture will have the regular orchestral accompaniment.

Ted Hausig of WPAP will begin describing the picture scene by scene as it is thrown upon the screen. Personal messages from the important members of the cast will be read over the air. A stenography speed contest in connection with the broadcasting will enable speedy stenographers to win prizes of $100, $50 and $25. Tausig expects to speak at the rate of 170 words a minute. Radio fans sending in remarks about the program will receive a scene still from the picture signed by its two stars.

Quebec Legislature May Pass on Sunday Ban

His Grace the Archbishop of Quebec, Mgr. M. R. Rouleau, O. P., of Quebec City, who is being made a Cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church at the Sacred College in Rome on December 19, has intimated that he is not in favor of Sunday labor or Sunday shows and, prior to his departure from Quebec, was the principal signatory of a pastoral letter in which the faithful were called to refrain from attending Sunday performances in the Province of Quebec. His Eminence also looks with disfavor on church bazaars, and it is probable that there will be no more of them in Quebec parishes.

Semi-official announcement has been made that the matter of banning Sunday shows will be brought up in the Quebec Legislature at its session in January, and the exhibitors of Montreal, Hull, Quebec and other cities are organizing to oppose the legislative move.

"The Jest" Second First National British Film

First National has purchased the screen rights to "The Jest," the stage success by the Italian dramatist, Sam Benelli. The screening rights have been acquired with the plan of making the production through First National's British unit.

E. Bruce Johnson, First National vice-president in charge of foreign affairs, returned the above information upon his arrival last Wednesday from Europe. He brought with him prints of the first German and British films to be made by his company, "Dancing Vienna" and "Elstree."

The original title of the Benelli play was "La Cena delle Beffe." Under the title of "The Jest" the play was successful on Broadway with John and Lionel Barrymore. It played Europe also.

Three Pathe-Bray Units Filming Canyon Story

The Pathe-Bray expedition filming "The Bride of the Colorado" in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, is divided into three divisions. There are 13 men in the boat party that set out from Green River to travel the 500-mile course through the Canyon. After resting a few days at the Painted Desert, the party, in charge of E. C. LaRue and Leigh Smith, left Lee's Ferry to again brave the dangerous stream to emerge at Needles, California.

A second unit is located on the Painted Desert, some 20 persons in all making up the party. Included in this group are: J. R. Bray, Gilbert Gable and members of the Signal Corps of the United States Government. The tented camp on the Desert is the headquarters for the entire expedition.

The third unit is the studio party, under the direction of Elmer Clifton. This party, including the two leads in the picture, Donal Blossom and John Boles, William Irving, Richard Alexander, Henry Sedley, Carl Stockdale, cameramen, helpers and guides, has entered the Canyon at Lee's Ferry and are already in the midst of production.

Columbia Officials to Confer at Coast Studio

Joe Brandt, president, and Jack Cohn, treasurer, left New York for Hollywood last Friday, December 9, to join the other Columbia executive, Harry Cohen, vice-president in charge of production, with whom they will discuss the production plans for the completion of the current picture program and the schedule now being lined up for the new season.

Several names, including directors', are to be added to the executive personnel of the studio to take care of the increase in production acivities, it is said. A decision will also be reached regarding a number of stars, now being considered for various roles.

Two Leading Ladies in Barthelmess Vehicle

Having returned to the Burbank studio of First National, which he left for a brief vacation after finishing the screen picturization of "The Noose," Richard Barthelmess is again back on the studio lots working in "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," under the direction of Alfred Santell.

Barthelmess will have Molly O'Day and May McAvoy as leading ladies in the new picture, and Gardner James as the second male lead.

Chaplin's "Sunnyside" on Pathe List for Dec. 25

Among the Pathe short subjects intended for release during the week of December 25, the first in importance is the old Charlie Chaplin comedy, "Sunnyside." The week will also see the issuing of "Love in a Police Station," a Mack Sennett comedy; "The Junk Man," an Aesop cartoon; the eighth chapter of the serial, "The Masked Menace;" Pathe Review and Topics of the Day, No. 52; "Bucking the Handicap," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; and two new issues of the Pathe newsreel.

The Sennett comedy features Madeline Hurlock and Eddie Quillan, directed by Earl Rodney. The Pathe Review includes "The Rider of Death Avenue," "Lilies, Serpents and Hobgoblins" and "Bazaars of the Black Empire."

Stern's Christmas Film Heads Week's Releases

"The Newlyweds' Christmas Party," the Christmas two-reel comedy produced for the holidays by Stern Bros. for release through Universal, is the principal offering on the program of six short subjects for the present week. Another Christmas number among the Universal releases is "Empty Socks," an Oswald cartoon produced by Walt Disney. "Run, Buster!" is another of the current releases, featuring Arthur Trimble, Doreen Turner and Pete, the dog comedian. "Andy Nose His Onions," a new comedy telling the predicaments of "The Gumps," is also included on the schedule, with Joe Murphy and Fay Tincher in the leads.

"King of Hearts," a two-reel western with Jack Perrin and Barbara Starr, and the sixth chapter of "The Trail of the Tiger," are the concluding releases for the week.

Educational Releasing 14 Shorts in January

INCLUDING the first of a series of comedies from Charley Bowers, and vehicles from Larry Semon, Al. St. John, Dorothy Devore, Johnny Arthur, Jerry Drew and Monte Collins and novelties from Pat Sullivan, Lyman H. Howe, Walter Futter and Robert C. Bruce, the Educational program of 14 subjects for the month of January is a diversified collection.

"There It Is" is the first Bowers comedy for Educational. Scheduled for January 1. It has Buster Brady, Kathryn McGuire and Melbourne McDowell in supporting roles. H. L. Muller photographed and directed. "Dummies" starring Larry Semon is also scheduled for the 1. The story was written and directed by Semon.

Al St. John is seen in the Mermaid, "Racing Mad," in the cast of which are Estelle Bradley and Phil Dunham. Dorothy Devore stars in "Cutie," directed by Norman Taurog with Earl McCarthy as her leading man. Johnny Arthur is featured in the Tuxedo "Wildcat Valley," which Charles Lamont directed. These three comedies are scheduled for January 15 and 22.

Another Mermaid is "High Strung," featuring Jerry Drew and set for January 29; Mark Sandrich directed. The three Cameos are "Fall In," with Monte Collins, "Wedding Slips," also starring Collins, and "All Set," featuring Wallace Lupino. These have been scheduled for January 1, 15 and 29 respectively.

The Sullivan cartoons are "Felix the Cat in the Smoke Screen" and "Felix the Cat Draggin' the Dragon." The Hodge-podge subject is "Recollections of a Rover." "Dog Days. "The Sun and the Rain" are the titles of the Bruce Outdoor Sketch. "New York's Sweetheart" is the Curiosities release for the month.

Two New Series for Pathe Review in 1928

Pathe Review has acquired additional novelties for the coming year's subjects, which will further exhibit the Review's qualities of a magazine reel.

Fontaine Fox, author of the Toonerville cartoons and characters, is interviewed by the Pathe Review camera in the first issue of the series for the new year. He is shown at his home with his wife and daughters, playing golf and in his studio. There will be later on, it is said, camera interviews with other artists, and these will be treated in much the same manner.

Another new series for the Review will feature English and American writers of fiction, the first, a camera interview with Charles Francis Coe, apearing in issue No. 3. These also will show intimate scenes of the human subject.

Baxter Replaces Varconi for Tiffany-Stahl Role

Victor Varconi, whom Tiffany-Stahl Productions, Inc., had engaged to play the principal masculine role in "The Tragedy of Youth," will not appear in the picture, having been replaced by Warner Baxter. Varconi, who had been loaned by Cecil B. De Mille, had made preparations to go abroad and John M. Stahl released the actor until his return from the foreign trip, when he will be cast for the chief role in another production.

Lya De Putti May Make Another Universal Film

Lya de Putti, European screen star, arrived back in the United States last Wednesday on the S. S. Berengaria. She will remain in New York several weeks, after which she will go to Hollywood. She is expected to start the new season by making another picture for Universal. She was featured in two Universal pictures last season, "Midnight Rose" and "Buck Privates," both yet to be released.

Larry Darmour Will Make Al Cooke-FBO Comedies

A dozen Karnival Komedies, to feature Al Cooke, will be made by Larry Darmour for release by F B O, under the terms of a contract just signed. Joseph Jefferson O'Neill and E. V. Darling are joint authors of the first of the series. The comedies will be two-reelers. This is the third series Darmour is producing for F B O, the other two being the "Micky McGuire" comedies and the "Fat Men" comedies.

Harron Placed Under Tiffany-Stahl Contract

Johnny Harron has signed a long-term contract with Tiffany-Stahl Productions, Inc. He is to be cast immediately in a production now under way. The actor has appeared in two Tiffany-Stahl releases, "Night Life" and "Once and Forever." He made his first screen appearance in Mary Pickford's "Through the Back Door."

Carewe Finishes "Ramona" for United Artists

Dolores Del Rio's initial starring vehicle "Ramona," for United Artists, has been finished by Edwin Carewe, its director and co-producer, with Inspiration Pictures. Cameraman Robert Kurrle turned the last crank last Friday at the Tec Art studio in Hollywood.

The same director, actress, producers and releasing organization which presented "Resurrection" have combined to make the screen version of the novel of the American Indian and early California by Helen Hunt Jackson. Warner Baxter and Roland Drew have featured parts. Carewe is now cutting the picture.

Paramount Changes Dates of Three Releases

Instead of on the 21st, Adolphe Menjou's "Serenade" for Paramount will be released on December 24. "The Secret Hour," featuring Pola Negri, has been set back from the 24th to February 4. "When Romance Rides," a Zane Grey western story, has also been set back, from April 21 to a June date, not yet determined upon.

Columbia Engages Lois Wilson for Five Films

Lois Wilson signed a contract this week with Columbia Pictures for a series of five pictures, a variety of roles being planned for her which will display versatility. The actress first appeared beneath the Columbia banner in "Alias the Lone Wolf" with Bert Lytell.

Antonio Moreno Signs Tiffany-Stahl Contract

Tiffany-Stahl Productions, Inc., has signed Antonio Moreno to play the male role opposite Claire Windsor in a new production now being filmed under the direction of Christy Cabanne. The title of the new picture is yet to be announced.

Orchestraphone Audition

New York Exhibitors Hear Musical Scores Played by Instrument Developed for Theatres

A DEMONSTRATION in which musical backgrounds for two short subjects were the feature introduced to exhibitors in the New York district the Orchestraphone, which is being distributed by National Theatre Supply Company. The instrument plays ordinary phonograph records, reproducing the music by means of an electrical amplification system which provides volume sufficient for auditorium presentations.

The Orchestraphone is one of the first auditorium phonographs particularly developed for use by motion picture theatres. It was demonstrated in New York at the Tivoli theatre, 8th Ave. and 51st St., last Friday. The installation for the demonstration was temporary.

Though this was the first public demonstration in New York, the Orchestraphone has been in use at theatres in Chicago and other cities for some time. The device consists of two electrically-operated turntables equipped with electrical pick-ups and two large Temple loud speakers, which are located in the orchestra pit.

It is not a "talking picture" device, but is designed to supply musical accompaniments for the pictures, supplanting organ or orchestral accompaniments. The entire equipment is sold outright for $3,500. This includes the instrument, speakers, accessories, and a filing cabinet containing 200 records suitable for theatre use.

The Tivoli demonstration put the Orchestraphone to the severest test. The first subjects presented was a newsreel. The change over required by the events depicted in the reel were necessarily abrupt, and occasionally there was a tendency to confuse the ear, in cases where the contrasts were extreme—as when an orchestra of one type broke in upon one of an entirely different instrumental make-up.

Possibly because better preparation was possible in scoring the piece, the two-reel drama for which the Orchestraphone supplied the music seemed more successful. The selections here were judicious and the cuing more perfect, with the result that this score was most satisfactory, and gave a better gauge of the potentialities of the instrument for practical theatre use.

In the usual case the instrument and the speakers are located in the orchestra pit. In this position the operator is enabled to follow the picture with the aid of such cues as subtitles or particular scenes.

The dual turntable permits the ready changeover from one record to another. This is done by pressing a button located on the operating board. Individual volume control knobs are placed in front of each turntable, for the modulation of each record or portions to suit the occasion.

The operation is very simple. Skill in the manipulation of the device can be acquired within a comparatively short time. For the best results the picture is scored in advance, with selections of suitable themes made from the record file.

The Tivoli demonstration showed the instrument capable of volume resources, which makes it practical for use in very large as well as small theatres. No distortion beyond that which is present whenever sound in reproduced, whether electrically or mechanically, was noticed during the renditions at the Tivoli theatre. T. C. K.

Hoffman Denies Rumor

Declares There Is No Truth in Report that Louis B. Mayer Will Join Tiffany-Stahl

COMMENTING upon the various rumors being circulated to the effect that Louis B. Mayer is expected to become affiliated with the Tiffany-Stahl organization, M. H. Hoffman, Vice President and General Manager of the company, when interviewed, said:

"This is one case where the old 'Smoke and Fire' adage won't hold because there isn't even a whisp. Whereas we admire Louis B. Mayer as a man and as an executive, there would be no good reason or advantage for any of the parties in such an affiliation.

"The Tiffany-Stahl company as it now stands has all the necessary elements that spell success. L. A. Young, its president, one of the wealthiest and most able business men in the country, is well able to supply finance and good business judgment. John M. Stahl, who needs no introduction to the trade or public as a genius in direction and production, is well able to cope with production problems."

M. H. Hoffman is in executive charge of the company and is supervising distribution and exploitation.

"So that from a standpoint of executives," Hoffman continued "the Tiffany-Stahl company is a complete triangle, a tower of strength and nothing lacking.

"On the other hand, L. B. Mayer is very happily situated as one of the important factors of another big company and would have nothing to gain by a change.

"There have never been any negotiations for or intentions to have Louis B. Mayer join the Tiffany-Stahl organization, and for once in this instance Dame Rumor has gone totally wrong."

Brenon Begins Casting of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh"

Herbert Brenon, fully recovered from an attack of influenza, has started casting players for "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," the Lon Chaney vehicle which he will direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Maurice Murphy and Betsy Anny Hisle, the two children who appeared in Brenon's "Beau Geste," will have roles in the new photoplay and it is likely that other additions to the cast will be announced soon.

The Science of Film Exporting

Expert Urges Adoption of Definite Procedure for Efficient Handling of Foreign Shipments; Makes Valuable Suggestions

By PALMER HALL STILSON

THE intent of this article is to bring to the attention of film exporters the importance of adopting some definite procedure for the efficient handling of foreign shipments.

Worldwide distribution of films is one of never-ending detail requiring closest application. Motion pictures are usually released in foreign countries on scheduled dates, as in vogue in the States, but not necessarily at the same time. Hence the question of release date abroad, is of immediate consideration when contemplating an export shipment. It is recommended that the various phases of the subject, outlined below, be carefully considered. Verily it is true that an export shipment is well on the road to satisfactory delivery when properly prepared and authenticated by correct documentation.

Footage Measurements

Films should be accurately measured and such measurements recorded on a packing list. Duties in many countries are based on footage and, accordingly, it is desirable to inform oneself of such requirements, because allowances are made in some foreign customs for leaders, spacings, etc., and, therefore, same need not be always recorded on documents, creating, thereby, some slight savings in duty payments. Where duties are specifically based on weights, full measurement of film, tip to tip, should be recorded.

Packing

This is very important. Here again duties are sometimes affected because some countries consider classes of packing material as part of the legal net weight, and assess duty thereon. For instance, the use of individual single reel tins increases the duty in some customs. Packing is also subject to regulations of various steamship lines and, if not adhered to, will result in declination of shipment with resultant delay and dissatisfaction. Further, fire hazard and possibility of "on deck" carriage must be considered. Packing requirements are diversified. Some shipments may be prepared by enclosing the reels in separate single reel tins, and then enclosing several tins in a stout wooden case; other shipments may be prepared by wrapping the actual film in oiled or water-proofed paper, and then enclosing in a wooden case with metal lining, with the metal cover securely soldered before making fast the wooden case cover; other shipments must be prepared by enclosing the reels in tins within a metal case with wooden lining, as required for shipment on English passenger liners. In this last connection the French Line accepts such metal wood-lined cases or equally as well packed one to a gross weight limit of one hundred pounds.

Case Construction

It is decidedly false economy to use any but the best of constructed cases. If wooden cases are used, select only those of stout lumber not less than seven-eighths to one inch thick, strongly built and reinforced. It is desirable at times to clean cases to raise same from open deck floors, thereby permitting sea-wash to run under and not into case. When metal-lined cases are used the lining must be very carefully soldered on all seams to result in a hermetically-sealed case. All export cases should be securely bound in at least two places with metal straps. Strapping is generally placed around the ends of cases, although some may prefer to strap away from the ends, and, perhaps, with a third strap around the center.

As it is desirable to nail straps make sure nails are not driven into actual case contents. Straps on metal-lined cases should be placed on case ends, because nailing a strap in the middle of case will, without question, puncture the metal lining. Equipment may be purchased which enables the shipper to draw his metal straps to a tight condition. Case pilferage may be prevented by careful strapping and by use of seals for strap ends.

Case Weights and Measurements

It is imperative that cases be accurately weighed and the weights so marked thereon in net, tare and gross. Films are to be weighed before enclosure to obtain the net, empty case and packing weighed to obtain the tare, and the packed case then weighed to secure the gross weight. The shipper must familiarize himself with foreign customs requirements, because many countries base calculations on the Metric system, and weights must be recorded in kilograms. Too much care cannot be exercised because, if weights are nor correct, severe fines and penalties are assessed and collected at destination. Where Metric system is used there is no objection to recording on cases, weights in both pounds and kilos. Scales are for sale which have bars showing both classes of weights. It is advisable to record case dimensions as thereby you secure the base for determining cubical contents. This information is necessary as ocean freight rates are largely based on the cubic space consumed.

Case Numbers

Every export case should ride under an exclusive number, distinctly marked thereon. It is desirable to establish a book record and allot to each country served a block or series of numbers. Starting all countries from one on is quite satisfactory, or a group may be assigned to the first country and the second country continued in the next group. For illustration—England, one to two hundred; Australia, two hundred one to four hundred; Spain, four hundred one to six hundred. When allotting a number to a case same should be closed on the book record by date under proper country. By carrying such number through on all office records it is possible to instantly identify a given transaction and ascertain case contents. In the event of a loss or a stray shipment, being located at some point, it is of great importance to have the case number and actual case mark or address.

Case Marks or Addresses

As all export cases transported by steamer are controlled by ocean bills of lading, it is unnecessary to address cases in full, so shipper should resort to the use of a mark. In doing this it is suggested that standard symbols be adopted which may be used for all countries by changing the names of respective foreign cities. Marks similar to the illustrations below may be adopted, but the shipper should study same for originality pertinent to his particular company, and to avoid conflict with other shippers' symbols or marks.

Method of Marking

All cases should be marked by the use of stencils and fountain brush. Free hand marking is to be discouraged. Many steamship lines will refuse to handle shipments unless stencil method is employed. Some lines also specify the size letters, and stencil should be used in letter size proportionate with case size. In addition to symbol or mark, weights and case numbers should be stenciled on all cases. Every film case must have affixed the customary yellow film caution label or some equally significant means of indicating to cargo passers that they are handling films. Steamship lines appreciate this identification of all hazardous cargo.

International Parcels Post

Films forwarded via foreign mail service must be absolutely addressed in full, and may be insured or registered to some destinations. Such shipments should be packed similar to the method employed for Interstate Domestic shipments, in strong wooden cases or metal shipping cases, keeping within weight limits prescribed by postal regulations.

Marine Insurance

Insurance is of prime consideration, and each export transaction should be analyzed to determine as to amount of coverage necessary. The protection should cover cost of manufacture, freight expenses, insurance premium and incidentals. Shippers should at all times be careful not to overinsure as the practice is costly. Royalties due on film rights should not be insured except for a specially good reason. The shipper should study his policy to see that risks are fully covered, and should engage marine insurance only through the most reliable companies or brokers to be sure that the protection is there.

Film Drawbacks

The United States Treasury Department permits exporters to claim drawback on films manufactured from imported raw stock. Application in due form must be filed with the Government for permission to file claims for refund. After consulting Treasury officials and receiving registered approval, the exporter should engage a reliable drawback broker who will assist him in executing the Governmental requirements in this technical procedure.

Documentation

Serious delays and difficulties will result if your export shipment is not attended by proper documents. Many countries require surrender of Consular Invoices and Certificates of Origin before delivery is permitted. The exporter must secure signed ocean bills of lading, and prepare commercial invoices. These invoices must contain a complete history of the transaction insofar as case numbers, footages, weights, production names, values, etc., are concerned. Particular care must be exercised to record accurate values, as sometimes freight rates and duties are affected thereby. Bills of lading, consular papers, certificates, invoices, etc., must be forwarded to consignee abroad on same steamer carrying the goods, and, if shipment travels on a slow boat, the papers should be dispatched on a faster boat. Bills of lading are usually issued in sets of three, other documents generally in duplicate. It is advisable to forward the original bills of ladings and documents on steamer transporting shipment or faster boat, and the duplicates on a subsequent steamer, to be sure the consignee receives some papers to assist in clearing the goods.

Commercial invoices must be certified by exporter and negotiable bills of lading must be endorsed. Insurance certificates are usually furnished in duplicates, but do not affect delivery; however, subject to the opinion or wishes of your consignee and yourself, it may be desirable to mail the duplicate copy abroad. Upon receipt of documents the foreign consignee calls at his Customs House, makes an entry, pays the duties and receives permission to take delivery of films, provided his documents are in proper shape. In many cases he employs an import broker to attend to these formalities. From the foregoing we realize the extreme importance of careful documentation.

Shipping Agents or Forwarders

Every export shipment must be manifested by means of a Shipper's Export Declaration, which document is submitted to the Collector of Customs for his observation and approval. Steamship space must be engaged, shipping permit secured and filed at pier, shipments delivered to pier and dock receipt obtained. At time of delivery a Notice of Intent to claim Drawback is filed with Customs Inspector at pier, in order that he may examine shipment and certify as to its right to obtain benefit of drawback due to use of imported stock in manufacture. Dock receipt must be exchanged for regulation ocean bill of lading. Some exporters prefer to attend to all this detail themselves, whereas others find it as economical to employ a reliable Shipping Agent or Forwarder. The Agent will attend to all formalities and, in most instances, to the mailing of controlling documents abroad. He will arrange with his foreign correspondent to make import entry, pay duties and deliver promptly to consignee. This work being most important, great care must be observed in the choice of a shipping agent. He must be efficient, versed in the science of exporting and, to say the least, must be trustworthy and enjoy good repute in shipping world. One point worthy of mention is that of Forwarder's Bills of Lading. Such ladings only constitute a receipt for goods to be shipped, and are not to be confused with steamship Ocean Bills of Lading. Many steamship lines will not recognize forwarder's ladings, and some do not convey any resposibility to the steamship company, except under special arrangement.

In-Bond and Inter-Exchange Shipments

An exporter may sell a picture for ultimate delivery in some foreign city after certain financial obligations have been complied with. For illustration, the London branch of a concern in Egypt may negotiate for the purchase. The exporter here will ship the films, "In Bond," via London, and same will be stored in customs bonded stores there upon arrival. The exporter's London branch will have the observation of same and the controlling documents. Upon the obligations being satisfied, the shipment will be re-exported from London to the final destination, Egypt. In-Bond shipments are employed for many various reasons. The exporter here may have excess films in Canada, Cuba or other adjacent countries which he can ship to some foreign destination from Canada or other point "In Bond via New York." Shipment will ultimately move abroad from this port, or it is possible to In Bond same from other ports on the Atlantic Seaboard. The exporters may believe it desirable to Inter-Exchange an excess print from one foreign country to another one, where he may use same to advantage. Care should be exercised in such matters, because it may result more costly than having a new print made. A film having been cleared through Customs into Spain has created a debit by virtue of shipping, clearing and duty charges. Upon exporting this same film to Roumania, Turkey or South America, further duties and expenses at final destination will increase the debit. It may cost less to print a new film and ship direct from New York. This is a matter of dollars and cents requiring analysis.

Steamer Routes—Transshipments

Great care must be exercised in the choice of steamer routes on which to make prospective shipments. If the exporter is not fully informed it is desirable to consult a reliable forwarder. Much time may be saved by proper routing, and further shipments may be subject to lower freight rate if proper steamer is chosen. Transshipments should be avoided, and resorted to only in unusual lapse of time between direct steamer departures. However, in this connection we must remember that some foreign points are always subject to transshipment. For illustration, some parts of the Orient require transshipment at Hong Kong when shipped from the Pacific Coast.

Inland Export Shipments

At times it is convenient and desirable to ship inland for export at some other point; for illustration, Cuba may be served from Key West, New Orleans serves some of the southern points such as Guatemala City. It is quite customary to ship Mexico City via Laredo, Texas. Few exporters, indeed, use direct steamers to Mexico from New York. Inland shipping is a matter of judgment.

Pacific Seaboard

Films requiring speed in transit, for Australia and the Orient, might well be shipped overland express for export from San Francisco and Seattle. It is customary to ship to a reliable forwarder at either point, issuing prompt instructions as to ultimate destination. It is preferable to write the forwarder in advance of shipment or, in emergency, by night telegram. Here, too, instructions may be sent by Air Mail. All details of shipment, footage, production names, etc., must be furnished because the agent will have to handle all the details and get his controlling ladings, etc., forward to consignee on the same steamer carrying the films. It is interesting to note that savings in time are created by using steamers from Seattle. Shipments for Pacific Coast export may be addressed by "Mark or Symbol" with cardboard tacked securely over the entire mark. On this cardboard should appear the full name and address of the Coast forwarder.

Panama Canal Route

Considerable savings are created by use of steamers plying the Panama Canal destined to the Orient, Australasia, etc., but unusual care must be exercised in packing and choice of steamer. Owing to climatic changes due to the zones through which vessels passes, new films with heavy emulsion have been known to congeal and be rendered worthless, hence, in shipping via the canal it is well to consider the stowage offered by the steamship line.

Some foreign cities are known as Free Ports; for illustration, Copenhagen is free, and Scandinavian shipments pass through without hindrance. Danzig is free for Baltic shipments.

Films Special Stowage Cargo

Most steamship lines consider films as special stowage, and give same exceptionally good care, which works materially to the exporter's good. However, the freight returns good revenue to the bottoms, and the lines are alert for this class of business. Passenger liners generally carry the films in the Purser section or strongroom, or equally accessible location. While this is considered good protection against ships' fire hazard, still it is advantageous to the industry.

Negatives—Positives—Advertising Matter

It is desirable to always ship negative films in separate containers from positives; in fact, most foreign customs demand separation. This is very much to be desired for many reasons, chief of which is the question of insurance. It naturally follows that shipments of adequate advertising material are imperative. By all means, have the various lithos, photos, cuts, etc., accompany the films on the same boat, or, if at all possible, on earlier steamer. The faster the importer abroad secures his advertising matter, the earlier he can plan his campaign for successful exploiting of the films. At any event pack the advertising material in separate, strong, water-proofed, paper-lined cases, giving careful consideration to weights, etc. Some customs require separate net weights recorded for miscellaneous items, and the exporter needs to inform himself of such requirements.

Commercial Credit Shipments

Great care must be executed in the handling of shipments made under auspicies of bank credits. The Credit, or authority to purchase, should be closely scrutinized, that you may comply with all the terms and tenor of same. Case shipments may be packed, weighed and marked as previously indicated because the Bills of Lading control their delivery. Ladings, commercial invoices, insurance papers, drafts, etc., must be made out in exact form prescribed by the bank. When shipments are authorized by international parcel post, it is generally specified that the packages be addressed in full to the correspondent bank abroad, and never to the ultimate purchaser. Prompt advice must be sent to the foreign bank and the purchaser, and all documents as indicated in credit must be turned over to the New York bank in ample time for them to audit same and forward via the same steamer transporting the shipment. The preparation of drafts is one requiring careful attention; here the exporter is practically issuing his own check for the value of the consignment, royalties, costs, etc., and ultimate responsibility for payment of this draft must be fully understood and determined. After shipment has gone forward and the bank has paid your draft, recourse may still be had to the exporter in the event of need, so this phase of the situation deserves full consideration. Long bills or drafts drawn at sixty or ninety days' sight should be issued without recourse to exporter, because here the bankers are extending that much credit to your patron and, in event of default at maturity, the exporter would be held for all monies involved, unless he had protected himself against such contingency when issuing the draft.

Forms

The exporter will simplify operations and keeping of records if he will equip himself with proper forms pertinent to the various phases of export procedure. Comprehensive records are vital in efficient exporting.

Stunt Exploiting News Reel Thrills Brady, Texas

NOT all of the showmen of the country are on the Broadways of the big cities. There is, for instance, Manager W. W. Jackson of the Palace theatre in Brady, Texas. The entire population of Brady, Texas, probably could be comfortably accommodated in the Roxy theatre, even though it is the center of the turkey industry of the world.

Each year the "turkey trot" just before Thanksgiving is a great event, comparable with Atlantic City's bathing beauty parade and similar events. It was this event, recorded in a news reel, that gave Manager Jackson his opportunity to flash a showmanship stunt that thrilled Brady and at the same time ranks as one of the best feature exploitation ideas used in connection with a topical film.

Reed Haythorne, M-G-M News representative in San Antonio went to Brady and made pictures of the "Turkey Trot." Manager Jackson was particularly anxious to show these scenes in Brady the same night that they were made. Haythorne hurried back to San Antonio with his negative, developed it, made a print and shot it back to Brady by airplane. The same plane that brought the print to Brady carried ten thousand "dodgers" which read: "Palace Theatre—Tonight! M-G-M News presents the Brady Turkey Trot six hours after the pictures were taken. They will be shown on the screen at the Palace Theatre 7:15 P. M. tonight. You can't afford to miss it.

The pilot of the airplane circled the entire surrounding neighborhood several times, dropping the "dodgers."

The Brady Daily Sentinel tied up with the stunt and "led the paper" with the story of the Palace's achievement, carrying a seven-column "ribbon" across the first page.

Series of Xmas Parties at Tampa Theatres

John B. Carroll, general manager of Consolidated Amusements, Tampa, has arranged a series of Xmas "parties." There will be five matinee parties staged. The first was on Dec. 5th at the Victory; next at the Franklin on Dec. 6th; then at the Strand on Dec. 9th; the Grand on Dec. 12th and the final one on Dec. 15th at the Tampa.

At these "parties" all the ticket a child needed was a toy of some kind. The toys collected will be all re-made and wrapped in fancy packages and given away to the poor children of Tampa at a big morning party that will be staged at the Victory on Dec. 24th.

To see that the needy children get the toys, tickets will be given out by the Sunday school teachers and those holding the tickets admitted to the party and to receive a present.

Serials Return to High Favor in Canada

The growing popularity of film serials is indicated by announcements of managers regarding bookings of the chapter stories. Practically all neighborhood houses in Ottawa, Ontario, are now presenting serial pictures once more.

Showmanship

Briefs

ONE of Manager J. L. Cartwright's stunts to exploit "The Cat and the Canary" was a 'spook' parade the night before the picture opened at the Capitol Theatre, Macon, Ga. Fifteen boys were dressed as spooks—using white sheets and false faces to hide their identity as well as to give the parade a 'spooky' appearance. The parade took the boys through all the main streets. Four boys carried two large banners announcing the title of picture, name of theatre and play dates while other boys in the line-up carried fuses to light up the banners.

FEATURING two local players in one-act play as a prologue feature, has brought considerable publicity to the Aztec Theatre, of San Antonio. This prologue feature was introduced recently with the presentation of "Man Crazy" when a one-act comedy was presented with Jack Edwards and Edna Parks as the stars. These two players have long been favorites in San Antonio in a stock company, and their return after an absence of about two years created much interest.

EVERY high school in Pittsburgh, including the parochial schools, is actively interested in "Les Miserables" through the efforts of Universal's exploiteer, Charles Loewenberg. Carl Laemmle's essay contest on "What Ideals for Life Do You Find in Victor Hugo's 'Les Miserables'?" is arousing a warm response on the part of both pupils and school authorities.

MANAGER JAMES H. McKOY had a unique window display for Constance Talmadge in "Breakfast at Sunrise" when the film was shown at the Rex Theatre, Spartanburg, S. C. The display was in the window of one of the furniture stores that contained a breakfast room window. The decorator had a special window background that made the whole place look like a sun porch. A flood lamp with gelatin was used to give the effect of early morning.

MANAGER F. J. MILLER had a miniature airplane under the marquee to attract attention for "The Lone Eagle" at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga. A banner placed on each side of the plane read, "The Lone Eagle." The propeller was kept in motion by a small motor inside the plane, and a buzzer hitting against an empty cigar box made a noise similar to a plane motor running.

THROUGH the courtesy of William Raynor, manager of the Lafayette Theatre, Buffalo, 3,000 newsies attended a special Saturday morning showing of "The Shield of Honor." The Buffalo release featured the dedication of the picture to Chief of Police James W. Higgins and his force.

MANAGER F. J. MILLER, of the Imperial in Augusta, used a simple device to put motion into his marquee display for "Ben Hur." The display was a large cutout of a chariot racer. Miller placed a loose scarf around the neck of the driver which was kept in motion by the wind from a concealed fan. The wheels of the chariot were cut out and pinioned to the display. Another motor was used to turn the wheels continuously.

Old Gag Revived in Herald for "The Unknown"

The old gag of partially concealing the figure of a woman, and leaving the unconcealed portion to mislead the beholder into thinking that the picture in its entirety would be a full nude was adapted with remarkable success for use as an exploitation novelty in connection with the showing of "The Unknown," at the Apollo Theatre, Peoria, Ill.

Manager W. R. Lawler's novelty consisted of a folder of light weight cardboard the front of which was shorter than the back. When folded over, the front sheet, bearing the caption, "Oh Boy! What a Picture! 'The Unknown,'" allowed only the shapely legs and thighs of Joan Crawford to be seen. When opened the reader found that she is clothed in a revealing dance costume.

Roy Helms Designs Novel Window Display

A novel window display featuring "Ten Modern Commandments" and various articles of drug store merchandise was designed by Manager Roy Helms, of the Egyptian Theatre in Greenville, S. C., and used by a local store.

The centerpiece was a cutout in the form of a tablet bearing various modern commandments, from each of which a ribbon was led to some article it advertised or stills from the picture showing at the Egyptian.

Two of the commandments were: "Thou shalt not park or pet; go to the Egyptian to see 'Ten Modern Commandments'" (a ribbon was run from this to a quarter card holding a still), and "Pose not in thy one-piece bathing suit. Hot is the Sun and great the pain from sunburn" (this commandment was tied up with a display of Ungentine by a ribbon).

Use Novel Tie-up to Stir Interest in Sousa Band

One of the finest publicity campaigns to be put on in Pittsburgh, was staged by Loew's and United Artists Penn Theatre the week of November 28th. Manager Livingston Lanning and Publicity Director Wallace R. Allen got together and with the cooperation of Director of Music Will Earhart and the Board of Education it was arranged for Sousa to attend four high schools, direct the band and give them advice on music.

A gold cup was offered to the best band of the four. A newspaper cooperated, taking half the credit and giving big space to this stunt.

Incidentally one night the bands came to see the show, in a body, played selections in front of the theatre and then paid their way in.

Still Title Contest Tieup for "The Gorilla"

Keith's Palace Theatre, Cleveland, ran a picture titling contest in one of the city's daily newspapers for the showing of "The Gorilla." The tie-up was made by John Royal, manager of the theatre.

Money prizes and theatre passes were offered for the best titles for stills taken from the production and published daily in the columns of the newspaper.

An interesting marquee display featuring "7th Heaven" at the Rialto theatre in Waterbury. The arrangement was designed by William Leggiere, manager. The stair effect—seven steps on each side of the display, tied-up cleverly with the title. The display was floodlighted at night.

Cooperative Ads Query Fans About "My Best Girl"

A DOUBLE-PAGE spread of local merchants' ads in the daily newspaper, coupled with window displays in all the stores of those advertisers, featured a Mary Pickford "My Best Girl" exploitation stunt worked by the Olympia Theatre, New Haven, Conn., in conjunction with the advertising staff of the New Haven "Times-Union."

The paper printed on November 25th a front-page box, mentioning the picture and the theatre, and directing readers to answer the questions about Mary Pickford in the merchants' ads on pages 8 and 9. Readers would get cash prizes and free tickets to the Olympia Theatre for answering most questions correctly.

One question was set in each ad, directly below the name of the advertiser. Such queries as "Who is Mary Pickford's husband?", and "Who was Mary Pickford's first director?", were asked. The paper got two solid pages of ads out of it, banks, department stores, restaurants, dress shops, furniture stores, piano manufacturers, shoe stores, jewelers, furriers and [illegible] stores being among the advertisers.

The answers, printed November 30th in exactly the same places as the questions were set (in the merchants' ads), gave the "Times-Union" another double-page spread. Prizes were announced and again the theatre and "My Best Girl" were given front-page space.

The Olympia Theatre made the most of the attention attracted to the ads by taking a two column, 100 x 2 set in the center of each page.

Vitaphone Trailer for "The Jazz Singer"

WARNER BROS. now has an unusual accessory ready for use in connection with showing of its Vitaphoned production, "The Jazz Singer." In the trailer for this picture, the voice of John Miljan, one of the players in the film, is heard describing highlights of the photoplay. While he talks, flashes of the action are showing along with the musical accompaniment that is synchronized with it. The world premiere of "The Jazz Singer" is then shown with Jolson and other celebrities arriving at the Warner Theatre.

Fashion Show Feature of Stage Bill at Roxy

In cooperation with Russek's, a Fifth Avenue store, the Roxy Theatre is this week presenting a style revue in connection with the feature picture, "Ladies Must Dress." Models display gowns said to represent a cost of $250,000, in which are included "exclusive Paris designs," as the purveyors of feminine finery put it.

The fashion show is augmented by the Roxy ballet corps. Other numbers on the program include the "Faust" overture played by the symphony orchestra with chorus by the Roxy ensemble. Another stage number is "La Tapisserie Japanese" (A Tapestry of Old Japan), in which Maria Gambarelli and Dorothy Drakefield dance and Douglas Stanbury and Ruth Williams sing. A Fox Movietone Newsreel is presented as an added screen attraction.

Cooperative Advertising by 24 Cleveland Houses

During the day and date run of "What Price Glory" in Cleveland, which started December 4th, 24 theatres joined in [illegible] ative newspaper advertising.

Key City Reports

New York City

WITH a few exceptions most of the Broadway theatres felt the pre-Xmas shopping slump which always hits the street about this time of the year. Probably the most talked of picture the last few days was "Helen of Troy" which opened at the Globe last Friday evening. General comment dubbed this picture "delightful satire" and one that the smart crowd in the big towns and other communities would "eat up." Some advanced a theory that this show could easily be sold outside New York at higher than ordinary prices but there has been no talk of a road show to date.

The Capitol did an excellent trade with "Man, Woman and Sin," John Gilbert proving his drawing power not only at this house but at the Embassy where he is teamed with Greta Garbo in "Love." The latter is doing what is reported to be turn-a-way business. At the Paramount, Clara Bow with still another "It" show did average business and average at the Paramount spells profit. Although Martha Ostenso's picturized novel "Wild Geese" was highly rated by most critics it, too, was caught in the season slump and undoubtedly would have brought up the Roxy's receipts to an average gross at any other time. Even Milton Sills in "The Valley of the Giants" at the Strand couldn't get the customers away from the department stores, resulting in a mediocre week for this house.

Among the two-a-day offerings even such consistent performers as "Wings" at the Criterion shared in the slowing-down process due to the pre-holiday occupations which cut so deeply into the time and purses of the populace. The aviation thriller, however, gives every promise of reestablishing its rating as a heavy draw after the holidays.

"The Student Prince" in its twelfth week at the Astor continued its tapering off tendency, apparent for a few weeks back. The down curve since this state of affairs set in has followed such a definite trend that it is felt that it won't be long now before the curtains will be drawn on that particular engagement.

The Gaiety with "King of Kings" did no better than was expected in view of the fact that it is in the closing days of a long run. The De Mille Biblical spectacle is concluding its 35th week on Broadway. It will be succeeded at the Gaiety by "Chicago," which is due to open there on December 23.

"The Gaucho" showed drawing power in the fourth week of the run at the Liberty, though it, too, felt the seasonal pinch. At the Central "Uncle Tom's Cabin" showed further reduction of the weekly gross. "Sunrise" continues at the Times Square, rounding out its twelfth week with the rather lean returns which have been characteristic of this run of late. "The Jazz Singer" at Warners is still a big draw and while under its best averages somewhat, its momentum was not very noticeably affected by the general depression.

"Sorrell and Son" dropped off considerably in the fourth week of an engagement which proved highly profitable up to this. It is being succeeded by "The Devil Dancer" at the Rivoli this Saturday.

Chicago

THE first blizzard of the season cut into the mid week business of Chicago houses generally and reduced box office totals for the seven day period ending December 10th, although for five days attendance was normal.

"The Gay Defender" was the Chicago's screen feature and usual elaborate stage and musical shows rounded out the program, which did satisfactory business, considering weather handicaps. "Underworld" closed its long run at the Roosevelt to good business and at McVickers "Ben Hur" closed its run, attendance being slightly off. The Oriental offered a program including Mark Fisher leading Paul Ash's Gang, and on the screen, "Now We're in the Air," normal business being done. The Monroe was another theatre bringing an extended run to an end, where "Seventh Heaven" did a good business.

"Hard Boiled Haggerty" Vitaphone and Buddy Fisher's Stage Band, were the attractions at the Avalon, attendance being fair, while at the Capitol, "The Cat and the Canary" Vitaphone and Husk O'Hara made up the program, which drew well. "The Fair Co-Ed" and Benny Kreuger and his or- at the former while Meroff officiated at the Tivoli, which had an excellent week.

The Granada and Marbro both offered "The Wreck of the Hesperus" as their screen feature, Kaley conducting the stage band at the former while Meroff officiated at the latter, both theatres enjoying average business.

Pittsburgh

BUSINESS in most houses this week settled down to below average with the usual pre-Christmas crying of poor houses prevalent. The exceptions to this were the Grand where "Seventh Heaven" did a huge business. Matinees at this house usually are very small with the afternoons this week almost capacity and the nights huge. About the best business this house has done since the 3600 Penn Theatre opened Labor Day.

Ruth Elder in person at the Penn failed to cause any excitement but the big house did average business, with the picture "In Old Kentucky" having no drawing power at all, the cast being slightly known, if at all. The Davis, playing "The Last Waltz" and vaudeville, was as popular as a waltz at a college prom, and had a very poor week. The Olympic with a revival of "The Covered Wagon" and Vitaphone meant nothing in the lives of movie fans and fared accordingly. Loew's Aldine with "The College Hero" fared a little better as they had a good supporting show and business was better in comparison than other houses. "Les Miserables" was held over a second week at the Cameo and did nicely, all things considered. State had "The Girl from Chicago" and she might have stayed there if the gross means anything. Harris had "A Harp In Hock" and did a consistent business. Legit business was also off with no house writing in black ink at the end of the week, Alice Brady in "The Ark" having 150 people in the orchestra one evening.

San Francisco

BRISK and sunny weather during the past week, brisk and pleasant business, so to speak, in the local motion picture theatres. The downtown and residential motion picture theatres both reported good business.

Nora Bayes proved popular on the stage at the Granada Theatre, which with the picture "Figures Don't Lie," attracted many. "Get Your Man" at Loew's Warfield, with Fanchon & Marco's production, "Oil" and the music masters, was very popular and filled that house. "The General" at the Imperial Theatre, was enjoyed by the audience, all liking the comedy.

"The Gorilla" continued to draw crowds to the California Theatre and "Now We're in the Air," shown for a third week at the St. Francis theatre, also continued to do good business. The second week of "The King of Kings' 'was by no means what was expected for it by the management of the Columbia Theatre, which is spending quite a sum in both newspaper and other advertising stunts. It is felt certain that the arguments of the local rabbis and club members against that picture is what has injured it here. "Turkish Delight," the farce on harem life shown at the Golden Gate theatre, together with high class vaudeville, drew crowds each night.

"The Bandit's Son," shown together with the Scotland Yard pictures at the Cameo Theatre, proved popular. The Union Square Theatre reported good business with "The Unknown Treasure," "The Speed Hound" and five acts of vaudeville.

Cleveland

THE first touch of winter, coupled with Christmas competition, brought the average business of the week below par. Even the unusually strong attractions offered had difficulty in getting by.

"Sorrell and Son" was one of the outstanding attractions of the week from the financial angle. It played at the Stillman with a presentation, did good business, but failed to run a second week. "Tea for Three" a society play, with Paul Whiteman and His Band as the headline attraction on the presentation bill did good business, but failed to break any records as such a program was expected to do. Will Rogers in his "A Texas Steer," unusually good fun, did average business at Keith's Palace, instead of chalking up a new house record, as was its due. The State, on the other hand, did fairly well with only a moderately well liked picture, "The Woman on Trial," in which Pola Negri had little opportunity to display her talents. "Tell it to Sweeney," better than average comedy feature, had a moderately successful week at the Cameo, but not an outstanding week. Reade's Hippodrome played to the usual big audiences with Tom Mix in "Silver Valley" as the attraction. "Publicity Madness" surprisingly snappy, clever, fast-moving comedy, did average business at Keith's East 105th St. The Park played a first run neighborhood engagement of "The Magic Flame" and had a good week considering the average of the downtown houses. Neighborhood houses are complaining bitterly. Legitimate competition was lively but not acute.

St. Louis

THE first touch of real Winter weather, with the thermometer dipping close to the zero mark, had its effect on the box office receipts of all the theatres of St. Louis and vicinity the week of December 4. This fact coupled with the universal business depression and the advance effects of the pre-Christmas lull naturally prevented any and all of the houses of this district from breaking any cash receipt records during the week.

"The Girl from Chicago," who wasn't really from Chicago at all but just a little innocent Southern gal, was the screen feature at Skouras Brothers' Ambassador theatre. Backed by one of Ed Lowry's stage shows it had a fair week when one considers the general conditions.

Over at the Loew's State Theatre the film attraction was "Adam and Evil" in which Lew Cody had the leading role. Lew's meandering down the primrose path didn't really do any harm to himself or the box office. He has quite a following in St. Louis.

Out at Skouras Brothers' Missouri Theatre the chief screen offering was Reginald Denny in "On Your Toes" and it enjoyed a good week under the circumstances. Brooke Johns had prepared a very special stage show in celebration of the seventh anniversary of the opening of the Missouri as the de luxe first run picture palace of the community and this fact aided the business of the house. The St. Louis theatre, which is the up-town Orpheum vaudeville house, screened "The Forbidden Woman." It proved a popular attraction. The Orpheum at Ninth and St. Charles, the down-town Orpheum first run palace, featured "Once and Forever," in which Patsy Ruth Miller, a St. Louis girl, was the starette. Patsy is a big favorite with the movie fans and fanettees of her native community.

Boston

BOSTON theatres were hit this week with the pre-holiday slump which had been expected and which was about a week later in arriving than is usual. Theatre managers have little complaint, however, for Boston's season to date has been far ahead of that in any former year.

"The Gay Defender" had its world's premiere at the Metropolitan and was favorably commented upon by the critics and received with acclaim by large audiences. Undoubtedly this premiere boosted the receipts of the Metropolitan considerably because that theatre was the least affected by the general falling off of any of the Boston theatres.

Loew's State showed "The Garden of Allah" and the beauty of this film resulted in keeping up a fair showing at the box office. At any other season of the year packed houses would have been the result. The week end business was heavy but mid-week totals were nothing to brag about.

"Now We're In the Air" was shown simultaneously at five theatres, its grosses comparing favorably with those of the other theatres at this season.

Modern and Beacon presented "A Man's Past" and "Night Life" for an average week's business. "The Life of Riley" was the attraction at Waldron's Casino. "On Your Toes" grossed well at the Keith-Albee Boston. Other films at the down town houses include "Captain Salvation" at the Howard, "The Fighting Eagle" at the Allston, "The Racing Romeo" at the University, "Twelve Miles Out" at the Strand and "The Magic Flame" at Loew's Orpheum.

Salt Lake City

WINTER appears to have set in at last in and about Salt Lake, with a drop in temperature and a heavy snow having been experienced during the past week. Theatre business averaged very good although some of the smaller houses notice a slight drop in receipts due to the pre Christmas activities.

The Capitol Theatre is still playing to capacity house. The feature picture last week was "The Gay Defender," with Richard Dix. Fanchon and Marco's Idea, "Sea Nymphs" was a very beautiful stage presentation and was received with enthusiasm. John Gilbert with Jeanne Eagles in "Man, Woman and Sin," went over exceptionally good at the Pantages Theatre, it is reported by the management. Good results were obtained by the Paramount Empress Theatre during the showing of Billie Dove in "American Beauty" with Lloyd Hughes.

Corinne Griffith in "Three Hours" proved to be a drawing card at the American Theatre with this large house averaging fairly big crowds throughout the week. The feature picture offered at the Victory Theatre last week was "The Gay Retreat" with Ted McNamara and Sammy Cohen, and a fair share of business was enjoyed. Marie Prevost and Harrison in "The Girl in the Pullman" went over big at the Gem Theatre, it is reported.

"Underworld" attracted a great deal of interest at the Rialto Theatre, this being a second run house. Very good results were had during this presentation.

Baltimore

WITH the exception of two isolated cases, patronage at the first-run moving picture theatres in Baltimore for the week beginning Monday, December 5, held up very nicely, except on one night when it turned cold.

The big surprise was at Ford's Theatre where "The King of Kings," continued for its second week there at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.50. Business was not much to brag about during the first week but during the second it fell down to poor. This was not due to the production, however, for critics praised it highly, but it is thought rather due to the fact that people here do not wish to spend the high prices for their movie entertainment knowing that they will be able to see them later at regular movie admission prices.

During its second week at Loew's Valencia, "The Garden of Allah" proved only a fair drawing card. In this instance it seems to be a case of artistic work not appealing at the box office. "Seventh Heaven" continued to stand them up during its third week at Whitehurst's New Theatre. "Topsy and Eva," co-starring Rosetta and Vivian Duncan with John Philip Sousa and his band on the same bill, proved a pretty good drawing card at Loew's Century, but did not do the business expected.

Another surprise for the week was at the Stanley where very good business was done by "She's A Sheik," starring Bebe Daniels. That oriental comedy proved enjoyable to the audiences, with a special stage attraction, including Cliff Edwards.

The Rivoli had pretty good attendance throughout the week with "The Wreck of the Hesperus." On the same bill were Arthur Johnson's Three Melody Maids. This house is again advertising in all Baltimore papers. A good business was done consistently at Keith's Hippodrome in "The Land Beyond the Law," featuring Ken Maynard with five acts of Keith family time on the same bill. At Warner's Metropolitan good business was done also with "The Girl From Chicago," and Vitaphone presentations.

For Friday and Saturday, the opening days of the Little Theatre, the business done with Emil Jannings in "Tartuffe, the Hypocrite," was excellent.

Albany, Schenectady and Troy

COMMENT on the part of exhibitors in the three cities of Albany, Troy and Schenectady, relative to the past week's business, embodied the free use of such words as "Not so good!" "Terrible!" and "Fair," with a decidedly slim sprinkling of "very goods." Striking a balance, the week's business may be considered as below normal. This may have been due to a little tightening up on the part of the nickels and dimes, due to the approaching holidays, to the mediocre pictures shown, and perhaps the shifting weather, ranging from springlike to midwinter.

At the Leland, in Albany, "Battling Butler" went bad, and did not draw anything to speak of. The women did not take to the picture and that meant two-thirds of the audience lost. At the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, "Woman Power" appeared to get the business, the house being well filled evenings throughout the week. At the Mark Strand, "When a Man Loves" with the entire Vitaphone musical score, did the best business any Barrymore picture has done in many a day, and ran ahead of "Don Juan." The Mark Ritz, in Albany, proved the best box office bet of the week with "Old San Francisco," the crowds standing nearly every evening and with the business holding up day in and day out, and practically equaling "Man, Woman and Sin," which thus far has brought more money to the theatre this fall than any other picture. In Troy, the business done at the Troy theatre with "Now We're in the Air," was characterized as being little short of "terrible." The picture opened to poor business and Sunday was worse, and by the end of the week, there was just an occasional dribble at intervals to the box office. At the Lincoln there was a split week with "The Gay Retreat" drawing just ordinary crowds, while "Good Time Charley" seemed to hit the popular fancy a bit better and went over to good business. At Proctor's "Les Miserables" contributed its full share to the box office receipts for three days and was followed by "Figures Don't Lie" and this picture also pleased.

In Schenectady, "My Best Girl" at the State theatre, went over but fair with matinees only about normal, and causing many to remark that Mary Pickford had lost much of her drawing power, at least in that city. "The Waltz Dream" at the same theatre ran but fair during the last of the week. "White Pants Willie" went over better than "The Nest" at the Strand in a split week.

Ottawa

A GOOD week all around was the situation in Ottawa, Ontario, during the week of December 5. There was excellent variety to the pictures, each house got a good share of business and the managers reported that Christmas buying had not started to cut in on the patronage. There were good houses even on the nights when big hockey matches were played.

First-class results were obtained with "The Blood Ship" at the Centre Theatre and "Two Arabian Knights" made a good showing at the Regent Theatre, accompanied by a chapter of "The Collegians." This feature was liked far better than "Now We're in the Air" which recently played the Regent. Orville Johnston's Orchestra has made many new friends at this theatre since it was reorganized recently and is doing much to draw crowds.

B. F. Keith's Theatre is building up an excellent following for Pola Negri and big crowds enjoyed "The Woman on Trial." One of the local newspaper critics knocked "The Fair Co-Ed," starring Marion Davies, at the Imperial Theatre but the picture registered one of the best patronage weeks of the past year for this house.

The pick of the suburban shows was Colleen Moore's "Orchids and Ermine" at the Fern, while "Pluck" with George Walsh at the Rex Theatre and Ken Maynard's "The Overland Stage" at the Columbia Theatre had juvenile patrons all stirred up.

Des Moines

AT the Des Moines, Clara Bow in "Get Your Man" bids fair to be a big attraction, almost making records. But the big snow storm cut into business at the end of the week and brought down the average. At the Capitol "The Gorilla" seemed to turn away trade and "Making Movies" on the stage, though well exploitated, did not do any better. At the Strand "The Garden of Allah" did very fine business on a half week run while for the last half "Honeymoon Hate" had not so good a chance bucking the blizzard.

Tampa

CLARA BOW was the big draw of the week. The opening Sunday at the Tampa, in her latest, "Get Your Man," was immense, with receipts coming pretty close to the Tampa record and running well ahead of her former record in "Hula." The following three days registered good. "The College Widow" was featured the last half and it did nicely, though the cold spell put a crimp into the receipts Friday.

The Victory had Will Rogers in "The Texas Steer" the first four days. It looked like Will would be a sure-fire draw here as the Tribune uses his articles and he is well liked, but he could not overcome the big draw at the Tampa and business was just about average. The last half, with "Cheating Cheaters" and the 5 acts of vaudeville, did well but the chilly weather cut into the receipts. Tampa just naturally won't leave the old fire-side when it's cold.

"Honeymoon Hate" gave the Strand two days of fairly good business though the Sunday opening was below the average. "The 13th Juror," used the following three days, proved a real good draw and ran the receipts above average. "The Tigress" felt the cold of Friday but ran about average on Saturday. The Franklin kept them coming to about average business with "The Coward," "The 13th Hour" and "The Haunted Ship."

Birmingham

"THE GORILLA" First National's mystery comedy, featuring Charlie Murray and Fred Kelsey, proved a great box-office attraction at the Ritz Theatre here last week, when it grossed $9,484.90 for the six days' showing.

Saturday proved the biggest day, with an intake of $2,424.60, although the picture opened on Monday to a big attendance, the receipts for the opening being $1,521.90. Every day, from Monday until Saturday, saw increasing interest in "The Gorilla," and the total for the week indicated most conclusively that the picture was one to capture the popular fancy.

Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE has just finished a fairly good week in down town picture houses. The weather was mild for this season of the year and the programs at the theatres attractive.

The Wisconsin offered John Gilbert in "Man, Woman and Sin," supplemented by the Playboys, a combination which kept the house well packed throughout the entire week. "Ben Hur" was held over at the Merrill for a second week and bringing better business was unusually good. "My Best Girl," was very well received and kept the Strand well filled at all performances. "Swim, Girl, Swim" was featured at the Alhambra where business was unusually good. "My Best Girl" held over from the previous week, continued to bring in good business at the Garden.

Business in the neighborhood theatres was fair, better early in the week than later. "What Price Glory" played at the Milwaukee to good houses. "Breakfast at Sunrise" was a popular attraction at the Oriental and netted good business. "Loves of Carmen" at the Modjeska and Garfield brought in fair business. "Annie Laurie" was not an especially strong feature at the Tower and Uptown.

Minneapolis

ONE of the worst blizzards that Minneapolis ever experienced raised hob with the theatre business there last week. The blizzard continued for the better part of two days, and the city's streets were blocked for miles with big drifts which rendered them impassable. Street car service was badly slowed up, but the transit company managed to keep the cars going. However, most everyone preferred to stay home during the hectic days of the blizzard, and the theatres suffered as a result.

"Underworld," showing for its second week at the Garrick, did a very good business considering the conditions. "Man, Woman and Sin" averaged fair crowds, while Lillian Gish in "Annie Laurie" did as well as could be expected under the circumstances. The revival of "The Covered Wagon" at the Lyric was pretty much of a flop.

At Pantages, the film attraction was "College" with Buster Keaton, and many thought this was Keaton's best picture. It proved to be a good drawing card. The Hennepin-Orpheum showed the Swedish-made picture, "Discord," and as there is a large Scandinavian population in Minneapolis, the film was an excellent attraction.

The neighborhood houses fared little better than the down town houses and most of them had several lean days as a result of the blizzard. Pictures shown at the Lagoon, Lyndale, Loring and Rialto, included "The Way of All Flesh," "Paid to Love," "Loves of Carmen" and "Metropolis." The Aster revived "Sorrows of Satan," but not with a great deal of success.

Kansas City

EXTREMELY cold weather caused patronage at most first run down town houses to suffer this week, although there were some exceptions.

At Loew's Midland, Bebe Daniels in "She's A Sheik," drew well all week, as did "Unwed Mothers" at the Liberty. At the Royal, however, Sally O'Neil and Owen Moore in "Becky" played to a meager attendance, which has been in keeping with most weeks' attendance records at that house since the opening of Loew's Midland. "Seventh Heaven" in its second week at the Pantages played to only fair crowds, as did "His First Flame" at the Capitol. "Ben Hur" at the Newman attracted only fair crowds, but "The Gorilla" at the Mainstreet did a bit better, playing to about normal attendance. Cecil B. DeMille's "King of Kings," showing at the Shubert as a road attraction, drew only a light attendance.

Seattle

LAST week was a good one for Seattle picture houses—business in the theatres seemed to reflect the increase in retail business occasioned by the Thanksgiving holiday and the opening of the Christmas season.

Topping the list, taking into consideration seating capacity and total attendances, was the United Artists Theatre with the first engagement of "Ben Hur" at popular prices. It is just a year since the film was first shown here, and its opening week this season at a straight 50c admission charge packed the U. A. house at every performance, breaking all previous records. Manager W. S. Perutz put across a fine campaign, and the return of Jan Sofer as director of the United Artists orchestra was another big factor in the tremendous week. The gross was around $16,500.

Not far behind came "The Gorilla" at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. The film was enjoyed by every audience, and Manager James Q. Clemmer had put across a fine teaser campaign the week before that helped matters greatly. Fanchon-Marco's "Polar Idea" was not a very strong stage attraction, compared to the many handsome revues that they have been presented during recent months. Hermie King and his Orchestra, however, helped matters out with a good musical program. Gross about $16,000.

"The College Widow" and a good string of Vitaphone subjects headed by Madame Schuman-Heink kept the box office at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre clicking all week at a fast clip. Business was fully up to the usual high standard at this house, perhaps slightly greater than usual.

At the Columbia Theatre, "Les Miserables" played to very good houses for the opening week and Manager Robert Bender kept the film over for a second week that began with continued big patronage. The film was well received by the audiences, and business was decidedly above the average.

"The Girl From Rio" at the Embassy Theatre played to average houses, coupled with a few novelties on the stage program. A good cast helped this film with the public.

"Figures Don't Lie" was the attraction at the Liberty Theatre, and it pleased most audiences, despite the fact that attendance was below average. This house has just been plugging along at a slow clip, and it appears impossible to bring it back to its former dominating position in the screen life of Seattle. Apparently no effort is being made to push the house, West Coast apparently having other plans in mind.

"Dress Parade" at the Orpheum was the first film presented at this house to be featured above the vaudeville program, and it did a good business for the new theatre. Gross was decidedly lower than the previous week, however, when Gene Austin on the vaudeville program created a new box office record that was the highest ever established by a vaudeville house in the Pacific Northwest.

"Slaves of Beauty" at Pantages was an average attraction only, and business was not very strong. Neighborhood and suburban business picked up somewhat during the week, but is still not very much above average.

Los Angeles

CLARA BOW in "Get Your Man" at the Metropolitan does not hesitate to stop at one man but is getting all the men and women, too, as crowds daily fill the theatre at every show.

Loew's State did very good business with Billie Dove in "The Love Mart." Abe Lyman appeared on the stage in his farewell week program which may account for the unusually large audiences.

"The Wreck of the Hesperus" attracted the average Boulevard attendance. Gene Morgan and his band drew well.

"The Gorilla" finished its last week of showing at the Million Dollar. The public seemed to like this picture and it was a good money-getter.

"Sunrise" had a second good week at Carthay Circle. The picture is receiving favorable comment in all the newspapers.

Large houses have been Los Angeles' tribute to "The Gaucho" at Grauman's Chinese and every performance continues to draw crowds.

The second week of "Old San Francisco" with the Vitaphone at the Criterion was very well received and played to good houses.

Good sized audiences attended the Broadway Palace the past week to see "We're All Gamblers" and also the recent Notre Dame-U. S. C. game on the screen.

Central Penn

DESPITE several days of extremely cold weather and the fact that the Christmas shopping season was in full swing, the picture theatres of Harrisburg enjoyed a fairly profitable week. "Sorrell and Son," featuring H. B. Warner, made a very favorable impression at Loew's Regent.

"The Gorilla," starring Charley Murray and Fred Kelsey, attracted paying crowds to the Colonial. It made a distinctly favorable impression among that class of Harrisburg fans who enjoy exciting entertainment.

At the Victoria the feature at the start of the week was "A Gentleman from Paris," with Adolphe Menjou. It may or may not be significant, but it is a fact that the management, contrary to its usual custom of six-day bookings, at midweek substituted Zane Grey's "Open Range," a Western thriller, for the Menjou picture. The Victoria did only fair business during the week.

The offering at the State, where there always is a midweek change of bill, was Pola Negri in "The Woman on Trial," for the first three days, and the last half of the week the main picture was Buck Jones in "Black Jack." With its combined vaudeville program the State did a nice business.

The Broad Street presented "No Man's Law," featuring Rex, "the King of Wild Horses," and another Western show was on the screen at the Royal, which exhibited "The Broncho Buster," with Fred Humes.

Portland, Ore.

WEST Coast's Broadway led the town with Lon Chaney's "London After Midnight" and Fanchon and Marco's "Collegiate Idea." Red Corcoran, banjoist, and big favorite at this house, who was until recently master of ceremonies of the West Coast Bellingham house, was responsible for the extra business.

"Les Miserables" at the Columbia, opened up to very good business but slowed down the balance of the week. It will be held over for a second week. The Liberty could not hit the running with "The Enchanted Island" and inferior vaudeville, but showed an improvement. "The Blue House" was way off on "The College Widow," the Vitaphone bringing in the bulk of the business. Vitaphone featured Mme. Schuman Heink.

The Orpheum had an excellent week with "Stepping Along" and six vaudeville acts, which were better than average. Pantages fell down from former weeks with the Fox re-issue, "St. Elmo" and five acts.

"The Garden of Allah' at the Rivoli brought just average business.

Alois Reiser Conductor of N. Y. Strand Orchestra

Alois Reiser is the conductor of the new Mark Strand Symphony orchestra which will be a feature of the presentations at this Broadway cinema. Reiser, who has been associated with the Strand for several years as associate conductor, replaces Nathaniel Shilkret and the Victor Salon orchestra, for the past several weeks a Strand feature.

The stage number offered this week by Joseph Plunkett, managing director, features the Tivoli Girls, Kitty McLaughlin, coloratura soprano, and Lafayette and La Verne, dancers. The screen feature is "French Dressing."

Cleveland's Little Theatre Discontinues Movies

The Little Theatre of the Movies, Cleveland, has been discontinued as a motion picture theatre. Last week Fritz Leiber and his company took over the house for an eight weeks' engagement to present Shakespearean plays. The Little Theatre of the Movies was started early in September, most auspiciously. Newly decorated, with the moral support of the club leaders and lovers of art, it attracted city-wide attention. But, like most novelties, interest waned. The public sought the usual avenues of entertainment. The Little Theatre had spurts of success, but nothing of a sustained nature.

Third Opening of "Life of Helen" Scheduled

First National's special, "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," is now having extended run engagements in two cities, with a third opening scheduled for next week.

The picture opened to audiences at the Million Dollar Theatre in Los Angeles on last Thursday evening, December 8, one day in advance of the New York premiere at the Globe, where a $2.20 top scale of prices is in vogue.

The third extended run will be in The California Theatre in San Francisco, where the production opens Friday, December 16.

New Date for "Circus" Showing at Strand

"The Circus," Charlie Chaplin's comedy for United Artists, will come to the Mark Strand, in New York, January 7, instead of the 14th, as previously announced. On this same date it will have its European premiere at the Salle Marivaux, in Paris. During the first week of March, the Chaplin vehicle will be seen in London for the first time at the New Gallery Kinema.

News Reel Resume

Again a personality who stirred the newsreel field last summer is the subject of the various reels. Charles Lindbergh's hop off on his solo flight to Mexico City was the foremost screen story for the week.

A brief outline of the contents of the various reels follows:

Pathe News, No. 101: Forest fire in [illegible] Calif.; U. S. bomber wrecked in Buffalo blizzard; Turkey celebrating founding of republic; Kaiser's sister and young Russian husband; likely Republican nominees; lake freighters covered with ice in port of Sault Ste. Marie; Christmas trees; America's healthiest child on her first birthday.

No. 102: Lindy off for Mexico City; Formosan fisher folk and their peculiar ritual; winners of bike race; Mexican motorcyclists in daring feats; Moors pledging homage to young sultan; Kansas City's kindergarten band; manicuring horses; mixing Christmas pudding for King George at Buckingham Palace.

M-G-M News, Vol. 1, No. 35: Emperor of Japan viewing army; college tug-of-war; German runner, who defeated Nurmi; extent of blizzard in Great Lakes; Colonel Lindbergh with Capitol notables, in trial hop; New York aquarium inmates receive medical attention; police dogs as motorcycle cops.

Kinograms, 5351: Cal Coolidge, Hughes, Lowden, Hoover and Dawes; French sanitarium inmates hold dress party; Viscount Willingdon welcomed at Washington; Virginia State Troopers capture bootleggers; Santa Claus; Seppala, hero of Nome dash, tries out his huskies.

No. 5352: Lindy beginning his flight to Mexico City; namesake of President who lives in Massachusetts; two singers chosen by opera stars as best of radio vocalists; winter in Norway; marionettes in Chicago; magnet used to pick up dismembered auto; new French skidding car.

International News, Vol. 9, No. 100: Railroad clearing path through snow in Canadian Rockies; wrecked tanker battered by waves; Viscount Willingdon, Gene Tunney, Charles E. Hughes; old mission at Santa Barbara consecrated; dog actor buried; Florida children hold castle-building contest; Brooklyn Bridge painters on the job; president and his recommendations for navy enlargement.

No. 101: Jap school children in fire drill; English liner split in two by reef; 1,000,000 volts of electricity; initials branded on babies by ultra-violet ray to prevent mix-ups; Germany's champion runner welcomed at Georgetown University; fashions for young ladies during 1928; whole of England helps to make king's pudding; police dog on motorcycle; ovation given Lindbergh at Capitol.

Paramount News, No. 39: Winter throughout the country; Rockefeller on the golf links; Sec. Hughes, Viscount Willingdon, Mildred Pinkenfeld (America's perfect baby), Gene Tunney; cops learning proper way to walk; boy sultan acclaimed by Moors; Mussolini having portrait painted by Howard Chandler Christy; toys at Santa's zoo; New congress opened.

No. 40: Lindbergh after Congress had bestowed decoration and taking trial spin; Japan's yearly chrysanthemum show; new German balloon tested; fish in N. Y. Aquarium kept healthy by doctor; Roumania mourns dead premier; trip to top of mountain railway in Calif.; Lt. Gavin receiving Schiff Cup from President; the falls at Niagara; President Calles and Ambassador Morrow.

Fox News, Vol. 9, No. 22: President Coolidge and Republican aspirants towards the presidency; motorcyclists climbing mountain; Seppala putting his team of huskies through their paces; Kemal, president of Turkey, reviewing army; Atlantic storm wrecks ships; prominent figures in the ranks of the Anti-Saloon League; a log jam in the Northwest; camera interview with Kaiser's sister and her newly-acquired husband.

No. 23: Congress decorating Lindbergh; new bridge connecting Staten Island with New Jersey; Santa Claus; scientists propose 13-month year; steeplechase races at Newbury, England; Niagara Falls decorated by Jack Frost; wind-up of Spanish bull-fighting season at Zaragoza.

The Fox Movietone for the week (release No. 2) had four subjects: The ceremony at St. John's Cathedral in New York at the beginning of work on the woman's transept; the opening of the 70th Congress; prohibition agents destroying cargo of seized liquor, and a San Francisco policewoman in a talk on her city's methods in dealing with girl criminals.

Mae Murray Star of Stage Feature at Paramount

Mae Murray is the star of the stage program currently showing at the Paramount theatre in New York. Miss Murray appears in the "Merry Widow Revue" devised and staged by Frank Cambria. The number is notable for the effective pictorial composition and striking color arrangement for which this producer is celebrated.

The specialty numbers presented in the revue are introduced by Lou Kosloff, leader of the Paramount stage orchestra, who acts as master of ceremonies. The setting is Viennese in atmosphere and costuming. Specialists appearing in the number include Joseph Griffin, tenor; Paramount Quartette; Felecia Sorel Girls; Bern and Lawrence, comedians; and Diero, accordianist.

The screen feature is "Honeymoon Hate," starring Florence Vidor. An overture, Jesse Crawford's organ feature, a "Krazy Kat" cartoon, and the news reel complete the program.

"Devil Dancer" Goes Into Rivoli Instead of Rialto

As the Rialto stage is not large enough, Samuel Goldwyn has booked "The Devil Dancer," the United Artists release featuring Gilda Gray, into the Rivoli Theatre. The producer [illegible] as part of Miss Gray's personal appearance with the film could not, it was found, be mounted on the Rialto stage.

It is said that "The Devil Dancer" and Miss Gray's production will go into the Rivoli on December 17, tentatively.

Opinions on Pictures

Now We're In The Air

Slapstick Comedy Well Gagged for Laughs

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE comedy duo from the Famous lot—Raymond Hatton and Wallace Beery, put on another of their laughable side-shows and when the incidents and scenes are all in, it can be catalogued as a nifty. It's burlesque with a vengeance. Some of it borders on the vulgar. The old lady from Newton Center may not like it, but her young relatives will. The comics put on kilts and have a lot of fun with the Scotch national dress. They are represented as Americans bent upon getting the wealth of their Scotch grand-dad—an oldtimer with a yen for aviation. So they take to the air. And the fun begins.

The piece is packed with gags of the slapstick brand. Ray and Wally get mixed up with the aviation forces and are carried into the enemy lines via a circus balloon. When they return in an enemy plane they are mistaken for spies and nearly executed.

For such a slapstick film considerable money has been spent on the production. Which proves that the producers are taking their comedies seriously. These settings and details tone up the picture and balance it. Too much horse-play is featured, but you don't notice the shortcomings with the scenes and the lively high jinks. George Marion's subtitles are gems of wit. And they are brief and to the point. In all a hilarious comedy.

Drawing Power: Stars are popular. Their names should interest fans. Title is provocative. For any house. Exploitation Angles: Feature comedy team telling they've gone in for aviation.

THEME: Comedy of Americans determined to get wealth of Scotch grandfather. They become aviators.

Cast: Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton, Louise Brooks, Russell Simpson, Emile Chautard, Malcolm Waite, Duke Martin. Director, Frank Strayer. Distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, December, 1927.

Ladies Must Dress

Conventional Film Story Is Fairly Bright

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE biggest obstacle to overcome in fashioning a screen comedy is that of keeping it from falling off toward the finish. If the piece is spontaneous, if it clicks all of the way without spending too much of its sparkle in the early reels the result can always be chalked up as satisfactory, provided there is a germ of an idea to carry it by. The trouble here is that it sets too hot a pace—which is not maintained as it builds along. The best laughs come early—and a story has to be unusually lively to send out chuckles from inception to conclusion.

The idea exploited here has seen yeoman service. That is nothing against it. A shopgirl—very much to the flapper—sees to it that she has her adventures despite a husband who works at a nearby counter. There's a stenographer who doesn't know so much what it is all about. You mix up the characters, place them in the store and in a gay boy's apartment and eventually they are extricated from the necessary complications. In the shuffle the old-fashioned stenographer learns how to put them on to attract the men.

The story is just a tidbit of a plot—but it skips along pretty well, asking no odds and making no pretentions of trying to click out of its class—which is the average program field. The star is Virginia Valli, but she doesn't have the opportunities to flash the laughs. The other players outshine her—namely, Nancy Carroll and Hallam Cooley. M. S. Boylan's titles are first rate.

Drawing Power: Title should intrigue them. Needs advertising and well-balanced program. Suitable for average houses. Exploitation Angles: Feature tie-up with modiste shops. Make a bid for clerks and stenographers.

THEME: Romantic comedy of working girls—one old-fashioned, the other a flapper. Former gets her man when latter makes her over.

Distributed by Fox. Released, December, 1927. Length, six reels.

Cast: Virginia Valli, Lawrence Gray, Hallam Cooley, Nancy Carroll, Earle Foxe. Director, Victor Heerman.

The Private Life of Helen of Troy

Kidding An Ancient Triangle—Clever Film

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE was only one way to handle "The Private Life of Helen of Troy"—and that was to kid it. So the sponsors proceeded to satirize the Erskine story. By doing so they out-Erskined Erskine himself. The book was smart reading and the film reaches out and grabs nifty wisecracks to help explain a very modern version of the love life of the first Helen.

Alexander Korda, the director, has been wisely coached in the American way of kidding an idea along. Had the story been done a la Homer, Helen's life would have proved boresome indeed. But he gives it a modern dressing and wastes no time in giving it the necessary color. There are traffic cops in Sparta—and patrioteers who talk the king into war. They even have a shipping board and adopt a slogan—"give 'til it hurts." Such a timely slant spells an entertainment which has them laughing all the way.

As for Helen and the king and the Trojan prince—well, it turns out to be a complicated affair between them—with the queen registering a deal of S. A.

History is upset in the bargain. We discover who started and won and lost the Trojan war. The merry quips keep pace with the humor of the situations. It is finely photographed and paced in artful style by Maria Corda and Lewis Stone—particularly the latter. The modern twists and touches make Troy your own town and its characters people you will recognize in some affair or other. A very neat picture and certain to please those who know their onions.

Drawing Power: Certain to go well because of book's popularity. O. K. for high class houses. Exploitation Angles: Feature author and star and tie up with modiste shops, etc.

THEME: Triangle of ancient love modernized with comedy trimming.

Distributed by First National. Length, nine reels. Released ————.

Cast: Maria Corda, Lewis Stone, Ricardo Cortez, George Fawcett, Alice White, Gordon Elliot, Tom O'Brien, Bert Sprotte, Mario Carillo, Charles Puffy. Director, Alexander Korda.

Brass Knuckles

An Exciting Underworld Melodrama

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A GRIPPING, tense melodrama, this feature narrowly misses being an exceptionally good picture. There are dramatic situations enough for a half a dozen thrillers; in fact there seems to be a tendency to overdo them a bit. An elimination here and there, possibly, or a slight cutting of some of the more dramatic sequences might have made them more effective.

Monte Blue seemed to lose some little sympathy from a very sympathetic role when he was sent out to participate in another job, after his gallantry in saving the life of the warden and receiving a pardon. The hiding of the jewels in Betty Bronson's doll lent plenty of suspense, but it seemed a little prolonged.

Monte Blue and Miss Bronson make a winning combination, though Miss Bronson was inclined to spring too rapidly from the little girl to the grown woman with the advent of her eighteenth birthday, with little to indicate so much passage of time. However, as a general thing the story ran smoothly, and it will have its appeal to followers of the melodramatic anywhere. The attempted jail break, the coming of the detectives to Monte's apartment and the battle between Monte and "Brass Knuckles" Lamont, well played by William Russell, all lend a lot of dramatic action to the film. The entire cast does its work well.

Drawing Power: A gripping story that should go well in almost any house. Exploitation Angles: The attempted jail break; the underworld atmosphere; the prominence of the leading players.

THEME: Melodrama of the underworld in which the daughter of a lifer is entrusted to the keeping of a pardoned prisoner, against whom all sorts of intrigue is directed, but he eventually falls in love with, and wins the girl.

Distributed by Warner Bros. Released, December 3, 1927. Length, 6,330 feet. The Cast: Monte Blue, Betty Bronson, William Russell, Georgie Stone, Paul Panzer, Jack Curtis. Story by Harvey Gates. Scenario by Harvey Gates. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.

The Swift Shadow

Has Melodrama and Lots of Action

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LARGE chunks of melodrama are contained in this story of a dog brought up to hate and kill. A good example of the compactness and interrelation of events, the picture, as directed by Jerome Storm, is a good program attraction, the intelligent performances of the dog and the heavy carrying conviction. An exhibitor can count on its entertaining qualities as it has the ingredients that have been found to please the public.

The character of the dog's owner has been painted a heavy black; he is a murderous fellow and the dog partakes of his savagery. After his master has committed a particularly vicious crime, the dog is captured as his confederate and is about to be put to death when the son of the murdered man wins the sheriff over to his plan of trailing the murderer with the latter's dog.

They trail him to a ranch, where he is making love to the owner's daughter. The villain realizes that his real nature is known so he frames the boy as a thief. Intercepting a note from the boy to the girl, the heavy realizes that his suit for the latter's hand is fruitless so he robs her father and threatens to molest the girl. At this crisis, the hero appears and tries desperately to subdue the heavy, but unsuccessfully. He is down on the floor in a helpless condition when the villain orders the dog to finish him, but the dog's respect for the hero is greater than he realizes. Later the dog kills his former master in a frenzy of hate.

Drawing Power: Good. Exploitation Angles: See press book.

THEME: Melodrama of dog whose hate for his murderous master leads him to kill him when he threatens the life of a boy, who had taught him the meaning of kindness.

Produced and Distributed by F B O. Released December 11, 1927. Length, 4,892 feet. The Cast: Ranger (Dog), Josephine Borio, Sam Nelson, William Bertram and Al Smith. Story and adaptation by Ethel Hill. Director, Jerome Storm.

Deadman's Curve

Plenty of Action in This Racing Story

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

PRACTICALLY all the elements that go to make an entertaining program picture can be found in "Deadman's Curve," a little brother to "The Racing Romeo." Good acting, plenty of action and a constant shifting of events alternately favoring the two rivals combine to send it "home" to an audience with a punch. The polished performance of Charles Byer as the villain contrasts strongly with that of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as the intense young inventor. These two hate each other with vigor, part of the cause of the war between them being due to sweet Sally Blane. These three act their respective roles well. Playing an important part in the plot is Kit Guard, who lends snatches of comedy to relieve the tension. For "Deadman's Curve" is cast in a more serious vein than "The Racing Romeo." In several of its scenes can be identified shots from the Grange opus, but the racing scenes of that picture were so good that they enhance the auto climax of "Deadman's Curve."

Byer, the chief engineer of the girl's father's company, uses his influence to have Fairbanks' newly invented engine rejected, so that Fairbanks is hard put to find financial backing for it. Unknown to him the girl, whom he had suspected as a tool of Marshall's, finances the motor so that Fairbanks is able to enter the auto race provided he can get the entry fee. Byer, a competitor in the race, bribes Fairbanks' mechanic so that he can destroy what is presumably Fairbanks' motor; but he is purposely led to destroy another motor instead. The bribe money is sufficient as the entry fee, so Fairbanks, with the right motor in his machine, enters the race, and after a tight tussle defeats Byer, who has termed him yellow and afraid of "Deadman's Curve."

A good little picture all the way through.

Drawing Power: Good. Exploitation Angles: Use auto tires, horns and other motor vehicle paraphernalia. Play up Fairbanks and the auto race sequence.

THEME: Action drama of young inventor, who enters auto classic, emerging successful and proving the quality of his own invention—a motor. He has to fight odds to win the racing event, and he even thinks his girl is against him until after the race, when he finds out that she had been aiding him all the time.

Produced and Distributed by F B O. Released, January 15, 1928. Length, 5,511 feet. The Cast: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Sally Blane, Charles Byer, Arthur Metcalfe, Kit Guard, Byron Douglas, James Mason. Director, Richard Rosson.

Cheating Cheaters

Crook Drama with a Punch

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THE Max Marcin stage success has been capably adapted for the screen, but in the transition it has lost a little something. Where it drags in spots the spoken word undoubtedly added to the effectiveness. However, it is a good crook picture with a good story having a unique twist, and it is admirably acted by a cast headed by Betty Compson and Kenneth Harlan.

In the picture are all the qualities necessary for success. It is replete with suspense, there are some well built dramatic climaxes and Eddie Gribbon lends the story a rare touch of comedy when he departs from his thug role to assume that of a butler. It is a splendid piece of work.

The story holds the interest throughout except in those few spots where the action is inclined to drag just a trifle. It is the tale of a supposed shoplifter, Nan Carey, who is released through the influence of Lazare, a crooked lawyer in league with the Brockton gang, which has designs on the Palmer jewels. Betty Compson, as the girl, joins up with the Brocktons, who take a Summer place adjacent to that of the Palmers'. Tom Palmer, the son, becomes infatuated with Nan and the families are brought together. By some clever conniving Nan gets access to the Palmer jewels and the gang plans to purloin them that night. The Palmers, it develops, are another band of crooks out to do a job on the wealthy Brocktons. Both gangs are caught in the act of thievery and it is then revealed that Nan is the head of the detective agency employed to round up the crooks.

Drawing Power: It is a very clever crook story and one suitable as a drawing card in houses of all types from the best to the poorest. Exploitation Angles: The story is well known as a tremendous stage success, and this, with the popularity of the leading players, should be your best bet for exploitation.

THEME: Crook drama in which girl detective gains access to a gang of crooks and joins them in their exploits. They scheme to rob the alleged wealthy Palmers, as the latter, also crooks, scheme to rob them, thinking them wealthy. The girl succeeds in cleaning up both gangs.

Distributed by Universal. Released, October 9, 1927. Length, 5,623 feet. The Cast: Betty Compson, Kenneth Harlan, Sylvia Ashton, Erwin Connelly, Maude Turner Gordon, E. J. Ratcliffe, Lucien Littlefield, Eddie Gribbon, Cesare Gravina. Director, Edward Laemmle. Author, Max Marcin. Adaptation, Charles Logue.

"Hoof Marks"

Not So Good

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THERE'S not much of an appeal to this western starring the new cowboy performer, Jack Donovan. The story has seen service before on numerous occasions, but that would be inconsequential if it had been presented with the vim and dash a good western should have and if its central figure were a little more convincing. Donovan has not grasped the knack of acting before the all-watchful camera. The performance he gives is a negative one, due, perhaps, to the fact that he is a tenderfoot.

They've tried to inject some mystery into the reels. How is it that the rustled cattle can be traced only so far, their tracks disappearing as if they had flown away? This question confronts the hero, Cal, his sidekick, Rawhide, and Alice, the daughter of the owner of the ranch. The villains are quite successful with their rustling, although Cal is trying to stop their pilfering. Working under secret orders, he is never quite able to catch up with the villainy underfoot and for a time it looks as if he will be dangling from a nearby tree, as the chief rustler has implicated him in a murder.

He escapes from prison with the aid of the faithful Rawhide and the two of them watch the rustlers at their secret operations, witnessing their method of driving the stolen herds onto huge tarpaulins spread on the ground and then into waiting trucks, where they are driven hurriedly away. After solving the mystery, Cal and his friend give pursuit to the rustlers, who are trying to take the girl across the border. The usual slugging bee occurs at this time.

Drawing Power: Poor. Star is unknown. Exploitation Angles: Play up element of mystery.

THEME: Outdoor drama of cow hand, who saves cattle of his ranch from gang of rustlers. He wins daughter of ranch owner.

Produced by J. McConnell Productions, Inc. Distributed by Pathe. Released, November 13, 1927. Length, 4,076 feet. The Cast: Jack Donovan, Edward Brady, Edward Cecil, William Steele, Peggy Montgomery, Peggy O'Day, Peggy Shaw. Director, Tenny Wright. Story and scenario by J. A. Roach.

London After Midnight

Another Chaney Melodrama—Not Up to His Best

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN a star of the caliber of Lon Chaney hits the bulls-eye with such a melodramatic thriller as "The Unholy Three," it inspires him to try and duplicate the hit. And that's some assignment, as any popular star well grounded in his art will tell you. Chaney has never been quite as fortunate in his films since the above-mentioned film graced the screen. He's simply paying the penalty of doing something extraordinarily well. What follows, naturally, is brought into immediate comparison.

Take his newest entry for example. It is a good melodrama, but not a great one. With any other star who caters to the melomaniacs in the role it would be accepted as quite a picture. As it is, Chaney is popular enough to drag them out to see him here. They'll find him in an unsympathetic characterization—one which stands apart as having been written solely as a vehicle. He has an uncanny part, but he doesn't extract any sympathetic bond from the audience.

Tod Browning wrote it—and Tod wasn't up to his usual good form. He fails to attach much importance to the romantic side of the yard, the heroine having little in common with the central figure. Chaney plays a Scotland Yard detective who works on the theory that if a crook is hypnotized a crime may be solved no matter if it occurred several years before the hypnotic test. The idea as exploited is fairly interesting, but it gets involved with mystifying detail. Several characters come under suspicion, which makes it ring with the necessary suspense. It is competently acted.

Drawing Power: Chaney's popularity will attract them. O. K. for all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up Chaney as having another different characterization. Exploit the theme as novel, etc.

Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn. Length, six reels. Released, December, 1927.

THEME: Crook melodrama in which detective tries to solve a mysterious death by hypnotizing certain suspects.

Cast: Lon Chaney, Marceline Day, Henry B. Walthall, Percy Williams, Conrad Nagel, Polly Moran, Edna Tichenor, Claude King. Director, Tod Browning.

Red Riders of Canada

A Type Story Is Made Interesting

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS latest addition to the film stories of Canada's red coats is a great deal more plausible than many of its predecessors. Charles Byer, one of F B O's new players, takes the leading role opposite Patsy Ruth Miller, and although he is called upon to do yeoman work in saving her from the clutches of a gang of cutthoats he makes his adventures fairly plausible. Beautiful scenery makes the picture decidedly pleasant to look at.

The father of Miss Miller and Rex Lease, her brother, had been killed by the notorious fur pirate, Le Busard, ably portrayed by Harry Woods. Byer, sent out to capture him, is bringing him back to the station when he sees a girl standing on a bank calling him. She tells him she is looking for her brother, who had gone to kill Le Busard, and upon learning the identity of the policeman's prisoner she conceives the idea of having them spend the night at her cabin so that she can kill Le Busard. He, however, tells her that if he does not return her brother, whom he holds as prisoner, will die.

It is here that a little inconsistency in the girl's actions is noticeable. Instead of revealing this information to the policeman, who surely would have been able to help her, she frees Le Busard and accompanies him to his stronghold, believing his promise to free her brother. He, of course, goes back on his word, orders her brother slain, and plans to keep the girl for himself. She had left a trail while traveling to the villain's rendezvous, and by it Byer follows them to the cabin where Lease is about to die.

In the scuffle that follows, Le Busard's henchmen are tied up and Le Busard, himself, killed by Lease just as he was about to finish the policeman. Lease was mortally wounded in the mix-up and he, too, dies.

Drawing Power: Good. Exploitation Angles: Mention Miss Miller's name and type of story. You can promise them action.

THEME: Outdoor drama of Canadian mountie, who rescues girl from clutches of notorious killer. Her brother dies while he is aiding the policeman conquer the villain and his gang. She finds happiness as the officer's wife.

Produced and Distributed by F B O. Released, April 15, 1928. Length, 6,419 feet. The Cast: Patsy Ruth Miller, Charles Byer, Harry Woods, Rex Lease and Barney Furey. Story by Wm. B. Morey. Director, Robert DeLacy.

Gold from Weepah

Bill Cody Western Is Weak

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS production by Bill Cody, in which he stars, is lamentably weak as a Western. Generally pictures dealing with the out of doors carry more of a wallop in their highlights and have at least action doled out in generous measure to recompense the shortcomings of the plot, nine times out of ten a slight variation of the theme of hero versus villain to save the girl. The little Western town of Weepah with its recent gold rush was not so long ago featured in the newspaper headlines. This fact—that the name, "Weepah," attained national publicity—will come in handy in exploiting a picture which otherwise has little to recommend it.

Cody, as a fancily dressed Westerner, first meets the girl, Doris Dawson, when he drags her auto out of a muddy stream. From there on he takes an interest in her, she finding a job in a dance hall where she is surrounded by the ever-present villains, including a jealous woman who wants Cody for herself. While the girl works in the dance hall her father searches for gold. Eventually, he makes a rich strike, the villains become aware of it, rob him and for a time exult until the confident Cody appears and snatches their catch with his whip.

The villains then attempt to jump the rich claim of the girl's father. They attack him, then rush to town to burn the records. Cody saves the records from the flames and chases the villains to a nearby town, where they endeavor to file a new claim on the mine. Before this he had to escape from the jealous woman in the dance hall and then rescue the girl when she was kidnaped. The villains are confronted with strong evidence and removed to prison.

Cody uses a whip instead of the customary six-shooter and this fact lends a touch of novelty to the usual climax.

Drawing Power: Fair. Exploitation Angles: Make strong display of lariat and cowboy outfits.

THEME: Western drama. Westerner saves girl and her father from claim-jumpers who are after their mine. By his efforts the villains are imprisoned and the girl is rescued from a kidnaper.

Produced by Bill Cody Production. Distributed by Pathe. Released November 20, 1927. Length, 4,968 feet. The Cast: Bill Cody, Doris Dawson, Dick La Reno, Joe Harrington, Fontaine La Rue, David Dunbar. Story by Bill Cody. Director, William Bertram.

"The Twenty-Four Dollar Island"

(Pathe-Flaherty—One Reel)

UNIQUE shots of the lower portion of Manhattan Island—unlike any other spot on the globe, an emblem of this industrial age, staggeringly gigantic in the quantity of its wealth, dwarfing the throngs of workers in its canyons walled by enormous skyscrapers. What Robert Flaherty has done here can be likened to a tone poem in celluloid, its motif a song of steel and strength. The lens of the camera glimpses scenes from different parts of the great city—scenes of activity which only slacken with the coming of night. Whether they be the transportation systems of the North and East rivers, the huge structures flung across the latter stream, the constant diggings of foundations going on ever and anon even in the dead of night, or the hard and cold majesty of a lofty tower of granite dedicated to the god of business—they have all been photographed beautifully with a remarkable sense of camera placement that will engross the attention of the epicureans of the cinema.

But, unfortunately, these shots following one another with such finely sensitized proportion cannot be called proper film fare for the average movie goer. It is without titles (except for one or two at the very beginning) and for that reason is not suited for the great majority. The only audiences that we can see taking a liking to it are those devotees of the little theatres which cater to a more intelligent clientele than do the larger houses punch-drunk with the presentation and vaudeville. Outside of these houses, it may go over here and there, but in most cases will miss its mark.

Robert Flaherty produced and photographed the reel which assures a fine quality. J. D. Permaine did the editing.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Just Kidding"

(Pathe—One Reel)

HERE is a subject that should lend a bit of variety to most any program. It is of the Rare-Bit series, edited and titled cleverly by Beth Brown. It is a little interlude in the life of most any child, showing chapters from the time of birthright up through the love-sick age. The baby is first shown being footprinted, then as an entrant in the baby show, on through the early school age with its May day festival, to the old swimmin' hole and into the lovesick era. There are episodes that will recall the old days to any of the grown-ups or near grown-ups. It is splendidly done and entertaining.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Pawnshop"
(Export & Import—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

EXPORT and Import has another good Chaplin number in "The Pawnshop," one even better in fact than "The Fireman." Considering the fact that "The Pawnshop" is one of the dozen comedies made by Chaplin for the old Mutual company under his famous million dollar contract, it is remarkable how the picture is still "there" (most emphatically) when it comes to the question of provoking laughter. How Charlie can capture and hold your attention! The foremost artist in dispensing chuckles, his antics of fourteen years ago are not passe when viewed even in the year '27 when the movies, no longer a swaddling youngster, can afford to look back at the days when it was young.

Charlie, looking so humble and self effacing, is great as the pawnshop clerk. Practically everything he does provokes some trouble with an innocent party, whether he be the old graybeard of a pawnbroker, the assistant clerk or the policeman. They have a scene with a stepladder that would make it hard for one to stifle an insistent chuckle even if one wanted to. Besides their hilarious affair with the stepladder they have another one with some pie dough. It is all good fun, at times superlatively good, with Chaplin's gift for comedy and pathos being well expressed in a scene with an alarm clock and another with a bluffing beggar.

There are many moments when the comedy of Charlie is so ripe, so artistically done, that even the densest movie fan could not fail to appreciate it. Besides portraying the leading role Chaplin also directed. Edna Purviance is seen as the pawnbroker's daughter and Mack Swain as a villain after the shop's jewels.

This old Chaplin is a sure bet for any program.

"Dummies"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LARRY SEMON wrote and directed this two-reeler, produced for Educational by I. E. Chadwick. The picture is good for a fair number of laughs with its story of a traveling show and a gang of crooks after money bags. Some of Semon's gags are pretty old, but then Semon has more action—well done action, too—than you will generally find in a two-reeler. With the assistance of Photographer H. F. Koenkamp, Semon has incorporated more of thrills than comedy here. Such stuff as a rotten egg oozing down the countenance of an actor and a little monkey up to monkeyshines will create chuckles, but not of the uproarious sort. Such action stuff as Semon swinging from one high tower to another by means of a long rope will cause thrills, as care and nicety are noticeable in these shots.

With Marie Astaire, Jim Donnelly, Willie Dennis and Paul Dennis as his support, Semon is at his best after the comedy has been under way for a while. It is with the introduction of the crooks and their subsequent escape and capture that the action becomes lively and interesting. Semon is placed in various precarious positions, on the edge of a cliff a couple of hundred feet or so high or on top of a tower up which are climbing armed thugs anxious to beat him up.

"Injun Food—Moods of the Sea"
(Educational—One Reel)

COLUMBIA RIVER salmon trying to evade the watchful Indians on their way up the Celilo Falls to spawn are the subjects in the first half of this new Outdoor Sketch of Robert E. Bruce. A model for perseverance and tenacity is this fish, which will struggle against almost insurmountable obstacles. There are some shots close up to the struggling battlers—a large school of them. One of Bruce's titles refers to the alumni—the matured fish wise in the ways of evading man—among whom the Indian "works havoc."

Bruce has dealt with the sea before, but it is always a subject to which you can return to find new things and new aspects in its ever-changing grandeur. A sort of smoky, shadowing light is noticeable in these shots of a broad stretch of water (the Pacific, near whose waters Bruce makes his home). The dunes of sand along the shore, the beauty of a sunlit sky over the expanse of water, flying waves and sand—the sea has ever a fascination. It is also seen with the moon's soft light over its rippling surface. Bruce has thrown only eight titles into this sea subject, but they are appropriate selections.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Bucking the Handicap"
(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

GRANTLAND RICE has another of his interesting sportlights, which shows how handicaps in all lines of sport are overcome by determination and gameness. He has some exceptionally good shots of the diminutive halfback, who by his speed and gameness proves a star among the giants of the game. He depicts a one-armed golfer who consistently plays in the 70s and a one-legged golfer who shoots regularly in the 80s. There are baseball players who overcome the handicap of poor sight by wearing classes on the field and proving stars, and there is a deaf and dumb football team that is in no way handicapped by its affliction. Other features add to the general effectiveness of the film.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Bare Fists"
(Universal-Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is another Northwest mountie, whose theme is identical with scores of others that have gone before, but somehow or other they all seem to hold the interest, illogical as their stories are. There is one thing about them, they do not lack for action, and this one is no exception.

Jack Perrin is Jerry Masters the mounty, the victim of many an intrigue, but in the end he gets his man, as usual. He is captured by two outlaws he is trailing and presumably is safely put out of the way, but he is only stunned by the fall from his horse and when he recovers he takes up the trail again. This time he goes to the cabin of Poiret, the trapper, where the outlaws have their rendezvous, and where he first comes upon the pretty daughter of Poiret, whom Lemaire, leader of the outlaws, intends to marry at all costs. Again Jerry is worsted in an encounter with the oulaws, but his faithful horse unbinds him. Again the chase is continued and this time Jerry arrives just in time to save Marie from the advances of Lemaire. Of course the mountie and the girl then realize that they are in love. It's good entertainment even if the story is hackneyed.

"Buster's Big Chance"
(Universal-Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BUSTER BROWN and his cohorts raise a lot of merry Ned in this entirely disconnected story that is built for fun purposes and succeeds in the purpose very well. It is more or less a series of gags and lively situations that culminate in the breaking up of a seance given by her mother and the turning up of a couple of crook spirit mediums.

It all starts out with a joy ride in a goat cart, with Buster and Mary Jane the occupants of the cart. Gustav, the rival, in a baby roadster weans away the fickle Mary Jane temporarily, until his car is wrecked and Buster and the goat overtake him. The trio, accompanied by Tige, proceed to the Brown home as the seance is at its height.

Behind the black curtain they impersonate the spirits called for and detect the medium and his assistant in the act of thievery. They rush for the police and, for once, win the commendation of the entire party. There are some humorous incidents in connection with the kids' impersonations of deceased ancestors, and generally the picture is above the average.

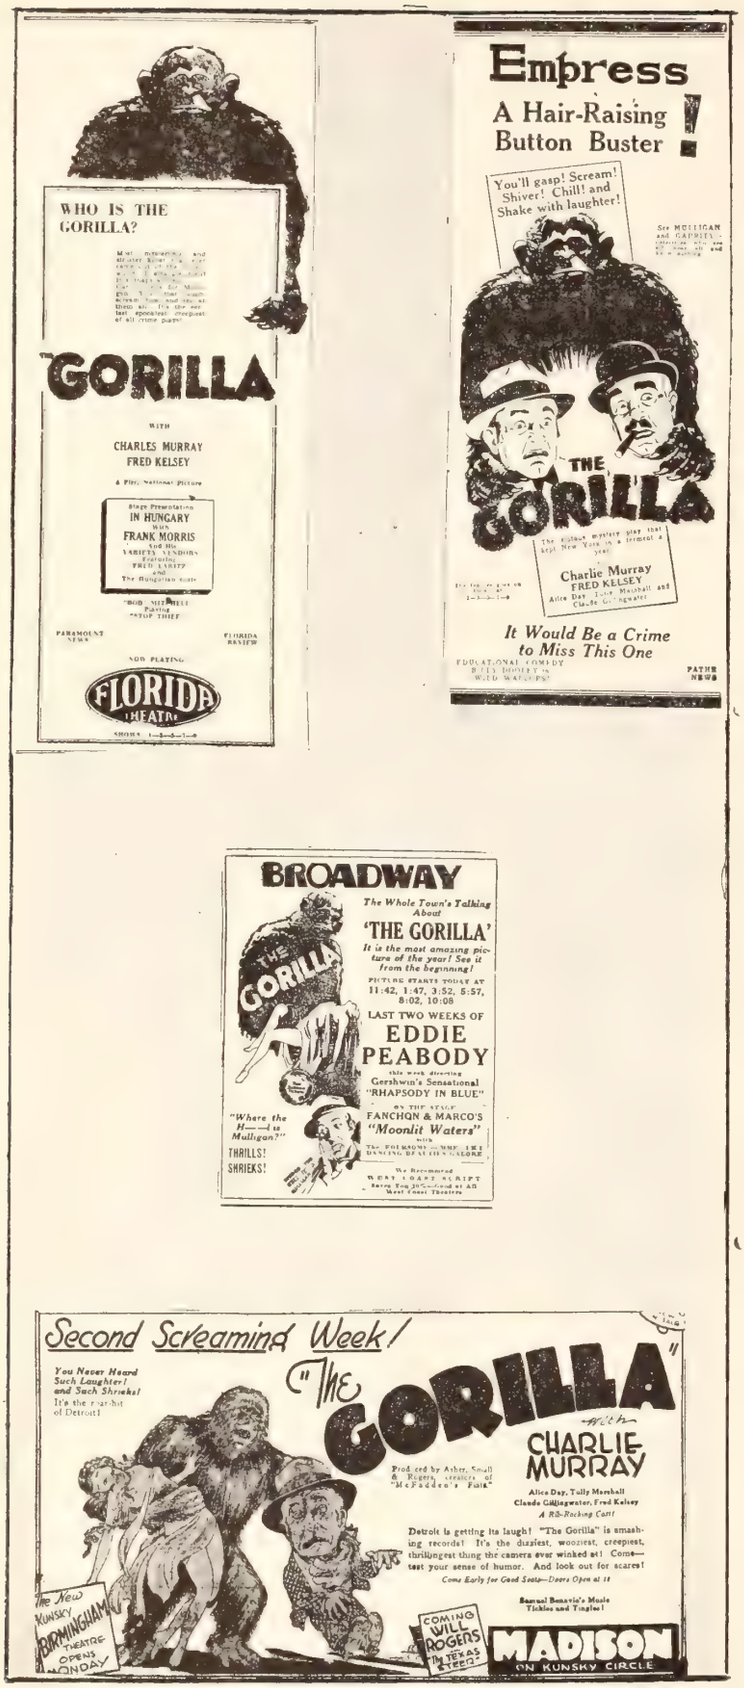
"A Case of Scotch"
(Universal-Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

JOE MURPHY has a much better story than usual in this one of the Gump comedy series. In fact it is one of the best he has done. He is given a bevy of bathing beauties to assist him and he has some gags that are really humorous. As a Scotchman he appears right at home and is good for a laugh in the kilties alone.

The Hokum Realty Company provides a motor bus to convey prospective buyers to its realty holdings at the beach and Andy takes advantage of the free ride for a picnic outing for his Scottish society. Arrived at the beach Andy makes a distinct hit with the bathing girls, to the disgust of Min, who leads him away to a wheel of fortune, whose winning number is determined by an electric light. Andy seeing financial ruin cuts the wire controlling the light, and little Chester, at the same time brings into play a small mirror, which he shines continuously on the number 8, which his mother is playing.

They walk away with all the goods in the shop, as the cut wire is discovered by the proprietor. The Gumps elude the policeman, who gives chase, and become interested in a huge rubber frog on the beach. Andy inflates it with free gas, and to their complete consternation it floats into the air with the family aboard and lands in their own front yard, thereby completing an entirely inexpensive day's pleasure, to say nothing of the groceries acquired.

"Fall In"
(Educational—One Reel)



WE venture the observation that the Cameo brand of one-reel comedies has never had a better comedian than the slender Monte Collins. This number has a lot of laughs for a one-reeler and is of a different tone from the ordinary as its scene is laid in pioneer days when the Indian was ever ready to battle the white invasion.

Collins has the part of a gold-digger, who spoils the dinner of a nearby group of campers. He invites them to his own cabin and there they sit down to dine. Comedy is pigeonholed in various little incidents which also make this dinner a spoiled affair. A pet bear knocks the contents of a castor oil bottle into the stew they are about to eat and painted Indians enter upon the scene to put the diners to flight. That old gag of the twisted gun barrel also make its entrance. The comedy is fast moving and no small praise is due to the little bear, who ambles along humorously after he has tasted some whiskey. They have photographed him in slow motion so that his comical gait is emphasized. Jules White directed and Lucille Hutton and Jack Lloyd are in the supporting cast.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Love In A Police Station"
(Sennett-Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS Mack Sennett comedy featuring Madeline Hurlock and Eddie Quillan is a feeble attempt to be humorous. It is just a lot of hokum and slapstick hurled together apparently as the picture progressed without any pre-conceived idea of how it was going to progress. The Sennett cops figure prominently and do a lot of clowning that may have an appeal to the very young element of picture goers.

Eddie Quillan is a traffic cop, captivated by Madeline Hurlock, whom he halts for speeding in her new roadster. It would be difficult for anyone to be funny with the material at hand. Miss Hurlock does little more than beam her way through the picture. She vamps her way out of speed charges through her friendliness with the Police chief, whom she has completely captivated, though there is a rival in the grass widow. After much rough and tumble action, little of which is funny, Eddie manages to outdo the chief in the girl's affections.

Four newspaper displays which exploited showings of "The Gorilla" at first run theatres. The collection shows some clever adaptations of press book layouts, notably that for the Florida theatre, Jacksonville. This was two columns by 10½ inches. The other displays shown were used by the following: The Madison, Detroit; Broadway, Portland, Ore; Empire, Oklahoma City.

William Christeson is planning the opening of his new theatre in Anderson, Mo., soon.

Work on a new theatre in St. Joseph, Mo., to be operated for negroes, costing $35,000, has begun. The contract has been awarded the Lehr Construction Company of St. Joseph.

I. W. Maple of Bethany, Mo., has taken over the management of the Rex theatre, Ridgeway, Mo.

The contract for John B. Tackett's new theatre in Coffeyville, Kas., seating 1,200 persons, has been let and work begun.

The Kirwin Opera House of Kansas City, Kas., has been leased by Ray Downing.

Kansas City theatres already are looking forward to Christmas decorations and programs, although nothing unusual in exploitation is planned by any of the down town houses.

The Uptown theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, will open its doors on January 1.

At Loew's Midland the Junior League Follies, a social organization of Kansas City, will stage a special show the morning of December 26, the proceeds to go to charitable institutions. Orphans and crippled children from various institutions will be admitted free. The regular Christmas program at the Loew's Midland will consist of liberal lobby decorations, specially arranged organ solos pertaining to Christmas and an overture of Christmas songs. At the Newman, slides again will be used in conjunction with an organ solo in expressing the "Merry Christmas" wishes of the theatre to its patrons, while there also will be lobby decorations of wreaths. Virtually the same type of program will be seen at the Royal, Mainstreet, Pantages, Capitol and Globe theatres. Some of the smaller suburban houses planned the giving away of sacks of candy to children on Christmas night, but there were no pretentious decoration plans by any of the smaller houses.

Kansas City paid its farewell tribute to Dave Rubinoff, soloist and director of the Loew's Midland orchestra, this week. It is doubtful if any other musical director in the annals of Kansas City theatredom ever became as popular in the brief period of two months as did Rubinoff. He will be succeeded by Gerard Carbonara, who has been conducting orchestras in various eastern cities for [illegible] interests. Rubinoff goes to the Allen theatre, Cleveland.

The Isis theatre, suburban house of Kansas City which recently reopened after having been remodeled, has hit upon a profitable idea in attracting the younger patrons. Most managers of suburban houses keep an alert eye open for all "necking" parties in the theatre and many a young couple is "bawled out" nightly. However, the Isis is advertising its loges as "love seats." The theatre is doing a good business.

Edward S. Olsmith has succeeded C. W. Allen as branch manager of the Pathe exchange in Kansas City, Mr. Allen being transferred to the Oklahoma branch.

San Francisco

THE Bay Point, Pinole and Rodeo theatres, which have constituted a trio circuit under the management of L. W. Eaton for some seven years, have been purchased by M. Hughes and Joseph Garnier. Both Hughes and Garnier have been employed at the Majestic theatre, 21st and Mission streets, San Francisco, for two years. They are experienced, and plan notable improvements in all three theatres. The realty ownership of the Bay Point property goes with the deal. They took possession November 15th.

Manager Eaton, upon selling, had originally planned to motor to Florida, where he and his wife have fruit land, but the lateness of the season has caused them to defer the trip until spring.

Efforts of a 20-year-old youth averted a possible panic when a can of film exploded at noon, November 22nd, in the operating room of the Edison theatre, 39 Powell street. Two were burned. Al Garcia, the operator, was severely burned about the face and hands. Bob Hulman, 20, 1532 Hayes street, was in the audience with about 25 others when the explosion occurred. He opened fire exits and calmed the confusion. After calming the audience, Hulman rushed to the operating room, where he assisted Garcia, the operator, to extinguish the fire. Hulman was burned about the hands and face and went to his home after receiving medical treatment at the hospital.

Des Moines

STAGE equipment for the new theatre at Waterloo, Iowa, which will be one of the A. H. Blank-Publix chain, has been installed. This theatre has a very fine stage, and the stage settings cost about $15,000. The exterior of the new theatre at Waterloo, which is to be called the Riviera, is different from the style seen before in Iowa. It is of dark stone and Oriental in architecture. The interior carries out an unusual effect with the shrubbery and landscape scenes on the sidewalls, so that it gives the effect of being in an open-air theatre. The lighting effects are lantern effect, very much like those of the Capitol Theatre in Des Moines. Herb Grove, who is manager of the Des Moines Theatre in Des Moines, is now in Waterloo taking charge of the opening of the Riviera, which is scheduled for December 29. It has not yet been dfinitely announced who will take the management of the Riviera.

Gene Melone held high score of the Universal team last week, with a bowling total of 246. Universal last week won three games against Paramount, which places them in high place. Pathe, which held first place for quite a run, is now in second place; while First National is in third.

THE bravery and judgment of Charles Harrison, manager; Harold Cardo, operator; Robert Anderson, usher, and other employes, prevented a panic in the O'Brien theatre, Renfrew, Ontario, when fire was discovered in the building by Mr. Anderson while a capacity audience was enjoying the moving picture performance.

The fire was discovered in the offices under the balcony occupied by M. J. O'Brien, owner. Mr. Anderson notified Manager Harrison, who sent in an alarm to the fire department, and also instructed Mr. Cardo to continue screening the picture. When smoke started to pour into the theatre, Manager Harrison had the fire exits thrown open and requested the patrons to leave quietly, which they did. In the meantime, a huge crowd gathered outside of the theatre because smoke and flames could be seen through the front windows. Because of the crowd outside, Mr. Harrison directed the patrons to the fire escapes at the sides and thus escaped congestion.

By smart work, the firemen confined the flames to the offices, the damage being in the neighborhood of $1,000.

Albany

JAMES ROACH, who came to Schenectady from the middle west about two years ago, and later became manager of all the Farley houses in that city, but who of late has been handling the State theatre, resigned last week and has been succeeded by Guy Graves, also of the Farley organization for a number of years, who becomes general manager of all of the Farley string. It is understood, also, that Mr. Graves has bought an interest in the Farley houses. He is an old timer in the business and a score or so years ago was one of the best known bicycle riders in the east. At one itme he was identified with the Proctor houses.

Houses continue to close for the winter, the Criterion at Roscoe being the latest to notify Albany's Film Row. C. W. Patton, owner of the Opera House in Adams, has also decided to operate but one night a week through the winter.

Amos Leonard, sales manager of the Pathe exchange, announced with a smile this week that "it was a boy." The stork s arrival was on December 8, exactly one day later than a year ago, when a daughter arrived at the Leonard home on the morning of December 7.

W. W. Farley is in much the same position at Christmas time as Santa Claus. In other words, Mr. Farley is the father of nine children and he begins his shopping a full month before Christmas Day, and by Christmas Eve, he is generally found making his way homeward with arms laden with bundles.

Among the visitors on Film Row during the past week, were Rev. Father Blais, who operates Community Hall at Schroon Lake, and who does all of his buying along Albany's Row. Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, was in town, and rather excited over the opening of his new theatre in Cambridge. Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Chicago

ROY ALEXANDER has purchased an interest in Columbia Pictures Corporation Chicago Exchange, and has become co-manager with Henri Ellman, who has been manager of this exchange since its organization. Mr. Alexander brings a successful record and many years of experience as an exchange manager to his new duties, and has an unusually wide circle of friends among exhibitors and exchange men, so the success of his new venture seems assured. Mr. Alexander became interested in Columbia in time to participate in the sales conference held in Chicago last week, which was presided over by President Joe Brandt and Treasurer Jack Cohen, of Columbia Pictures. At the conference the new 1928 contract and sales policies were outlined to the fifteen or eighteen branch managers who were present. All agreed that the outlook for Columbia Pictures for the coming season is most gratifying.

The Alma Theatre at 5352 Wentworth Avenue, has been purchased by Tom Christos from Cecil Vigdor, who will leave for California shortly and may make his home in the West.

Harry Lubliner has taken over the Wilson Theatre, 2408 West Madison Street, formerly owned and operated by Lubliner & Trinz and Balaban & Katz.

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Co., stopped off in Chicago last week, en route from the Coast to his New York City headquarters, long enough for a visit with Manager Dave Dubin, of the local exchange.

Salo Auerbach, veteran exhibitor and pioneer in Chicago's film industry, passed away at the Michael Reese Hospital on Sunday, December 11th, after a brief illness. The news of his death surprised and shocked his hundreds of friends among exhibitors and exchange men. Mr. Auerbach's record as a film man goes back to 1910, when he was booker for Ike Ronkel's branch exchange of General Film Company. He later went into the theatre business, being associated with Maurice Choynski and Nate Wolf in the ownership and operation of a number of theatres, a connection which continued until the time of his death. The funeral, which was attended by a large number of his business friends, was held from chapel at 4936 Broadway, on Tuesday afternoon, and the interment was at the Jewish Waldheim Cemetery.

Another sudden death which shocked Chicago motion picture men was that of Joe Pilgrim, of the Academy Theatre, who dropped dead at his home early on Monday morning. Mr. Pilgrim had been attending to his business up to the time of his death. He, like Mr. Auerbach, was an old-timer in the business and numbered his friends by the hundreds.

Earl Johnson closed his Little Theatre at La Grange, Ill., on December 1st, and it is understood the house will remain dark until Christmas.

Mrs. H. R. Herbel and her two children arrived in Chicago last Saturday to join her husband, who has just assumed his duties as manager of Universal's local exchange.

The opening of United Artists' Theatre will take place on December 26th, according to announcement by the company. Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, general manager of United Artists' theatre department, will personally supervise the theatre for the first few weeks, with William Mendelsohn, of United's New York office, directing publicity and exploitation temporarily, and Max Cooper as house manager. The house will be operated on a popular price, continuous policy, opening at 9:30 A. M., top admission being 75 cents. There will be no presentations, but special attention will be devoted to fine musical settings and screen novelties, which will round out the program, which will have as its focal point a big feature picture; that on the opening night will be 'The Dove."

Paul Ash is timing his return from his European vacation in order to arrive at the Oriental Theatre at midnight on December 23d, when he will stage his third annual midnight show for the benefit of the Herald and Examiner Christmas Basket Fund. A tremendous welcome is being planned for this popular showman, an unusual feature [illegible] tire mezzanine seating capacity of three hundred and fifty by Rocco Vocco, representative of Leo Feist, sheet music publisher, for the representatives here of other music houses. Many out-of-town friends of Ash will also be present for his return appearance.

Manager C. C. Wallace, of United Artists' local exchange, has added T. G. Traeumer to his local sales force. Mr. Traeumer comes from Milwaukee and is a newcomer to the film business.

Charles L. Casanave, who recently moved back from Cleveland, where he had been conducting an extensive booking chain, has been named manager of Associated Theatres, Inc. V. U. Young, of a Gary Theatre Corporation, operating the Palace, Orpheum, Broadway, and New Gary, reports that Mr. Casanave is now booking his houses. It is reported that several other theatres will go into the buying chain conducted by Associated Theatres.

Ike Lipson, Cincinnati theatre magnate, was in Chicago last week, and reported that his big, new house, the E. F. Albee, will open on December 24th.

Detroit

AT Richmond, Mich., plans are under way for the erection of a $70,000 theatre building on South Main street adjoining the Hotel Romeo.

It is rumored that Phil Gleichman, who formerly operated the Broadway Strand Theatre, is again interested in the theatre business, having taken some interest in a circuit of Detroit picture houses. Phil is now living in Cleveland, but he will very likely visit this city often in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. William Schuttenhelm celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, Armistice Day. Bill is one of Detroit's pioneers. For several years he was connected with the exchange business.

Ben and Lou Cohen, owners of many picture theatres around this vicinity, recently announced a reduction in prices for both the Hollywood and Colonial Theatres, except on Saturdays and Sundays. The policy, they believe, will be most excellent because it will be an inducement for people on week days, whereas both houses do capacity at top prices on Saturdays and Sundays. Free parking still remains a feature at the Hollywood, the latest house opened by the Messrs. Cohen, the Oriole being the only other house with accommodations for those who drive.

J. J. Auerhaan was recently named publicity director for the Oriental.

Hugh N. Fleming, Jr., of the Eastman Kodak publicity department, traveled here this week to establish contact with amateur motion picture photography fans. Nearly ten thousand persons, it is estimated, responded to his campaigning, which included an elaborate program of war films, released to the public through the courtesy of the Eastman Co. An Amateur picture play as well as comic educational and travel features was shown also.

Russell Chapman, one of the most popular theatre managers here, has assumed the managership of Kunsky's new Birmingham theatre, the first suburban house to become a part of the Kunsky-Publix chain. Ascher Shaw has succeeded Chapman as director at the Adams.

The owners of the new Birmingham are the Briggs Commercial and Development Co., the head of which is Walter Briggs, of the Briggs Body Co. They have leased the building for a long term to the Kunsky Publix organization.

Last week, the Kiwanis Club of Detroit tendered a banquet in honor of the world fliers, Messrs. Schlle and Brock, and through the courtesy of the Munz Theatrical Enterprises, and Manager Holloway of the Grand Riviera, "Monk" Watson with his Keystone Serenaders offered a special entertainment. The event also marked the beginning of Watson's 76th week with the Munz Co.

The Twins theatre, Gladstone, Mich., has reopened under the management of Henry Ross.

Billy Eckston, at one time with the Detroit branch of Paramount's exploitation department, has been appointed manager of the Broadway-Strand.

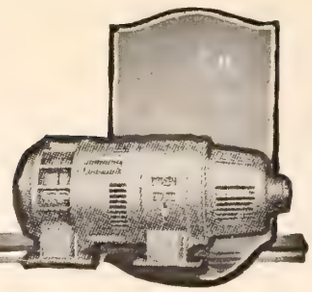
Joe Cosco has relinquished his holdings in the Stratford and Granada Theatres, the Stratford being booked now by Cooperative for the bank which had some holdings in the enterprise, while the Granada is being returned to its builders. At present, Joe is running the Harper and Jefferson.

Fred V. Greene, Jr., left the city last week following the close of a decidedly successful engagement with a roadshow film. Mr. Greene will return within the next few weeks when the [illegible]

Arthur Simons, manager of the Lyric and Ramsdell Theatres, both Butterfield houses located in Manistee, Mich., has resigned. He has not yet revealed his plans for the future.

The Kunsky Theatres Co., has [illegible] Kercheval avenue, Detroit, formerly operated by Joe Cosco. The house is closed at present but will be opened around Christmas with Publix supervision.

Standard Film Service is moving down to the second floor of the New Film Building, taking the space formerly occupied by P.D.C. In the new quarters, this organization will have nearly twice the floor room. No changes in the staff are to take place, according to the announcement. Bill Onie remains in charge of the office, with Herbert Ives as assistant while Bill Flemion is the city salesman.



Jack Berkowitz, proprietor of [illegible] and a Detroit visitor last week.

[illegible] in Michigan representing F B O throughout the state. Another newcomer to the F B O ranks, Frank Howard, who was recently southern manager for Pathe, has also signed to sell F B O features in the state.

The Computation of Spotlight Diameters

PART II

(Concluded from last week)

IN THIS issue we are giving two tables which show the size of "spot" or "flood" which can be obtained with various condensing lenses of various focal lengths at various distances from a point source of light for a projection distance of 100 feet.

Table I gives this information for lenses 3½-in., 4½-in., and 5-in. diameter, and Table II gives the same information for lenses of 6-in. and 8-in. diameter.

The figures in both tables were calculated by means of the formula given in last week's article, and relate, as said before, to a point of source of light. On small "spots," the size of the light source affects the size of the "spot" to a considerable extent so that it is necessary to consider it when making the calculations. But on large floods the size of the light source is not so important, and it can, therefore, be neglected.

The increase in the size of the "spot" due to use of a source which is not a point, can be figured from the formula given last week, and the value so obtained should be added to the figure obtained from the table in order to arrive at the correct answer.

How to Use Tables

The vertical column in each table specifies the diameter of the condensing lens being used, and the second column specifies the focal length for the various diameters. The next columns show what diameter, in inches, of "spot" or "flood" will be obtained when the light source is placed the specified distance from the principal plane of the condensing lens. The calculations will be sufficiently accurate if the principal plane is considered as passing through the intersection of the lens axis and the curve as representing the convex side of the lens.

As a practical example, let us suppose that it is designed to know the diameter of "spot" that will be obtained with a lens 6 in. in diameter, having a focal length of 14 in., when the light source is placed 10 in. away from the lens.

Referring to Table II, we first go to the section marked 6-in. diameter and in the next column select our 14-in. focal length. Tracing over horizontally from this figure we stop at the 10-in. column, and the figure found there, 193, shows that a "spot" 193 inches, or 16 feet in diameter, will be obtained under these conditions.

Horwitz Opens New Astor Theatre, Cleveland

The Astor theatre, Hough Ave., and East 84th St., a new 1,800-seat motion picture theatre built by M. B. Horwitz and associates of the Washington Circuit, opened its doors to the public on Thanksgiving Day.

In contrast to present methods, the Astor is very simple. The decorations are harmonious and restful—never gaudy or ornate. Buff, rose, and pastel shades of blue and green are combined with artistic results. Horwitz has secured a fine setting for his picture programs, but has preferred to put his investment in fine equipment, ventilating systems, extra large upholstered chairs and other material comforts for his patrons rather than in excessive decorations. The indirect lighting system which has been installed throughout the auditorium is so placed that the picture on the screen may be clearly seen although the house is quite well lighted. All of the 1800 seats are on one floor. Glass panels in the rear protect patrons from drafts and from the voices of those waiting in the foyer.

The Astor was built by Messrs. Morris and Weinberg, Cleveland, architects, who also built the Plaza for the Washington circuit, which opened last Christmas. The Astor will present a straight motion picture policy, with three changes a week, at 30c top admission price.

Bids Received For New Memphis Theatre

Bids for the construction of a $750,000 Orpheum Theatre, at Main Street and Beale Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., have been received by the Orpheum Circuit officials from Chicago and local promoters. The contract, calling for completion of the theatre by October 1, 1928, probably will be let immediately after comparison of bids.

Bayer Reopens Park at Leighton, Pa.

The Bayer Theatre Co., of Leighton, Pa., report the opening of their Park theatre which was severely damaged by fire about one year ago. The reopening ceremonies were attended by many associated with Philadelphia and New York film trade and others well known in Leighton and surrounding territory.

One of the added features, during this theatre's reconstruction, is an elevator lift of the new three manual instrument installed by the Page Organ Co. It is said to be the first console lift installed in any theatre between Philadelphia and Buffalo. The interior of the house has been worked out in a most attractive decorative scheme.

Kentucky Theatre Chain Rapidly Growing

The Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, Louisville, Ky., of which Fred Dolle is president, keeps adding to its chain of theatres. Only recently the company erected two new houses in suburban districts of Louisville—the Towers and the Oak. Work has just been started on a large new theatre in the highland section, which will be called the Uptown. It also is learned that the company has obtained a lease on the Aristo Theatre, one of the most popular suburban houses here. The company now controls fifteen theatres in Louisville.

New Italian Gardens for Claxton, Ga.

The New Italian Gardens, Claxton, Ga., one of the finest small town motion picture theatres in the state, recently opened. The house was built and is operated by S. G. Tos, who has been an exhibitor in Claxton for several years. His success with the Italian Gardens, his former theatre, induced him to establish the new house, which promises to achieve all that could be hoped for by its owner. The New Italian Gardens is a 500-seat theatre.

Confers on Plans for New Memphis Orpheum

O. C. Kaiser, of Kaiser-Ducett Company, Joliet, Ill., contractors for the new Orpheum Theatre, was in Memphis recently in conference with directors of the building company regarding preliminary details of construction.

Rod La Rocque, a licensed air pilot, will handle an airplane in several pursuit scenes in his current Pathe-De Mille vehicle, "Stand and Deliver." Lupe Valez is the feminine lead.

John Harron will be Laura La Plante's leading man in "Finders Keepers," on which cameras will soon begin to grind under the direction of Wesley Ruggles.

J. Farrell McDonald will have the role of the Irish father in "Abie's Irish Rose," which Victor Fleming, aided by Anne Nichols, will direct. Trixie Friganza has already finished her role in "Abie" and departed for a vaudeville tour.

"The Silver Slave," announced as a temporary title for a Warner Bros. film, will be retained.

George Bancroft is working on "Honky Tonk," a Paramount picture in which Neil Hamilton will have the juvenile lead.

Albert Conti, Barry Norton, E. H. Calvert and Voya George have been selected for roles in Paramount's "The Legion of the Condemned."

June Marlowe will have an important role in "The Foreign Legion," a forthcoming Universal picture which will co-star Norman Kerry and Lewis Stone under the direction of Edward Sloman. Mary Nolan, Crauford Kent and Walter Perry have also been cast.

Frank Strayer, director, and Grover Jones, scenarist, have returned to the Paramount Hollywood studio with the completed script of "The Big Game Hunt."

Charley Chase's new Hal Roach comedy for M-G-M has been titled "The Bird Man." Among those directed by James Parrott were Margaret Quimby, Hazel Howell, Frank Leigh and Tommy Dugan.

"Two Flaming Youths" is the title for the first co-starring comedy made by W. C. Fields and Chester Conklin for Paramount. Jack Conway is writing the titles.

Jack Padjans, Pathe's new Western star, has started work on "Crashing Through," his second vehicle following "Square Shootin'." The story is by Jack Steven, the screen play by Wyndham Gittens. Thomas Buckingham is directing at Atascaderp, California, with a cast made up of Sally Rand, Tom Santschi and William Eugene.

John T. Prince has been selected to play a featured role in "Ramona," the Inspiration Pictures-Edwin Carewe production for United Artists. Exterior scenes were recently taken in Southern Utah.

Arthur Ross has started production on "Free and Easy," Madge Bellamy's starring picture for Fox Films in which James Hall has the featured role. Joseph Cawthorn has a role also. Frederica Sagor did the story and Frances Agnew wrote the scenario.

Mack Sennett's bathing beauties have new roles and costumes in "Daddyboy," Ben Turpin's latest for Pathe. Four of Sennett's choice specimens of feminine pulchritude are made up as school girls.

Columbia Pictures has bought the motion picture rights to "The Hero," a story by Albert Payson Terhune, from M-G-M.

"Get Your Man" will be the title of the Clara Bow picture which Dorothy Arzner is directing. John Cassar is the latest player to join the cast.

Norma Shearer's next M-G-M vehicle will be an original story of a traveling saleswoman by A. P. Younger. Ralph Forbes will have the male lead. The production will soon go into work under Sam Wood's direction with Bert Roach and Tenen Holtz supporting.

Johnny Arthur is enjoying a fishing trip on the Pacific. The Tuxedo star has just completed four new comedies for Educational. He has also finished his San Francisco engagement in the play, "I Love You."

Matthew Betz will appear in Lon Chaney's "The Big City," which Tod Browning will shortly begin directing for M-G-M.

"The Streets of Shanghai," one of the Tiffany productions for the coming season, will be placed into production in the near future under the direction of Louis J. Gasnier. No cast has been selected.

Stephen Roberts has just finished an Al St. John two-reeler, that comedian's first Mermaid comedy for Educational on the new schedule. The director plans to take a short vacation hunting deer in Oregon, Washington and Northern California.

When Joan Crawford finishes her role in "West Point," she will start at once working in "The Texas Ranger," M-G-M's newest vehicle for Tim McCoy, for which Richard Schayer has just finished the adaptation.

Two Hollywood beauties, Derlys Perdue and Frances Hamilton, and two gag men, Leslie Goodwin and Sam White, have been added to the production forces now working at the Stern Brothers' studio in Hollywood. Miss Perdue will appear in "Gold Bawls" and Miss Hamilton in "Horse Play," two new Stern comedies for Universal.

M-G-M's next comedy vehicle for Karl Dane and George K. Arthur will be a story of circus life, soon to go into production under the direction of Edward Sedgwick.

Estelle Bradley is Lupino Lane's leading lady in "Some Scout," the English pantomimist's November release. It is an Educational comedy.

The Eastern studio in the Bronx was last week re-opened under the management of Eugene Spitz. The Eastern studio, which has undergone several alterations and had an extra stage added, will be open to independent producers desirous of working in the East on a contract or a rental basis.

Paulette Duval will play a featured role in "The Divine Woman," Greta Garbo's new starring effort for M-G-M.

Tenon Holtz, character actor on the M-G-M lot, has signed a new exclusive contract with the organization.

Marjorie Moore has been chosen by Lloyd Hamilton as his leading lady in his next comedy for Educational. Miss Moore played her first featured part in a new Lupino Lane comedy.

"A Ride in the Country," George Kibbe Turner's story, is to be screened by Pathe under the title of "Walking Back." Vera Reynolds will star under the direction of William K. Howard. Douglas Doty has done the adaptation. The story originally appeared in Liberty Magazine.

During the filming of his latest Educational comedy, "Papa's Boy," Lloyd Hamilton and his unit went crocodile hunting on the Los Angeles River. Ordinarily the Los Angeles is just a dry and shallow bed, but on account of heavy rainfall water found its way into the bed of the river and it was there that the crocodile being used in the comedy made his escape.

Frances Marion, scenarist, has entered into a new contract with M-G-M. She is now engaged in writing an original screen play suggested by "The Cossacks," the Tolstoi novel.

Billie Bennett and Martha Franklin will play roles in "Get Your Man" for Paramount.

Ethel Wales, Frances Raymond and Phillips Smalley have been added to the cast of "Stage Kisses," which Albert Kelley is directing for Columbia.

Ralph Ince, accompanied by his wife, Lucila Mendez, George Arthur, Thomas Atkins and Enid Hibbard, have gone to Lake Arrowhead for a combined business and pleasure trip before starting photography on "Chicago After Midnight," his next F B O production.

Clarissa Selwyn, Jules Raucourt and Michael Vivitch have joined the cast of "Glorious Betsy," now in work at the Warner studio.

Ralph Block, a former newspaper man of wide experience, who recently joined thte De Mille forces, has been appointed supervisor of production over "Gallagher," in order to insure real newspaper atmosphere in the screen version of the Davis story.

"Two Weeks Off," the play by Kenyon Nicholson and Thomas Barrows, will be filmed by First National with Dorothy Mackaill in one of its leading roles. No production date has been set.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Jazz Singer"—Fox Locust theatre, Philadelphia

Record: "Certainly a forerunner, a pioneer in brand-new type of entertainment. Intensely interesting picture. Remarkably moving."

Public Ledger: "Some realistic bits of acting. Jolson's uncanny personality reached into audience well-nigh as effectively as it does when he personally appears behind footlights."

Gazette: "Has seldom been my good fortune to be so agreeably entertained in picture theatre. Story ideally suited to medium of Vitaphone interpretation. Jolson plays with sympathy and insight."

Inquirer: "Has significance and worth all its own. Ideally suited to Mr. Jolson."

Daily News: "Many were unable to get seats so great were crowds. Jolson the magnet that draws them to the box-office, and Jolson fans, of which there are legion, will not go away disappointed."

Evening Ledger: "Made to wring heart and because it is so basically real it reaches emotions. Above all it brings throbbing, full-powered voice of Jolson, voice that really does carry a tear in its laughter. Has a powerful climax."

Bulletin: "Jolson's final 'Mammy' song has audience weeping shamelessly."

"The Drop Kick"—First National, Circle Theatre, Indianapolis

News: "Interesting and exceptionally entertaining production. Barthelmess gives performance that is as finished as anything he has done in a long time. The story has been developed in an effective manner. Barthelmess extraordinarily convincing."

Times: "A lot of 'it' (modern expression for sex appeal) is to be found in 'The Drop Kick.' Not mush and atmosphere that we usually find in such stories. Barthelmess gives pleasing performance. Cast is satisfactory and photography splendid. Football game well handled."

Star: "Full of college pep, and cheers were not missing when Barthelmess redeems himself by dropkicking for winning score. Well supported by Barbara Kent and Dorothy Revier."

"Good Time Charley"—Warner Bros., Roxy Theatre, New York City

American: "If you like melodrama, you're in for a dramatic treat. Will intrigue that part of audience which likes hokum, if it is good—and this is. Oland, a sterling actor, gives sincere and convincing portrayal and Clyde Cook is better than we have ever seen him. Helene Costello charming."

Telegraph: "Bigger and better picture. Direction and acting splendid. Oland gives wonderful performance. Helene Costello charming."

Morning World: Picturesque and genuinely touching screen play. Result of deft and imaginative direction on part of Curtiz and sympathetic acting by Oland and Cook."

Times: "Well acted. Oland gives splendid interpretation. Curtiz has introduced some interesting photographic ideas."

Evening World: "Some of best action seen in many a moon. Picture has more than enough of exceptionally good material to elevate it to real heights."

"The Poor Nut"—First National, Washington Street Olympia Theatre, Boston

Herald: "Clean, funny comedy of college life with much more entertainment than is usual in films of this kind. Excellent vehicle for talents of Mulhall and Murray."

Advertiser: "They do spectacular things much better on screen than they ever can on stage as 'The Poor Nut' shows. Picture more entertaining than play. A fine college flavor to outdoor scenes. Mulhall's role funny enough to make film still more hilarious."

Traveler: "Hilarious entertainment. A viewing will reward you with plenty of good laughs. Murray supplies several innings of comedy."

Transcript: "Generally entertaining. Film naturally has all advantage over the stage. Jack Mulhall . . . does not overstress the absurdities of his role and he is all funnier for that reason. Generally entertaining."

Globe: "Hilarious college comedy."

"Hard Boiled Haggerty"—First National, Grand Opera Pittsburgh

Press: "World War from the romance side provides enjoyable color and flavor. An exceptionally powerful characterization is provided for the rugged star."

"The Drop Kick"—First National, Wisconsin Theatre, Milwaukee

Sentinel: "Whale of a good football picture. Easily the most absorbing college film to reach the screen in some time. Lavish settings, exquisite love story and a cast of unusual talent."

Wisconsin News: "Lively background of college life, thrill of football game climax and pleasing youthful personality of Barthelmess, sustain interest and suspense."

"Hard Boiled Haggerty"—First National, Boulevard Theatre, Los Angeles

Daily News: "If you are in need of bracing entertainment go to see it. It is easy to say that such and such a picture is the best thing that a particular star has had since his acknowledged triumph, but in this case case we mean it—'Hard Boiled Haggarty' is Sills' best effort since 'The Sea Hawk' . . . The stunt flying is worth the price of admission. Parisian atmosphere is well sustained and there are few lax moments."

Examiner: "A famous producer once said that the war gave motion pictures a great deal of material. . . . Some war spectacles have proven this to the nth degree. Picture deals with aviation angle of the war. Sills is seen in an exceptionally strong characterization."

"The Drop Kick"—First National,Loew's State Theatre, New Orleans

Times Picayune: "Romantic college story that fits the star to the letter. Good suspense, sparkling romance and thrills of gridiron. Strikes a happy average of well sustained interest and has sort of situations that Barthelmess' admirers will enjoy.

"No Place to Go"—First National, Rialto Theatre, Omaha

World-Herald: "Here is as pleasant an hour's entertainment as we can recommend, all because of spontaneous acting of the lovely leading lady and handsome leading man. Offering with all airiness of youth."

Bee-News: "Really good entertainment. Mary Astor delightful."

"Three's a Crowd"—First National, Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia

Record: "The whimsical Harry carries you off into gales of laughter—and yet you almost wish he wouldn't be so pathetic. Langdon irrepressible. Expressive eyes do double duty and not one of his subtle motions was lost on the audience."

Inquirer: "Harry Langdon a comedian with a droll personality."

Evening Ledger: "Verily a classic, being different from Langdon's past performances. Harry delights you. Moves only about twice in each two hundred feet of film, but those few moves, in the Langdon way, express a world of comedy and pathos alike."

"The Gorilla"—First National, Pantheon Theatre, Toledo, Ohio

Blade: "There are mystery thrillers and there are uproarious comedies—and once in a while we are treated to cinema entertainment that is an expert and effective combination of the two. Such is 'The Gorilla.' Movie boasts numerous new thrills and laughs galore. Enhancing play's attractiveness is a different solution of mystery so that if you saw original on stage you are held in suspense to end of the picture. It is the almost continuous presence in the foreground of Messrs. Murray and Kelsey which makes film a regular wow."

News-Bee: "Thrilling comedy beverage with an abundant amount of thrilling mystery that had Sunday's audience emitting shrieks of blood-curdling intensity relieved by gales of laughter. Excellent photography. While mystery element is paramount, comedy situations are hardly less effective. Will prove a hit with any audience."

Times: "Screen version of 'The Gorilla' is in many ways more thrilling than stage presentation, and plot has been widened. Shrieks of horror momentarily turn to fits of laughter so fast does theme change."

"Douglas Fairbanks as The Gaucho"—United Artists, Liberty Theatre, New York City

American: "Came to pay homage to one of most popular of Hollywood's sons and those who came to see remained to praise. A colorful story which has been cut and nicely tailored to fit Fairbanks. A daredevil theme and a Robin Hood motif. Doug scores again. Terrific suspense. Several new gags and phenomenal jumping feats which will thrill audience. Sets truly extraordinary, and photography excellent. If you're Fairbanks fan, you won't miss "The Gaucho" and if you are not, when you see it you'll be converted."

Graphic: "Smooth direction, amazing spectacles, thrilling moments. Surpasses in its directorial ambitions most of its popular predecessors. In lithe grace of movement, in sincerity of effort, in his charm and his ability as an actor, time has taken none of the edge off Fairbank's personality. Great in this picture. 'The Gaucho' was great idea, carried out in masterly way. Scenes of impressive grandeur in the city that grew up on a Hollywood set and, even in its most serious moments, delightful light comedy burst unexpectedly on screen. Recommended picture as film worth seeing."

the 287th Christmas for Kilgen

—fittingly celebrated by

"The Voice of the Silent Drama"

IN THE better picture houses throughout the land, theatregoers will listen to Kilgen Pipe Organs this Christmas Day. Two hundred and eighty-seven Christmases ago, music lovers likewise were delighted by voices of this matchless instrument.

Great indeed has been the progress in instrumental music since Sebastian Kilgen built his first organ in 1640 A. D., but Kilgen craftsmanship has kept pace with it.

Nothing can be more convincing proof of this fact than the preference of outstanding exhibitors for "The Voice of the Silent Drama"—which is but another name for The Kilgen Wonder Organ.

If you are not acquainted with the age-old Kilgen Company and the incomparable instrument it builds, let us send you a copy of our interesting booklet on theatre organ music. Either write for it direct or procure your copy from the nearest NATIONAL THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY office—GEO. KILGEN & SON, INC., 4024 N. Union Blvd., St. Louis, Mo., U. S.

Highlights of 1927

Year Featured By Two Big Developments

By William A. Johnston

THE year is about to pass into history, and if one were looking for a single word with which to describe it, filmwise, he might write "turbulent."

In that respect, 1927 lines up with other years in the film business. We don't, in fact, recall any year that has not been marked by turbulence of one sort or another.

Which means, of course, that we are a long way from being a stabilized industry.

It would, of course, be very pleasant to sit down and write glowing prophecies, handing out praise on every hand and giving the industry as a whole a big pat on the back.

But it is decidedly more useful—and constructive—to examine things as they are; also more honest. Progress has been made—notable progress—in several directions. Solid, industrial progress, despite a good many false moves, some of which had to be taken back later.

The two outstanding events in 1927, as we see them, are, first, the fact that the theatres took definite command of the situation. And, second, the reshaping of entertainment.

When we say that the theatres took command we mean that production and distribution which had, for a number of years, controlled, were shoved into second place by the expansion and tremendous activity of the theatre field.

The big merger of the year was brought about by the theatre interests involved, carrying along with them their production-distribution allies.

Control of another big production-distribution concern was taken over jointly by two theatre chains.

If more mergers are to come, their points of origin will be, we believe, from the theatre end of the business. As a matter of fact, there is little to merge in production. It's merely a reshuffling of talent; dealing in intangible values which may be fine this year and not so good later on.

The public makes its idols of the screen and unmakes them. No merger can change that fact.

In the all-important theatre field, too, there has been, and still is, a scramble for theatres, but it is diminishing to a degree. The first wave of hysteria has passed. A lot of people are finding out that building a theatre circuit does not mean the mere acquisition of numbers. Some of the big circuits, right now, are trying to turn back—or are actually turning back—certain types of theatres to their former owners.

The theatre field is not necessarily a gold mine. Individual operation of houses counts just as much as it did—perhaps more. There are many other factors that have to be reckoned with.

But the theatre field is still filled with great opportunities, the biggest, we believe, being in the natural trading centers, whatever their population.

It seems likely that, in the coming year, there will be more attention paid to theatres as places of entertainment, rather than as political pawns on the circuit chessboards.

And mark this down: the theatres will have the final say in the tangled and troublesome production problem. If they don't solve it, who will? When this happens, the industry will be on a much healthier basis, because the theatres, properly organized in their buying-power, will tell the producers how many pictures are actually needed and what kind.

The fundamental fault now is that the producer arbitrarily decides how many and what kind. The forcing process starts in Hollywood. Pictures are forced into production, then forced into distribution, and then forced into exhibition.

If the theatres get the upper hand completely, we look for this uneconomic and wasteful process to stop. And with it will stop some high-priced and unproductive and incompetent production executives.

The second big development of the year is in the reshaping of entertainment. There is no getting away from the fact that vaudeville has been enthroned in a number of picture theatres—the big ones where the "nut" and the elaborateness of the house are held to call for an elaborate show in order to command an admission price sufficient to guarantee a profit.

The profit, by the way, is not always forthcoming. The public is being overfed with entertainment, in a great many instances. The character of the show has been changed in the de luxe houses. Many of them, so far as emphasis goes, are not picture theatres. Calling vaudeville acts "presentations" does not make them any the less vaudeville.

What the big house does, travels down the line to the lesser houses, and finally to the least. They all feel it.

We say this is a serious problem. The "presentation" policy may be justified in certain instances. We don't say it isn't. But overfeeding has not a leg to stand on, from any viewpoint. If it is carried too far, it will seriously jeopardize this whole industry.

These are not the happiest thoughts, especially at this season, but they are vital.

On the positive side, we believe the reshaping of entertainment by the "sound" pictures and devices is a development second to none in importance. In fact, we place it first. It is really just beginning, but it is great in its possibilities. Sound effects in photoplays; the audible news reel; musical accompaniment to the picture, whether the music is on the film or furnished by an easily operated device—these hold big promise for the future.

They attract us mightily, because they are a strengthening of the motion picture itself. The film is the thing. Unless we are willing to admit that the public is tiring of pictures, how can anything else be true?

We leave you with that thought: the picture is the thing. A fine slogan, by the way, to paste in the hat—for 1928.

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

IT seems, according to the supreme court of the box-office, that our editorial estimate of "Love," recently printed on this page, was not high enough. After looking at the picture, we doubted whether it would be a great success with the public. The drawing-power of the Gilbert-Garbo team was plainly evident, but the picture itself seemed to us not so good, viewed as a whole.

But the box-office at the Embassy Theatre, New York, says otherwise, and we cheerfully record the fact—at the instigation, by the way, of nobody but ourselves.

The picture is a great hit. One reason we know that, is because, for the first time in the history of the Embassy, the ticket agencies are handling seats; and the agencies don't do that for any film attraction short of the box-office best.

It's a sell-out. A real success. The public says so, and the public decides. Like a good many other "naturals," this picture came in with little heralding, and no blare of trumpets. It's "there," and we are happy to see that it is.

ONE of our Coast scouts advises us to be on the lookout for two pictures, which, he says, are going to make screen history. One is "Four Sons," a Fox production, and the other is "The Trail of '98," nearing completion by M-G-M.

We have no first-hand knowledge, but what our scout tells us is very interesting. According to this information, both are likely to be big, without any question.

It is well-known, of course, that the Fox forces are pushing vigorously ahead with production, and they are enthusiastic over the merits of several pictures, "Four Sons," previously titled "Grandma Bernle Learns Her Letters," being figured as one of the biggest.

We hear equally interesting things about "The Trail of '98," and it would not surprise us if it, too, lived up in every respect to our scout's forecast.

STILL further on the subject of advance information on pictures: Elmer Pearson returns from a trip to the Coast, and calls attention to a group of Pathe films which he believes will be well worth watching.

The first is "Chicago," which follows "The King of Kings" into the Gaiety Theatre, New York, this week, and of which we print a preview estimate by Edwin Schallert in this issue. Others mentioned by Mr. Pearson are: "The Night Flyer," "Stand and Deliver"; "Let 'Er Go, Gallegher"; "The Red Mark,' "Skyscraper," "The Blue Danube" and "The Bride of the Colorado," the Pathe-Bray picture being made in the Grand Canyon.

Mr. Pearson is also enthusiastic over the selection of new pictures for next year's program about which he conferred with studio officials.

IT is always well to bear in mind that the motion picture has by no means reached its final state of perfection, in any direction. There is plenty of room for advancement—in the technique of presentation, for example.

What we mean is very clearly borne out by the new technical device of the triple screen, used in France by Abel Gance, in his screening of "Napoléon." The description of this invention was given at length in a special dispatch to the New York Evening World, the other day. We quote from it:

"The triple screen is an extremely simple invention. It is surprising that it has not been introduced before. It is perhaps a case of necessity creating the organism. And it was actually through necessity that M. Gance was led to search in that direction. In the past he has often complained over the dimensions of the ordinary screen. When he was called upon to produce a mob scene he was compelled to reduce the scale to such an extent that individual players became scarcely visible. Hence the idea to double and triple the screen when the need arose, as in 'Napoleon.'

"The effect is formidable and absolutely new. A whole battle can practically be seen at a glance in this manner. In the burning of the French fleet in Toulon harbor, flaming ships stretch from the one side of three screens to the other, a width of sixty feet. It gives an impression of the magnitude of Napoleon's forces when the armies of Italy sweep by in magnificent review over the parade ground.

"The scale of the close-up is maintained in mob scenes, as, for example, in the case of Waterloo. There is ampleness in the ensemble and no detail is lost. The Emperor and his staff can be seen distinctly at the same time that officers are organizing the last mad cavalry charge of the Corsican's career. Suddenly, they are off with sabres high in the air, saluting the sombre figure on the white horse as they thunder past into the jaws of hell. The eye follows them through the maze of battle until they break to pieces against the steel of the squares of British redcoats.

"The triple screen opens a field to a thousand possibilities. The famous Russian directors Eisenstein and Alexander Ivanoffsky are in Paris to witness the first public production. As the Soviet films so far have specialized in scenes where a great number of people were shown at the same time these men were the more interested. They also had felt the need of an enlargement of the projection area.

"The screening with a triple projection area does not compare in difficulty with the filming. A thousand new obstacles come in the way hitherto unknown in the industry. The lamps for the three photographing machines must be of the same strength and the perspective and distances must be equalized to a degree of utmost precision.

"The objection that the triple screen will be practicable only in scenes of extended operation does not hold water. It might and will also serve for the drama and the psychological film where no development of mob action is required. One will be able to follow the interior drama, the subconscious actions of the hero simultaneously with his exterior actions and not successively as is the practice now in showing such films. The film of the future will be more in the nature of a piece of music, with the theme in the centre and on both sides a development of the harmonies and the accompaniment. It will be a sort of visible symphony, so to speak."

THOSE "in the know" are prophesying that Universal will get some very fine exploitation value from the Ziegfeld stage production of "Show Boat," which has registered out of town and comes to New York on December 27. All reports are that Ziegfeld has another winner, and these substantiated by the fact that he is moving the highly successful "Rio Rita" to the Lyric and replacing it at the Ziegfeld Theatre with "Show Boat."

The picture rights to the book are, of course, held by Universal, and preparations are under way by Harry Pollard for its filming on the Coast. A long run for the stage version—of which there seems every likelihood—will be fine advance publicity for the picture when it comes along.

QUOTING with approval William A. Johnston's new definition of a showman as "a man who gives the public a little and makes them like it a lot," the Motion Picture Times, Texas regional publication, adds:

"Patronage has been geared up to whirlwind-motor speed, but the straight-type motor is just as good. Non-stop flights in picture presentation are going into a tailspin. Simplicity is the spice of life.

"Stand back of your house and judge 'by ear' which item of your program gives the patrons the keenest enjoyment—the most entertainment for their money. Did you ever notice that short reels give them a bigger kick than a stage presentation?

"A good showman should be judged not by how much, but rather how little he spends in pleasing his public. The theatre's net and not its gross will be the barometer of business."

ACCORDING to the Michigan Film Review, more theatres than ever in that territory will eliminate elaborate vaudeville bills and confine their programs to straight pictures and stage bands.

This conclusion is reached by the editor of the regional after interviews with many exhibitors. He writes:

"Exhibitors are waking up to the fact that pictures are the foundation of their entertainment and about the only thing necessary at all in the way of added attractions is a stage jazz band."

SPEAKING of theatre net vs. theatre gross, an interesting situation has come to our attention recently. On one of the most prominent downtown streets in an important key city, the de luxe house has recently had its net cut several thousand dollars a week because another part of the property is not paying and the theatre has to carry the load.

On the same street are two other theatres, neither of them as large nor as elaborate as the first. One, in fact, is quite old, while the other is just a good theatre. Yet each of these houses, with far less seating capacity than the de luxe theatre, is turning in a weekly net almost equal to that of the big house.

MAYBE this could be called "live wire" exploitation. Anyhow, the yokelry of Sixth Avenue rallied to the call of a ballyhoo worker in the front lobby of the New York Hippodrome this week, where one of the features is an electric chair act. The barker gave a description of the electric chair on display in the lobby. His "lectures" drew small crowds of interested by-passers, the bulk of whom were observed to stop, look and listen and then saunter along, with the box office no richer for their particular interest in the matter. Whether it is "live wire" exploitation or not, there is no escaping the notion that when vaudeville comes to that sort of thing the bookers are certainly on the run for attractions—a situation that is not so encouraging for the picture men who are hitching their wagons to the vaudeville star.

THE German import situation, according to news from Heinrich Fraenkel, our Berlin correspondent, is being dealt with by the American Embassy. A few days after the drastic new regulations had been issued, the German Distributors Association held a meeting to discuss the situation. Members were rather unanimous in their approval of the government's decision, many of them arguing that a reserve of 90 permits was quite unnecessary, and that the 170 permits originally stipulated in the regulations, would amply cover the market's demands for foreign pictures.

A few days later, the executives of all American film companies distributing in Germany followed a suggestion by the Embassy to discuss matters in a confidential meeting presided over by the Commercial Attache of the American Embassy in Berlin.

Our correspondent also reports that Dr. Rudolph Becker has resigned his position as foreign manager of UFA. He will be succeeded by Herr von Theobald, who entered the foreign department some months ago. Dr. Becker was in New York a few months ago, along with the UFA chief, Herr Klitzsch. It is reported that Dr. Becker will start a business of his own.

Constant rumors have been circulating in the European trade, of late, that UFA is about to "swallow" Phoebus and Emelka, the next biggest German film concerns. Our Berlin Correspondent reports that these rumours originated from the fact that a group holding some 30 per cent of the Emelka shares has been negotiating for a sale of these shares to some of UFA's financial backers. Even if this deal should come off, the two companies say they have nothing to do with it and will not be affected. As far as Phoebus is concerned UFA seems indeed to be dickering for that company's circuit of some thirty good theatres all over Germany, including three of the best first run houses in Berlin. Nothing definite seems to have been decided yet.

LOUIS NALPAS, Director-General of Cineromans of Paris, has added another string to his bow. He has sold "Casanova" to a prominent American producing-distributing company and returns shortly to France, very happy over the result of his recent visit here.

This will make three pictures supervised by M. Nalpas which have found a market in this country and a successful one. "Les Miserables" will be mentioned this year in some of the lists of the year's best pictures. "Michael Strogoff" was also favorably received in this country and Great Britain.

Good pictures, as we have remarked before, make the one factor that will bring about reciprocal film relations of a stable and satisfactory kind between Europe and America.

THE "best pictures of the year" lists are beginning to make their appearance, the first, we believe, being from Chester Bahn, dramatic editor of The Syracuse Herald. In a compilation conducted by Mr. Bahn, "What Price Glory" and "Seventh Heaven" were agreed upon, both by critics and fans, as the best pictures of the year.

Mr. Bahn announced the result with this comment: "'What Price Glory' received the ballots of approximately 90 per cent of the fans participating in the contest. A second William Fox Picture, 'Seventh Heaven' drew the second highest fan ballot, being favored by 76 per cent of the fan voters. It is significant, too, that these pictures topped The Herald Cinema Critics Club poll, although in reverse order."

JOHN BARRYMORE is reported establishing a record so far as directors are concerned. Frank Lloyd was engaged to direct "Tempest," but quit before the story was put into production. Slav Tourjansky took up the directorial megaphone, assisted by Directors Milestone and Sam Taylor. It is reported that Tourjansky is out, and it is said D. W. Griffith may now finish the picture.

"Chicago"

Reviewed by Edwin Schallert

Editor of the Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

LOS ANGELES, December 16.—A decided novelty among motion pictures of the present season is "Chicago." Frank Urson is credited with the direction of this production, but there are unmistakable C. B. DeMille touches in its unfoldment. It is a fairly clever treatment of a stage play that achieved sensational success. Much of the original flavor of satire has been kept, in fact the best part of it. To this has been added a sympathetic but slightly hokumish sentimental interest. On the whole "Chicago" will attract attention, and if skillfully exploited probably achieve a very marked success, especially in the larger cities.

The picture offers Phyllis Haver her best opportunity. She plays Roxy Hart, the murderess, too beautiful to be condemned. The climaxing action centers in her trial, and the burlesque of court proceedings, or at least of the behavior of all-too-beautiful criminals, is certain of a great comedy effect.

The picture opens with a boudoir scene, depicting the home life of the Harts. Victor Varconi, who plays the husband, is portrayed as a kind and indulgent spouse.

Comes on the scene the other man, easy going and conscienceless. He tells Roxy that he is through with her, and she shoots him.

She is rather appalled at the deed, as is her husband, but when the hard-boiled sensational newspaper reporter arrives, and various other people more accustomed to murders, she is intrigued with the idea that she may become something of a public figure. She glories in having her photograph taken, and of obtaining publicity prominence, pictures of herself in print. Her husband goes to the utmost lengths to save her, even stealing from a rather unscrupulous lawyer, whom he afterward hires.

The lawyer gets Roxy to stage a dramatic scene in the court room. She is garbed in the fluffy sartorial raiment of innocence. The jury is amply susceptible to her charms.

She is granted her freedom, but her joy in this is short-lived. There is another gunwoman at hand. She is duly arrested, and it is her turn for the publicity and the photographs. Then Roxy returns home with her husband, but he is disgusted with her for the shallow creature that she is because her only desire is for money and turns her out.

It would be difficult to imagine a picture like "Chicago" being made several years ago, and it would be hard to think of it as a success then, but with the more sophisticated public of today its chances are perhaps much more favorable. Even the more censorable points in the story are pretty well glossed over. Outside of Miss Haver and Mr. Varconi, the principal players are Robert Edeson, as the attorney, Eugene Pallette, as the man who is killed, and Virginia Bradford, whom one is privileged to regard as the husband's compensating romantic interest. Lenore Coffee did the adaptation.

Navy Expanding Motion Picture Service

Continued expansion of the motion picture service provided by the Navy for its various vessels is reported by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur in his annual review of naval activities, just made public.

The service has been extended to Army transports and vessels of the Coast Guard, the report shows, and, in addition to this extension of service, 25 additional units of the fleet have been added to the list of subscribers. This extension of service has resulted in a net increase of receipts of approximately $11,000, while at the same time the operating expenses of the service last year were approximately $12,500 under those of 1926. Programs are purchased at the rate of 25 per month, and, in addition to the regular purchases, quadruplicate prints of 20 programs were purchased during the fiscal year.

Many of the old projectors originally installed have been replaced by new ones of standard design, approved by the bureau of engineering, resulting in reduced expenses by eliminating much damage to film.

New contracts entered into with producers on July 1, 1927, provide for a four years' lease instead of a three years' lease as has been the case in the past. This, it is stated, will permit an accumulation of a larger library of films, more extended service to forces on detached duty and distant stations ashore, and a general improvement in the quantity and quality of pictures for all stations throughout the year.

Sunday Shows Given at Paducah, Kentucky

Paducah's first Sunday movie audiences and a protest meeting at the Broadway Methodist Episcopal church assembled simultaneously last Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The two theatres that made the experiment reported full houses day and night. Together, they accommodated 2,200 persons, and many of the amusement seekers came from adjoining counties and from Illinois.

Two hours after the show began, Leo F. Keiler, manager of the Columbia Amusement Company, was served with a warrant charging him with violation of the Kentucky Sabbath laws. City Judge Andrew M. Nichols released him under $500 bond. The warrant named 13 persons as employed by Mr. Keiler. The chief of police said he would swear out a warrant for each offense and that he could do nothing further. "If the crowds come the shows will stay open," said Mr. Keiler.

First National Buys Two Plays and Two Novels

Harry Conner's play, "Applesauce," "The Yellow Lily" ("Sarga Likion"), by the Hungarian playwright, Lajos Biro, are two legitimate stage plays acquired by First National as a new story material for forthcoming screen production. Two novels, the rights of which have also been purchased by First National, are: "The Divine Lady," by E. Harrington, published by Dodd, Mead & Co., and "The Girl in the Glass Cage," by George Kibbe Turner, recently brought out in book form by Robert McBride & Co.

Middle-West Theatre Map Shows Decided Changes

Houses in Big Towns Are Being "Spotted" to Geographic Conditions and Ultimate District Growths

By J. S. Dickerson
Associate Editor, Motion Picture News

OF all the various noteworthy developments that the observer finds in the Middle West, new theatres is undoubtedly of first importance.

Not only are there a surprising number of new houses going up, but in every instance the beauty, or, as some might term it, extravagance, of these theatres, in proportion to the size of the city of course, changes the entire theatre map.

In Chicago, the amount of building in the field has been so great that the number of new houses has been forgotten. The individual house of seating capacity and magnificence, that two years ago would have been the talk of the trade, now go up and open without causing the slightest ripple even in local circles, except in the immediate neighborhood.

Generally speaking, the latter-date building has been undertaken after elaborate surveys were completed, as to location and type of construction. It is no longer sufficient to find a plot suitable for a building. The circuit people have taken a lesson from the chain store operators, and are making their plans along as scientific lines as is possible. Theatres in the big towns are being "spotted" according to geography of a particular city, and in the larger centers due attention is paid to districts where resident growth is prolific, and where it is expected that the population will still increase.

In Chicago there are several theatres erected and others going up in sections that at the present time do not warrant the investment. But the builders are anticipating future needs and are willing to go ahead on the basis of later returns.

Milwaukee is another city where the big type residential house is keping ahead of population increase. The Saxe interests have four residential de luxe theatres in operation, another under construction and another planned with which it is proposed to "spot" the city completely. An elaborate exploitation campaign of institutional copy has been prepared and is now being judiciously fed to the public. The keynote of this advertising is boiled down into a slogan, which is "There is a Saxe de luxe theatre within walking distance of every resident of Milwaukee," and there seems to be no question but that this advertising is of the utmost value in establishing the new theatres and in a way preparing an audience for each individual theatre as it is opened.

The Scientific Era

Careful study of the zoning system used in spotting the new houses will convince any person who knows something of exhibition that finally the theatre part of the industry, is getting away from the "take a chance" era and is on the road to as scientific distribution as is the chain store. The deposed "figures" are coming into their own.

But with the scientific era, also comes a lessening of opportunity as, one by one, really good locations for theatres are gobbled up. In Milwaukee after the Saxe building campaign is completed, the city is going to be nicely sewed up so far as the neighborhood sections are concerned.

There are competent judges who predict lean profits for every theatre in this territory; and perhaps they are right; especially for the period in which the older and smaller houses will be cutting in on gross business. But apparently these de luxe neighborhood theatre builders are satisfied with the prospects and with the statistics that they have gathered ought to be better informed than the casual observer.

Fort Wayne is another city where there is a theatre upheaval. When W. C. Quimby's new two million-dollar 3,000-seat house is completed, a lot of things are going to happen in the Fort Wayne area, not only in the city itself but also for fifty miles around.

Mr. Quimby also has been studying his "geography." He knows the number of thousands of people that are within driving distance of Fort Wayne and he is figuring on the outlying territory quite as much as the city. Otherwise, there is no call for a 3,000-seat house in a city of 100,000 population.

Another thing that Mr. Quimby has done at no small expense is to provide adequate parking space.

And this new theatre—Fort Wayne is not New York or Chicago where two million-dollar buildings go up over night. A man must have faith in his city.

Out in Omaha, two new beautiful theatres have changed the theatre map in the last year. The Orpheum, the Orpheum Circuit vaudeville house advantageously located downtown has made the Omaha theatrical world gasp with its weekly business.

Investment Justified

The Riviera, the new A. H. Blank theatre, also contradicted the opinions of the wiseacres. Located a good half-mile from the old theatrical section, although on the principal street, the Riviera, on a presentation-with-pictures policy, is justifying the de luxe theatre idea with regular weekly grosses considered possible hitherto only in the half a dozen larger centers.

An Eberson atmospheric house, the Riviera, ranks with the best in beauty and magnificence. It has all the modern rest rooms, nurseries, smoking parlors, etc., that have delighted theatre-going audiences in other big cities. And the result has justified the expense.

Omaha, up to the present time, has not developed the de luxe neighborhood house to any great extent and with the Orpheum and Riviera setting a pace downtown, it is probable that there will be some hesitation before any one tries the neighborhood idea in this city.

A most unusual situation has developed in St. Joseph, Mo., within the last year. A new theatre in this city has failed in one way to perform the usual miracles. A very beautiful house for the size of the city, this new theatre has only succeeded in putting all other downtown straight-picture houses in the red, with no particular profit to itself.

But like all other exceptions there is a reason for this situation. St. Joseph, a city of some 75,000 population, has about twenty theatres, most of them small neighborhood houses operated at small expense and with small admission prices. The people of the city have not as yet been educated to a "picture show" that charges a fifty or seventy-five cent top and, while individually these neighborhood houses may not be competition for the two or three good downtown theatres, collectively, they do enough to make the picking extremely slim.

A year from now, conditions may be different but at this writing one house in town, playing vaudeville, is really on a satisfactory basis and the balance are fighting along on meagre profits if at all. Probably half the theatres in the city are in the red, not an occasional week, but all the time. Everybody is holding on, hoping the other fellow will quit, and so far only one house has given up the ghost.

Nine New Theatres Will Open Xmas Week in Chicago

THE citizens of Chicago and nearby towns are to receive a record breaking Christmas gift from Santa Claus, in the form of nine new theatres which will open their doors to the public on Christmas Day or during the week following. All are well equipped, beautifully decorated and of pleasing architecture, and together form an important addition to this vicinity's amusement palaces.

They include the Genesee at Waukegan; the Roosevelt at Kenosha; the Maywood at Hammond; United Artists Theatre, Chicago; the Main Theatre, Evanston; the Shore Theatre on Chicago's south side, all of which are scheduled for opening on Christmas Day. The Gateway Theatre at Kenosha will give its premier on New Years; the Villard at Villa Park on December 29th and the Bee, Aurora, will reopen on December 30th.

Two other houses, while outside the immediate Chicago district, have scheduled their openings for Christmas Day. They are the big, new Egyptian at Milwaukee and the Walker at Indianapolis.

Rumor Has Franklin to Direct Wesco Chain

Report Says He Will Function from N. Y. Headquarters When All Mergers Are Completed

THE name of Harold B. Franklin figures prominently in the rumors current this week with regard to merging of theatre interests and the gigantic pool which would bring numerous chains under the Wesco banner. The latest report is that when the Wesco pool is completed Franklin will become the guiding head of the combination, and he will operate from headquarters to be established in New York.

The taking over of the Saxe circuit was completed during the week, and immediately reports were launched with regard to additional mergers. From St. Louis comes the word that negotiations are on the verge of completion between Wesco and Skouras Brothers, and that the Northwest Theatres of Finkelstein and Ruben have all but succumbed to the four-cornered Middle West pool.

The Saxe deal was finally closed in Milwaukee following an all night session in the law offices of Kaumheimer & Kaumheimer. In attendance at the session were the Saxe brothers, John Dillon, Oscar Brachman, associated with the Saxe interests; Attorney Lawrence A. Olwell, representing Brachman; Attorney James B. B. Lake, representing Midwest Co., Inc.; Attorney Leon E. Kaumheimer and William Kaumheimer.

The transaction involves 45 Wisconsin houses and probably brings to an end the activities of John and Thomas Saxe in the theatre field. It is thought they will confine their attention in the future to their large real estate holdings.

Considerable progress is reported to have been made in the deal for pooling the interests of Skouras Brothers' holdings with Saxe Enterprises of Milwaukee, and also with the efforts to bring into the merger Northwest Theatres and the Circle Thetres, Indianapolis chains. William Goldman is reported to have departed St. Louis for an important position with the Saxe Amusement Enterprises in Milwaukee. It is also said that in the near future George Skouras, younger brother of Spyros and Charles Skouras, may soon depart to take up permanent residence in Milwaukee.

Among the many rumors that are going the rounds is one to the effect that the St. Louis Amusement Company will soon dispose of a number of houses in different parts of St. Louis. Negotiations under way, it is said, would dispose of 4 houses of the company in South St. Louis. There is little of a definite nature regarding this rumor, however. It is intimated that a South St. Louis theatre owner is anxious to strengthen his chain by the addition of the St. Louis Amusement Company houses.

Romaine Fielding, Old Time Actor, Dead

Romaine Fielding, one-time star and director, passed on at the age of 55, Thursday, December 15, at Hollywood. Infection, following the extraction of a tooth, caused the death of the old-time actor, it is said. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Naomi Sachs of St. Louis, and one son, Romaine Fielding.

Fielding once won a popularity contest conducted by the New York World, in which he was voted the most popular screen actor in the country.

U of Virginia Plans Visual Educational Course

During the summer quarter next year a series of demonstrations on visual education employing the motion picture will be included by the University of Virginia, the pictures in use in these demonstrations to be furnished by the educational department of Pathe which has a large library of film especially adapted for use in the class room. Dean Charles G. Maphis of the University plans to have two demonstrations every week during the sessions of the quarter.

Teachers, it is said, will be especially interested in the two series of educational films that Pathe now has in preparation. The first of these is the Pathe series on world geography and the second deals with social and physical geography. The latter series is being prepared under the direction of the Divisions of Anthropology and Geology at Harvard University. They are being titled and edited by graduate students under the supervision of Dr. E. A. Hooton and Dr. Kittery Mather of Harvard. The Division of Anthropology is preparing 10 reels on Africa and Asia, while the Division of Geology is working on 7 films on physical geography.

Pathe will also furnish the Virginia institution with pictures suitable for use in the teaching of current events, history, music and nature study. "The Chronicles of America" series, prepared by the Yale University Press, will also be used in the demonstrations.

New England Honors Remains of W. P. Gray

The body of William P. Gray, head of the Publix interests in New England and active manager of the 150 theatres of that company, who passed away in Beverley Hills, Calif., arrived in Boston on the Twentieth Century at 12:30 last Tuesday noon and left for Lewiston for interment on the Pine Tree Limited at 1:30 that afternoon. Roy Marsden, manager of the Gray Supply Co., Boston, accompanied the body from the Coast.

In Lewiston the body was removed to the Strand theatre, the home theatre of Mr. Gray. There the body lay in state from 10 until 2 o'clock on Wednesday, an unbroken line of mourners passing before the casket. Extremely simple were the services held shortly after 2 o'clock. There was no religious ceremony and the services were held in accordance with plans prepared by the deceased. All the orchestras of the Lewiston theatres and nearby houses played favorite selections of the departed. A Lewiston attorney touched on the charities of Mr. Gray, who had constantly aided those in humbler circumstances than himself.

The 150 managers of the Gray theatres were present as well as every member of the New England Film Board of Trade and friends. The Gray theatres in New England remained closed until 2 o'clock. A special meeting of the New England Film Board adopted resolutions which were telegraphed to the bereaved family.

Seven New Firms Secure New York Charters

The past week brought the incorporation of the following motion picture companies in New York state at Albany: Little Picture House, Inc., $250,000, with Elizabeth Perkins, Sophie K. Smith and Ethelbert Warfield, New York City; The Foreign Dieterich Corporation, capitalization not stated, Ludwig M. Dieterich, Newark, N. J.; John J. C. Humbert, Edward P. Holden, New York City; New Hyde Park Amusement Corporation, $10,000, Gertrude Hoffman, Robert Eliasberg, E. I. Lester, New York City; Guaranteed Pictures Company, Inc., $10,000, Mortimer D. Schwartz, Samuel Goldstein, Charles Schiff, New York City; Queens Amusement Corporation, $5,000, Morris Leff, Henry Liman, Brooklyn; Rosalind M. Abeles, New York.

Washington T. O. Ask Open Market

THROUGH the elimination of arbitrary allocation of product a demand for an open market is voiced by the exhibitor association of the state of Washington, through its secretary, James Hone. If every theatre had free and equal opportunity to compete for the product of every producer and if every producer had free and fair access to the screen of every theatre there would be no existing abuses, says Mr. Hone.

One of the outstanding achievements of the recent Trade Practice Conference, Mr. Hone believes, was placing before the commission evidence that, unless the present special privileges being enjoyed by the producer affiliated theatre were curtailed, an eventual trustification of the industry, through the elimination of the independent exhibitor, would take place."

Flaherty and "Our Gang" Pathe Shorts for Jan. 1

Robert J. Flaherty's "The Twenty-Four Dollar Island," presenting a novel camera treatment of New York, and an "Our Gang" comedy, "Playin' Hookey," are the highlights of the Pathe short subject schedule for the week of January 1. Also included in the list of one- and two-reelers are "The Broncho Buster," an Aesop film fable; Topics of the Day No. 1; Pathe Review No. 1; "The Last Stand," chapter nine of the serial, "The Masked Menace," and issues Nos. 4 and 5 of the Pathe newsreel.

Anthony Mack directed "Our Gang" for Hal Roach under the supervision of Robert McGowan. The first of the new Pathe Review series presents: "A Family Tree," "Interesting People the Editor Meets" and "The Land of the Firewalkers."

Pathe-Bray Film Unit in Grand Canyon Rapids

The most dangerous portion of the Colorado River—the stretch of the stream where the gorge turns from the south to the west and where racing rapids and waves sometimes as high as 30 feet predominate—is now being navigated by the Pathe-Bray picture company making Elmer Smith's story, "The Bride of the Colorado," for Pathe release. The river party has now tasted of the fury of the river and the hardships of being "lost" to the world for three weeks. If they can pass the whirlpools of the treacherous patch of water, it is thought that the remainder of their trip to The Needles, California, will be a comparatively peaceful one.

James Flood and James Horne Columbia Directors

James Flood and James Horne were signed last week by Columbia Pictures to direct several future productions.

Horne started his directorial career with Kalem and has acted as a megaphone wielder for Universal, Pathe, Hal Roach, Thomas Ince, De Mille and Robertson-Cole. Flood made his debut with the Old World company and has directed pictures for Vitagraph, Warners, Fox and First National.

Kansas-Missouri Donates $250,000 Strike Fund

Exhibitors Subscribe Amount at Semi-Annual Session to Guard Against Labor Troubles

ACCEPTING the recent Chicago labor strike as a handwriting on the wall, the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, at its semi-annual convention in the Hotel President, Kansas City, last week subscribed $250,000 to be used to combat strikes and labor troubles in Western Missouri and Kansas in the future. The organization also voted to reaffiliate with the M. P. T. O. A., from which it broke away several years ago to join Allied. The M. P. T. O. K-M for the last year or so has been functioning independently.

The real success of the convention, however, was not in the form of resolutions or actions resulting from voting. Virtually for the first time in the history of M. P. T. O. K-M conventions, exchange representatives, theatrical booking office representatives and practically all branches of the theatre industry were represented in working day and night in making the convention a great success. Credit for bringing about such a condition of harmony goes to R. R. Biechele, president of the M. P. T. O. K-M. Seventeen acts of vaudeville were supplied for the big midnight show on the opening night of the convention. The man who worked overtime in obtaining those acts was W. P. "Bernie" Bernfield of Educational.

The $250,000 subscribed by the exhibitors to be used as a fund to combat labor troubles were accepted as a precedent and each of the 150 exhibitors present subscribed to the fund, which will be drawn upon as needed. The reaffiliation of the organization with the M. P. T. O. A. was expected in advance of the convention.

"Never has the time been more ripe for those in the industry to combine for their own protection," said President Biechele. "There should be only one national organization and all working in the same direction."

L. M. Miller of the Miller theatre interests, Wichita, Kas., announced that he would add $50, $25 and $15 as first, second and third prizes, respectively, to film salesmen obtaining the most new members for the exhibitor organization, the prizes to be awarded at the end of 3-month periods from January 1 to April 1. The present prizes are a $75 traveling bag, a $50 lounging robe and a $25 leather coat, respectively.

The report of the delegates to the recent trade conference was approved. A resolution was adopted favoring a change in the wording of the uniform contract pertaining to road shows, making it optional with the exhibitor whether he play four productions of a block which had been selected by the producer for road showing. The same option also was favored pertaining to free public pre-views.

Another resolution favored allowing the exhibitor to eliminate the same number of pictures from a block as those withdrawn by the producer. Still another resolution opposed non-theatrical events of all kinds. A report on Sunday shows showed that opposition to Sabbath day performances was much less than it previously had been.

Al Williams, United States district attorney in Kansas City, Kas.; Frank McFarland, his assistant; Miss Emma Viets, chairman of the Kansas Censor Board, and Mrs. Eleanore Walton, chairman of the motion picture division of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, were the speakers at the banquet. All praised the increasing harmony between the exhibitors, producers and the public.

Sunday Movie Question Stirs 2 Ohio Towns

WHILE the Sunday movie war is still convulsing the town of Dover, another Ohio town, Ironton, is also witnessing a skirmish between the blues and exhibitors.

From present indications, the theatre men in Dover will emerge victorious from the conflict. George Chrest, manager of the Weber, Edwin F. Allen, manager of the Ohio, and Roscoe Seidell, manager of the Pike, were arrested within 15 minutes after they opened their houses on Sunday, but business increased steadily throughout the day and evening. The blue element searched unsuccessfully the county all the day for a court official who would grant an order closing the theatres. The exhibitors were very promptly released by bond, and were later fined $10 before the mayor. They announce that they will continue to open their houses every Sunday. Chrest is awaiting grand jury action, under bond, as the result of his first arrest several weeks ago. His case will be used to test the blue law.

In Ironton Robert and Joseph Stern, brothers operating the Iron City Amusement Co., opened for business two Sundays in succession, the performances being stopped by the police. At a special session of the grand jury the exhibitors were indicted on two counts. They are expected to take the case through the courts.

Tiffany-Stahl Filming 2, Planning Another

"The Clash" and "The Tragedy of Youth" are now in the course of production at the Tiffany-Stahl studio where another picture will shortly get under way under the direction of Al Roach. Antonio Moreno, Claire Windsor, Eddie Gribbin, Ray Hallor and Sally Rand are the featured players in "The Clash," a crook melodrama, which Christy Cabanne is making. "The Tragedy of Youth" company, including Patsy Ruth Miller, Warner Baxter and William Collier, Jr., will shortly go on location under King Baggott's direction.

The new picture will have Johnny Harron in the leading role; the supporting players are now being assembled and will be announced shortly.

Films and Legitimate Plays Are Combined as Program

MOTION pictures are now being combined with legitimate stock shows for the edification of theatre goers in Fond du Lac, Wis. The Garrick Theatre, operated by the Fond du Lac Theatre Company, of which A. L. Ainsworth is the guiding head, is offering the combination in the keen competition for business.

The program arranged by the Garrick in connection with its legitimate stock shows provides continuous entertainment for its patrons without waits between acts. The program opens with a feature picture, which is followed immediately by the stock production. Between the acts of the regular show newsreels and picture comedies are shown on the screen.

As nearly as possible an atmospheric program is adhered to throughout. The stage and screen productions, as well as the music, follow one general subject.

Fond du Lac has been in the throes of the keenest competition for the past two years, during which time both Saxe and Fischer's Paramount Theatres invaded the city with big houses.

New Bills Due in New York

Considerable Motion Picture Legislation Will Be Attempted at Coming Session

JUDGING from reports at Albany, there will be considerable in the way of motion picture legislation attempted at the coming session of the New York State Legislature, which will get under way on January 4, and which will conclude not later than the middle of March, making its session one of the shortest in years. Much interest will be shown in any stand taken by Governor Alfred E. Smith on the question of motion picture censorship, which he will deliver to the Legislature in January.

The fact that Governor Smith now looms strong as a presidential possibility during the coming year, gives his utterances on motion picture censorship, a nationwide angle. The session will be short for the reason that both parties want all legislation over and out of the way early in order that more time can be devoted to the coming campaign.

It is understood that child welfare organizations are behind a bill that will be introduced in January, having for its purpose the further restriction on admitting unaccompanied children under sixteen years of age to motion picture theatres. These organizations declare that the present law is being flagrantly violated in many instances, particularly in the larger cities, and the only way the situation can be handled is by getting after those persons who assist children in gaining admission to the theatre, and who are not parents, guardians, or authorized to look after such children.

It is very doubtful if any further attempt will be made this coming year in New York State to do away with motion picture censorship. Such bills have had hard sledding during the past years, and the introducers of such measures have only encountered opposition and much hard work and landed nowhere. The fact remains that during the last two or three years the producers have shown very little interest in such bills in New York State, failing to get behind them, while to the exhibitor the question of censorship does not loom as important as it once did.

30 Yearly From Europe

French Production Chief Here, Says That Number of Films Would Satisfy

LOUIS NALPAS, supervising producer of Societe des Cineromans of Paris, is a visitor in New York, and has considerable to say with regard to European participation in the American market. He declares that Europe would be satisfied if the producing units of all its countries could place an aggregate of thirty pictures a year here.

The French producer attributes the quotas and restrictive measures of the European countries to the short-sightedness of America, and says Europe wants only friendly co-operation from this country, which she is not getting. He foresees early action of some kind on the part of France, perhaps a seven to one quota, which is now being discussed there.

With regard to the European situation Nalpas said:

"Insofar as the commercial aspect of the situation is concerned, I believe American companies are beginning to realize that quotas and restrictive measures are largely the result of their own short-sighted policies. When you understand that Europe's entire demands by way of participation in the American market would and could not exceed thirty pictures a year, it will be seen that there is nothing exorbitant demanded.

"I believe that the antipathy which exists in America against the foreign picture today is largely centered in the home offices of the principal distributing companies. No effort is made to convey sales enthusiasm to the men in the field, with the result that all along the line the foreign or imported picture meets with negative co-operation.

"I do not believe it is a misstatement to declare that nobody in Europe objects to the American manner of living or of expression as portrayed on the screen. At the same time it must be conceded that neither France nor any other European country desires a point to be reached where its populace is prone to forget its own customs or habits. Yet that is largely what European governments face because of the preponderance of American motion pictures."

Increases in Ontario Tax Despite New Ticket Price

According to formal announcement by Hon. Dr. J. D. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer, Toronto, there is an increase in the Ontario Amusement Tax for the fiscal year ending October 31 last, despite the abolishment of the ticket tax on admissions up to 25 cents. Simultaneously, Premier G. Howard Ferguson of Ontario has intimated that a further reduction in the amusement tax, affecting tickets up to 50c, will be made by the Ontario Legislature when the 1927 session is held in February. For the first time in five years, the Provincial Government has reported a surplus on financial operations, largely due to the revenue through the sale of liquor and the gasoline tax.

The revenue to the Province through the Amusement Tax amounted to $1,664,000 during the 12 months, an increase of $43,000 over the total for the previous fiscal year. The general situation is such that the Government feels that it is possible to wipe out the tax on tickets from 25c to 50c as further relief to theatre patrons and exhibitors.

This is in line with the promise made by Premier Ferguson in 1926 to a large deputation of Ontario exhibitors that amusement tax reductions would be made whenever the situation warranted such a step.

Electrical Research Co. in Important Deal

A CONTRACT has been entered into by the Electrical Research Products Corporation, licensors of Vitaphone and Movietone, and the Music Publishers' Protective Association in behalf of 63 music publishers. By the terms of the contract Electrical Research Products acquires the privilege to use the music issued by the publishers, for which royalties of $100,000 for the first year and $150,000 for the second year are guaranteed by the music publishers.

It is the opinion of E. C. Mills, chairman of the board of directors of the Music Publishers Protective Association, that the actual royalties will exceed the guarantee and that the last three years of the contract would see the use of Vitaphone and Movietone so complete that the publishers' income would be amply increased. Through separate agreements with their publishers authors and composers will share in the royalties.

Fox Films Takes Over Ascher Enterprises

FOX FILM CORPORATION, which has had an interest in Ascher Brothers Enterprises for approximately two years, has taken over this pioneer Chicago theatre company and will hereafter operate the six houses which at the time of the transfer were under the direct management of Aschers. The houses include the Sheridan at Irving and Sheridan; the Terminal on Lawrence Avenue; the Portage Park at Irving and Milwaukee; the Crown on West Division Street, the Commercial in South Chicago and the Midwest at 3530 Archer Avenue.

Clyde Eckhardt has been elected president of Ascher Brothers, Nate Ascher remaining as an executive of the corporation as treasurer; and Gus Greenebaum, secretary.

Warners Finish Four; Three Still in Work

Four productions were completed this week at the Warner studio, where three more productions are still in work preparatory to the closing of the studio for an eight weeks' vacation period.

Lloyd Bacon has finished directing "The Lion and the Mouse," the old play in which Vitaphone interpolations have been made, talking, singing and other sound effects. Monte Blue's "Across the Atlantic," Irene Rich's "Powder My Back" and Rin-Tin-Tin's "A Race for Life" are also done.

The Vitaphone stages are being used for "Tenderloin," the Dolores Costello vehicle being made by Michael Curtiz. Ross Lederman is directing interiors for "Rinty of the Desert," the canine star's next picture. "The City of Sin," occupying one of the largest sets at the studio, is also nearly completed under the direction of Archie Mayo.

Pathe Will Hold Shows for Remote Exhibitors

Giving exhibitors remote from exchange centers a chance to see films before bookings Harry Lorch, of the Chicago Pathe exchange, is giving trade shows for the benefit of showmen in the southeastern part of Illinois.

Manager Lorch's initial trade show was held at the Apollo Theatre, Princeton, Illinois, and invitations were extended to exhibitors within a radius of 100 miles. The show started at 10:30 A. M. and continued through the day and evening.

Amazon Jungle Film Next Del Rio Release

Dolores Del Rio will make her next screen appearance in "The Gateway of the Moon," drama of the South American jungle. Previously it had been announced by Fox Films that the star's next picture would be "No Other Woman," but this has been withdrawn in favor of the new film which, it is said, will be released on New Year's Day. The story is by Clifford Bax, and in its screen translation are Walter Pidgeon and Leslie Fenton. Comedy is provided by Ted McNamara. John Griffith Wray directed.

Substitutions Nullify Contract, Is Ruling

Warner Bros. Lose Verdict in Action Against Seattle Exhibitor by Arbitration Decision

AN arbitration board sitting in the state of Washington has handed down a ruling to the effect that an exhibitor is justified in nullifying a contract if substitutions have been made by the producing company in stellar players or directors. The decision was made in denying the claim of Warner Bros. against Waldo C. Ives, an exhibitor of Anacortes, Washington. The decision was made after only thirty minutes' deliberation and the exhibitor was awarded $14 costs.

James Hone, secretary of the state exhibition unit, represented Ives at the hearing and pointed out many discrepancies in casts and directors submitted in the original contract signed between Warners and Ives.

The distributor brought action for $117.28 for rentals and expenses covering "Simple Sis," "Bitter Apples," "What Happened to Father," "Gay Old Bird" and "Dearie." Hone, in pressing the claim of Ives cited the resolution passed by the Trade Practice Conference against substitutions and called attention to the "Act of God" clause of the contract, which he said relieved the distributor from supplying a picture, and similarly should relieve the exhibitor of playing it.

Hone exhibited a Warner campaign book in which he pointed out the various changes to which Ives objected in cancelling his contract. This showed that "Simple Sis" was to have been directed by Lewis Milestone from a story by Darryl Zanuck, and, instead was directed by Herman Raymaker from a story by Melville Grossman. Milestone also was to have directed "What Happened to Father," but this was directed by John G. Adolphi.

"Bitter Apples" was to have been directed by James Flood, but was made by Harry Hoyt. "Dearie" was to have had the late Willard Louis as star, but instead had William Collier, Jr., and "The Gay Old Bird," which was to have starred Louise Fazenda, featured John T. Murray.

In connection with the hearing Carl Stearn, Warner manager, declared his home office had authorized him to relieve any exhibitor, because of substitutions, from playing "Climbers," "Irish Hearts" and "White Flannels."

FBO's 1927-28 Program Almost 100% Finished

WHEN the three pictures now in work and the five in preparation are finished, production activities at the F B O studio on the entire 1927-28 program of pictures will have been completed with the exception of three pictures. This sets a record for his company, according to William Le Baron, vice-president of F B O in charge of production. Mr. Le Baron is now working out plans for the schedule for next year.

The three pictures now in different stages of filming are "The Devil's Trade Mark," a Leo Meehan production; "Beyond London's Lights," which Tom Terriss is directing, and "The Bantam Cowboy," starring Buzz Barton; "Skinner's Big Idea," which Lynn Shores will megaphone, and "Alex, the Great," to be directed by Dudley Murphy, will be under way before the end of the week. In the immediate future will be started "The Trail of Courage," starring Bob Steele, "The Law of Fear," starring Ranger, the dog; and "Sally of the Scandals," a Ralph Ince production.

The three pictures that will complete th 1927-28 program will be "The Little Yellow House," "Crooks Can't Win," and the sixth of the Ranger series.

Universal Has Winter Releases Lined Up

One of the strongest line-ups of features made by Universal will be available during the months of January and February, during which time vehicles of Laemmle stars will be ready for release from the Universal exchanges.

One of the most important releases will be "The Cohens and the Kellys in Paris," a sequel to "The Cohens and the Kellys." Two Reginald Denny vehicles available for exhibitors will be "On Your Toes" and "That's My Daddy." Glenn Tryon will make another screen appearance in "A Hero for a Night." Two additional releases for the current season will be "The Irresistible Lover" and "A Man's Past."

Other special releases will be "The Shield of Honor"; "Midnight Rose," with Lya De Putti and Kenneth Harlan; "Finders Keepers," starring Laura La Plante"; "The Four Flusher," with George Lewis, and a Hoot Gibson western; "The Rawhide Kid."

In the order of their release the western and stunt pictures scheduled for release during the winter are: "Fangs of Destiny," starring Dynamite, the dog; "Desert Dust," featuring Ted Wells; "The Air Patrol," starring Al Wilson; "The Fearless Rider," with Fred Humes; "The Call of the Heart," another Dynamite vehicle; "The Clean-up Man," also starring Wells, and "The Phantom Flyer," another Wilson picture.

Lewis Stone to Play in Jannings' "The Patriot"

Lewis Stone, after four years' absence from the Paramount lots, will return to the Lasky studio to play a supporting role in Emil Jannings' next starring vehicle, "The Patriot." Stone will play the role of Count Pahlen, originally intended for the German star, who will play the part of Czar Paul, son of Catherine the Great.

"The Patriot" is a story from the pen of Merejkowski.

New Loew Stock Issue

Public is Offered 150,000 Shares of Preferred Stock in New Financing Deal

AN offering is announced of 150,000 shares of $6.50 cumulative preferred stock of Loew's, Inc., priced at $100 per share and accrued dividend to yield 6½ per cent. This stock financing project is in the hands of a group consisting of Dillon, Read & Company, Blyth, Ritter & Company and A. G. Becker & Company.

Stock purchase warrants, detachable after July 1, 1928, will entitle the holder to purchase common stock in the ratio of one share of common stock for each two shares of preferred at $75 a share on or before April 1, 1929, and at $80 a share thereafter to and including April 1, 1931.

Loew's, Inc., for the fiscal year ended August 31, 1927, showed consolidated net earnings, after all charges, of $6,737,205, equivalent to 6.9 times the maximum annual dividend requirements on this issue of preferred stock.

Statements accompanying the announcement of the new stock issue outline the following Loew facts:

"As an outgrowth of amusement enterprises which have been operated successfully since 1905, Loew's occupies an important position in each of the three divisions of the motion picture industry—production, distribution and exhibition.

"Through subsidiary and affiliated companies, Loew's, Inc., owns, leases or directs a chain of 115 theatres in the United States and Canada. Eight additional theatres are now under construction in this country. Foreign operations include the control of theatres in various European capitals and the distribution of films throughout the world. The number of cash admissions to the company's theatres during the year ended August 31, 1927, exceeded 100,000,000.

"The company also owns Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, which ranks as one of the world's leading motion picture producers.

"Proceeds of the new stock issue will be used for additions and improvements to theatre properties, for increased working capital and for other corporate purposes.

"An extra dividend of $1 a share payable December 31, was recently declared on the company's common stock in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 50 cents a share."

Authors, Producers Sign

Hays Association Agrees With Authors' League on Plan for Rejection of Stories

AS a result of negotiations conducted for several weeks past between Will H. Hays and a committee from the Authors' League of America, an agreement has been signed which will bring about a better understanding between author and producer, and which, it is thought, will benefit author, producer and public in the matter of screen stories.

The Authors' League committee that has been conferring with Hays consists of Leroy Scott, chairman, Bayard Vellier, Rex Beach and Owen Davis. Their agreement with the Hays organization regards the method of rejection of books and plays by members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. It is expected to increase the quality and quantity of stories from experienced writers, and will further aid the industry in eliminating unsuitable material from the screen.

The agreement is signed by Owen Davis, president of the Authors' League, George Middleton, president of the Dramatists' Guild of the Authors' League, Inez Haynes Irwin, president of the Authors' Guild of the Authors' League, and Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

By the terms of the agreement, when a company member of the Hays organization believes a book or play unsuited for the screen, the association is so notified and an investigation follows. If the association considers it unsuitable the author is so notified.

After a story has been rejected the author may prepare a new story with the unsuitable material removed and with a new title, which in no way suggests the old title. The story is then again submitted with the distinct understanding that it shall not be publicized or advertised in any way that will connect the new story with the old, and that it will not be presented in any way that would mislead theatregoers.

"The Enemy" Premiere at Astor, Dec. 27

"THE ENEMY," the Channing Pollack play which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has transferred to the screen with Lillian Gish playing the leading role, will have its world premiere performance at the Astor Theatre on the evening of Tuesday, December 27. The new picture will succeed "The Student Prince," which has been housed at the Astor for the last four months.

Fred Niblo directed "The Enemy," which has Ralph Forbes and a large cast in support.

I.P.M.P.I. Re-Elect Billy Bitzer President

At a recent meeting of the International Photographers of the Motion Picture Industries, Local No. 644, I. A. T. S. E., 160 West 45th St., New York, G. W. "Billy" Bitzer, was re-elected to the office of President.

Among the other officers elected for the ensuing year were Walter Scott, of Movietone fame, 1st Vice-President; Frank Zucker, A. S. C., 2nd Vice-President; Marcel Le Picard, 3rd Vice-President; Frank Gordon Kirby, Treasurer and Al. Ansbacher, Secretary.

In addition to the election of officers at the last meeting the Constitution and By-Laws of the I. P. M. P. I., Local No. 644, were read and accepted. Also the names of twenty-three new members, among them being many of the best known cinematographers on the West Coast.

It seems apparent that the West Coast cameramen are beginning to see the advantages of organization and are gradually filling the gap that will make the East and the West Coast bodies as one.

Educational's Color Films Nearing Completion

The two Hope Hampton productions, done in natural color, are rapidly nearing completion. Work has progressed so far on "The Call of the Sea" that it will be released by Educational on January 1. It is thought that "Love's Springtime," the other Technicolor subject, will be completed in time for release a short time after the first of the new year.

Harold R. Hall directed the entire production, all the exteriors of which were taken in Bermuda.

Colored display cards, black and white lobby stills, hand colored slides, one sheet and three sheets in full color, a large-sized eight-page press sheet, advertising cuts and mats, cuts of the star and scenes of the picture are included in the array of accessories being prepared for exhibitors. Another feature of the press sheet will be the musical suggestions for the picture to be outlined in detail.

Murnau Completing "Four Devils" Cast for Fox

F. W. Murnau has already chosen five actors for important roles in "The Four Devils," his next production for Fox Films.

Mary Duncan will play one of the feminine leads, a high caste adventuress. J. Farrell McDonald will have the part of the old clown. Charles Morton, Barry Norton and Dione Ellis will be three of "The Four Devils," an aerial acrobatic troupe around whom the events of the story center. The fourth and most important of "The Four Devils" is still to be selected. The director is seeking a girl for this part, has made many tests for the character and has reduced the candidates to four, but none of these has been chosen.

In the meantime set construction is under way with William Darling supervising the work. Production will start January 2.

Franklin Completes Tour of Wesco Circuit

Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres, Inc., has returned to Los Angeles from a tour of the circuit which carried him to Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and other points. The chief object of his trip was to inspect the new Paramount theatres in Seattle and Portland, which West Coast will operate.

Accompanying him on the tour were Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, and Nicholas Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Columbia's Midwest Division Holds Meet

PRESIDED over by Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, a special sales meeting of the branch managers of Columbia's Midwest Division was held in Chicago last week at the branch office of Columbia Pictures. Each manager had a report on the status of his branch at the time, and Mr. Brandt and Jack Cohn, treasurer of the company, were able to learn of the national situation so far as their exchanges are concerned. The Columbia president outlined his projects for the season and expressed his enthusiasm with the showing his company is making, pointing out the fact that his company's business to date is 40 per cent greater than it was at this time last year.

Roy Alexander, manager of Universal's Chicago exchange for the past eight years, was appointed associate manager of the Chicago office.

A similar conference with eastern division managers will be held upon the return of the two executives from California, where they will go over the West Coast situation with John Ragland, general manager of the West Coast exchanges.

Eve Southern Signed by Tiffany-Stahl

Eve Southern, who rose to prominence as a result of her selection by Douglas Fairbanks for a role in his latest picture, "The Gaucho," has signed a long-term contract with Tiffany-Stahl Productions. She played the role of Judith in the Tiffany-Stahl special, "Wild Geese." Plans are now under way to start her in a starring vehicle within a few days.

Wesco Theatres Get "Talking Film" Equipment

Contracts for the installation of Western Electric equipment in 12 additional theatres on the Pacific Coast controlled by West Coast for the presentation of Vitaphone and Movietone productions have just been closed. Equipment has already been or is in the process of being installed in three other houses of West Coast Theatres.

"Legionnaires in Paris" Will Play Hippodrome

The Hippodrome theatre in New York will be the scene of the premiere on December 25 of F B O comedy feature "Legionnaires in Paris," one of the company's three Grand February Jubilee productions.

Most of the picture was shot during the recent Legion Convention in Paris by a corps of F B O cameramen who went to Paris on the Leviathan.

Baumann Special Sales Agent for United Artists

C. O. Baumann, who has been stationed at the Cleveland office of United Artists as a salesman, was last week promoted to the post of special representative. He succeeds Carlos Moore, who has resigned and will operate from the Washington and Pittsburgh offices.

Paramount, Loew In Deal

Paramount Abandons Plan for New York Neighborhood Houses and Sites Go to Loew

PARAMOUNT has concluded a deal with the Loew circuit whereby Loews will take over four of the five sites in Greater New York where Paramount was to have built new theatres. The latter company has decided not to enter the neighborhood field for the present in Greater New York. Loew's will take over all construction plans and carry the projects to completion.

The plans call for theatres that will seat from 4,000 to 5,000 each. They will be owned and operated as Loew houses, and will be built in the following locations:

Jamaica Avenue and Merrick Road, Jamaica; Flatbush Avenue and Tilden Avenue, in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn; Saratoga Avenue and Pitkin Avenue, in the Brownsville district of Brooklyn; on the Grand Concourse, between 183rd Street and 184th Street, the Bronx. Plans for the latter theatre have been ready for some time. It will be an atmospheric house built along Venetian lines.

Paramount retains only one of the original five sites on which it contemplated building. This is on De Kalb Avenue in Brooklyn, and the house will be known as the Brooklyn. The theatre will be operated in direct competition to the Brooklyn Mark Strand and the other large houses which are in the immediate vicinity. The Mark Strand is only two blocks away from the Paramount site. The new Fox house now being built on Nevins Street and Flatbush Avenue is another in the cycle that will strive for Brooklyn's best motion picture patronage, as is Loew's Metropolitan, which is a matter of but five minutes' walk from the Paramount site.

Warners Finish Product

With Entire Season's Output Completed, Company Closes Studios Until February

WARNER BROS. have closed their Coast studios for two months, with the announcement that production has been entirely completed on the 1927-28 program. The 26 pictures are finished, according to the announcement, and prints will be in the New York office shortly. Stars, featured players and directors are directors are taking a vacation until February, but the scenario staff is busy with the preparation of next year's story material.

Included in this year's product are a number of specials with Vitaphone accompaniment. "The Jazz Singer" has already been seen to advantage. Others that are now announced as completed include "The Lion and the Mouse," in which many of the lines will be spoken; "Glorious Betsy," starring Dolores Costello, and "Tenderloin,", with the same star.

Among the regular releases completed without the Vitaphone accompaniment are: "Husband's For Rent," "Beware of Married Men," "A Race for Life," "The Little Snob," "Across the Atlantic," "Powder My Back," "Domestic Troubles," "The Crimson City," "Rinty of the Desert."

With the 1927-28 product out of the way, so far as the studio executives are concerned, elaborate preparations are under way for the 1928-29 production schedule. Expansion in every phase of the business is the Warner outlook for the coming season. The technical staff at the studio is now occupied with the supervision of a number of improvements to be installed before February.

Warners last week signed three of their popular players to new contracts. They are May McAvoy, Leila Hyams and Myrna Loy. All three signed for a number of years, and will have prominent places in the stories to be filmed by the company next season. Miss McAvoy's latest appearances were in "The Jazz Singer" and "The Lion and the Mouse." Miss Hyams has appeared with Monte Blue in "The Beale" and "One Round Hogan." Her latest was "The Crimson City." Miss Loy's latest achievement was in "The Girl From Chicago."

Arbitration Settles Film Dispute

ARBITRATION has settled the dispute between James E. Hartlove, proprietor of the Flag Theatre, and the Washington, D. C. Film Board. Hartlove took over the house formerly run by his father, and refused to assume contracts his father had made. The credit committee of the Film Board refused to extend credit and insisted that the younger Hartlove make a deposit with each exchange. This demand was refused and Hartlove brought court action, which alleged a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

As the result of the decision by the arbitration board, Hartlove has agreed to play 50 per cent of the pictures bought for the house, and the exchanges have agreed that the $500 deposit asked by each of them is not necessary.

Clarence Brown Signs New M-G-M Contract

A new long-term directorial contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been signed by Clarence Brown.

Brown, who directed "Flesh and the Devil," "Love" and "The Trail of '98" is now working on the editing and titling of the last picture which has occupied his talents for practically a year. He is to be assigned to direct "Heat," starring Greta Garbo, in the near future.

In and Out of Town

IRENE RICH, Warner Bros. star, is planning a trip to New York for her annual vacation. She expects to arrive in the east a few days after the New Year and will spend two weeks shopping and attending theatres.

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president of Paramount, left New York Saturday, December 17, for the Paramount studios in Hollywood. He will remain there for about five weeks.

SAM SAX, president of Gotham, will leave Los Angeles immediately upon the completion of "Bare Knees" for New York to confer with Budd Rogers, Gotham vice-president, regarding future Gotham productions.

CHARLES R. ROGERS, who has been making the Ken Maynard pictures for First National, arrived in New York this week to confer with Clifford B. Hawley, president of the company, and Richard A. Rowland, vice-president and production manager, on future films for First National.

LOUIS WEISS, vice-president, and Adolph Weiss, treasurer, of Weiss Bros.' Artclass Pictures Corporation, have left New York for California to supervise production on their two new serials, "The Mysterious Airman" and "You Can't Win."

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, president of United Artists, left New York last Thursday, December 15, for Hollywood accompanied by Al Lichtman, vice-president and general manager of distribution, and Lou Anger, vice-president and general manager of United Artists Theatre Circuit. Mr. Anger will leave them in Chicago in order to attend the opening of the United Artists theatre in the Windy City on December 26.

HARRY GOETZ, assistant treasurer of Paramount, left Los Angeles December 20 for a trip to the Paramount home office in New York. He has been in Hollywood for more than a month.

HARRY BUCKLEY, vice-president of United Artists Corporation, left New York Friday, December 16, for Toronto, Canada, where he will personally supervise a presentation of Douglas Fairbanks' latest vehicle.

M. H. HOFFMAN, vice-president and general manager of Tiffany-Stahl Productions, who has been in New York for the past five weeks, left for Hollywood Monday, December 19, to plan next year's schedule with John Stahl, vice-president supervising production.

C. E. SULLIVAN, F B O assistant treasurer, arrived in New York this week for a brief visit. He will return to the Coast early next week after having spent the Christmas holidays with his mother.

PAUL L. STEIN, Pathe-De Mille director, has returned from a three months' visit to Berlin.

GLORIA SWANSON, United Artists star, left New York Tuesday, December 20, to spend the holidays in Los Angeles and also to be present at the opening of the new United Artists house in Los Angeles on December 26.

MARIE DRESSLER arrived in New York last week to spend the Yuletide holidays. She will probably remain in the east until after January 1 before returning to the M-G-M studio on the Coast.

J. J. Murdock, President of Pathe

Murdock Denies Report of Leaving Pathe

Stating that Pathe has made remarkable business progress in the last few weeks and is in a better state now than it ever was, J. J. Murdock, president of Pathe, branded as false a report that he was about to resign owing to dissatisfaction with the business being done by Pathe.

Answering a query of The Wall Street Journal as to the veracity of the report, Mr. Murdock stated there was absolutely no truth in the rumor. "No such action has been discussed or ever thought of," said the Pathe executive.

"God's Clay" to Be Made by British-First National

Following "Confetti," the initial Graham Cutts feature. First National's British producing unit will make "God's Clay" from an original story by Claude Askew; it goes into production immediately. Following this will be the screen version of the Sam Benelli play, "The Jest," announced last week by E. Bruce Johnston, vice-president of First National in charge of foreign affairs.

Tiffany-Stahl in Deal With Gvalani Bros.

The First Congregational Church, President Coolidge's church in Washington, of which Dr. Noble Pierce is pastor, has arranged to exhibit twice weekly the International Newsreel. One issue will be shown on Sunday and the other on Thursday.

Universal to Star Veidt in "The Charlatan"

Conrad Veidt, German star under contract to Universal, has been cast for the starring role in the company's forthcoming picturization of "The Charlatan," which George Melford will direct under the supervision of Carl Laemmle, Jr. The stage play by Leonard Prasking and Ernest Pascal had a Broadway run several years ago.

"Dove" Rialto Premiere Postponed to Dec. 31

The New York premiere of "The Dove," Norma Talmadge's first production for United Artists, will take place on New Year's Eve, Saturday, December 31, instead of Christmas Eve, December 24, the date previously announced for the showing of the Talmadge vehicle at the Rialto Theatre.

George Melford Will Direct Conrad Veidt

When Conrad Veidt, German actor, under contract to Universal Pictures, plays in "The Charlatan," adapted from the mystery play of that name, he will be directed by George Melford. The production will be supervised by Carl Laemmle, Jr. Camera work will begin at an early date.

M-G-M Buys Rights to Novel, "Rasputin"

The motion picture rights to "Rasputin," the Russian novel by Alfred Henschke Klabund, have been acquired by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. No announcement has been made yet of production plans.

Margaret Quimby Joins "Tragedy of Youth" Cast

The latest player to join the cast of Tiffany-Stahl's "The Tragedy of Youth" is Margaret Quimby. Patsy Ruth Miller, featured in this film, has support from Warner Baxter and William Collier, Jr.

Edison Lauds Fox' Movietone Device

VOICING his opinion that "Movietone is a distinct advance towards the perfection of talking pictures," and believing that "it will go a long way toward creating a better understanding among the peoples of all the world," Thomas Edison, distinguished inventor, was visibly impressed by the new picture-sound device following a special screening of a number of Movietone subjects at his laboratories in Orange, New Jersey.

Mr. Edison saw himself on the screen on the occasion of his talk over the radio from the Edison home, when recently the golden anniversary of the birth of the phonograph was celebrated. The Movietone record of the message to America from Premier Benito Mussolini was also exhibited, as well as two editions of the Fox Movietone News, and a number of individual Movietone subjects.

Stanley-Clark Houses Drop Newspaper Courtesy Pass

The newspapers of Pittsburgh have been notified that the courtesy pass will be discontinued by the Stanley-Clark-Davis theatres in that city.

In the form of a box-office order, the business manager and city editor have been in the custom of writing one double pass in the afternoon and evening. Each paper wrote 48 passes a week to a theatre, in other words. The legit houses originated this custom.

From now on the dramatic editor, theatre advertising agent, editor, and all others that are entitled to courtesies will receive such from the publicity director.

Stenographers, office boys, and all minor employees are not entitled to passes, the theatres assert. Looking at the newspaper angle, who give the theatres lots of free space, they feel that they should get passes for this reason. This angle is worked differently by the Loew Thatres (Penn and Aldine). The editor receives 48 single passes and he uses them as before. It will be interesting to all showmen to see how this change will affect the Stanley Theatres with the newspapers.

The situation in other towns varies. The newspapers in Memphis may write as many passes as they wish with no restrictions. In Cleveland the critics have a season pass to all houses, and by a standing rule in that city any other man accepting a theatre pass will be fired. The papers in St. Louis have a rule similar to Cleveland. The theatre business is the only one that loses nothing tangible by giving something away for nothing, which has made the pass a ticklish matter in the theatres.

"Abie's Irish Rose" Cast Filmed by Paramount

Casting for Paramount's "Abie's Irish Rose" has been completed.

Jean Hersholt plays the father of Abie, who will be impersonated by Charles Rogers. Nancy Carroll will have the title role and J. Farrell McDonald the role of her father. Camillus Pretal and Nick Cogley will be the rabbi and priest respectively. Betty May, Esther Garcia, Linda Lorado, Marie Janess, Marie Stapleton and Jean Stewart will be the six bridesmaids. Bernard Corcey and Ida Kramer will play the roles they created during the run of the play in New York—Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cohen. Rosa Rosanova will also have a part.

Miss Ann Nichols is personally supervising the production, which Victor Fleming is directing.

Stage Band Policy Popular at Minneapolis State

The new stage band show policy inaugurated recently by Harold Finkelstein at the State theatre in Minneapolis and the Capitol theatre in St. Paul is proving very successful and will be continued indefinitely. These shows make their debut at the Capitol and are transferred the next week to Minneapolis. They feature the F. & R. ballet, the F. & R. male chorus, a band, and artists brought from Chicago and New York. Each theatre maintains a separate band.

Actors Sign Agreement

Controversy Ends Between Free Lance Players and Producers With New Contract

THE actors branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has adopted a standard form of contract by which the controversy between the producers and free-lance actors has been settled. Many questions were involved in the controversy that have been annoying to both the actor and producer for some time past. It is thought the new agreement will work out satisfactorily to all parties. The new contract was given final consideration during the week by the directors of the Academy and will become effective January 1st.

One of the principal problems that has been agitating both the actor and the producer was that of the termination of a players' engagement and a fair and equitable notice of such termination of employment. Another explains the "on or about" term in regard to the date of commencing an engagement. A six-day week of 48 hours is prescribed in the new document as a basis for salaries.

One of the principal clauses eliminated in the new contract, and one which gives the actor more consideration than he has had in the past, is that by which a player might be discharged for being "unsatisfactory." The "unsatisfactory" clause has been an elastic one in the past and has been applied frequently by producers to terminate contracts.

Under the conditions of the contract adopted is an added clause providing for the termination of a player's services anytime within thirty days prior to the start of filming or during production by the payment of one week's unearned salary.

New Houses for Seattle

Rumor Says Fox and Pantages Contemplate Building if Proper Sites are Available

FOX and Pantages are planning the building of new theatres in Seattle, according to reports in the Pacific Northwest. The city has had an unprecedented building boom during the past year, and the impression is general that both of these concerns will be launching new building projects in the near future.

Considerable significance was placed on the recent visit of Adolph Zukor, Nicholas M. Schenck, Sam Katz and Harold B. Franklin to Seattle, though complete inspection of the new Publix theatre was given as the object of their visit.

According to the rumors, Fox interests are contemplating the erection in Seattle of their largest house in the Northwest. It is said that the house is assured as soon as a satisfactory site can be found of not less than half a block.

The present Pantages property is in the midst of what is rapidly developing into a financial and office building district. It is contended they must find a site in the new theatrical district if they are to maintain the prestige they have enjoyed in the past.

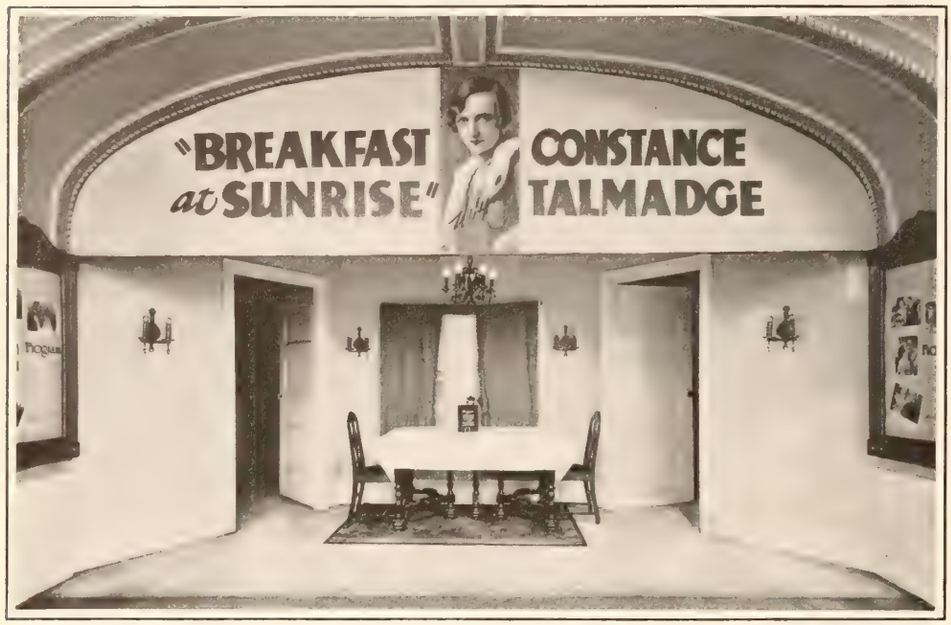
It is said that Pantages are negotiating for a site on Olive Way between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, which would give them the required amount of space for such a theatre as they contemplate building. No prospective site for the new Fox house has been advanced by those who claim to be in the know with regard to the Fox building plans.

Among other rumors hinted at since the visit of the Paramount and Publix officials to Seattle is the possible closing of the Liberty and United Artists theatres in Seattle. Both are Wesco houses. Some credence is placed in the possible closing of the Liberty, but it is thought unlikely that the United Artists house will be closed.

Carthay Circle Will Continue as Fox House

UNDER contracts closed by James R. Grainger, general sales manager of Fox Films, the Carthay Circle Theatre in Los Angeles will continue as an exclusive Fox house at a top price of $2. The contract calls for the showing of four Fox specials during the next 18 months.

The Murnau production, "Sunrise," now playing to record business, will be followed at the Carthay Circle by "Four Sons," the John Ford production; "Naples," co-starring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell; "The Four Devils," Murnau's new production, and "The Cock-Eyed World," to co-feature Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe



Foreign Legion Story Bought by M-G-M

"The Bugle Sounds," a novel by Major Zinovi Pochkoff, commanding officer of one of the French Foreign Legion battalions, has been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will form the background of a new M-G-M production. The book was published last year by Appleton and it is believed that it will be made into a starring vehicle.

Tiffany-Stahl Will Make "The Yellow Passport"

Tiffany-Stahl Productions will produce a screen version of "The Yellow Passport," the play by Abraham S. Schomer, which was a legitimate stage attraction later condensed into a [illegible]. Schomer is the author of "Today," "The Inner Man," "Ruling Passions" and other plays.

Exhibitors Service Bureau

Theatre Man Heads Drive for Xmas Toys for Poor

J. P. HARRISON, manager of the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Tex., with the co-operation of two local newspapers, initiated the drive which will insure every poor child in the city of receiving a Christmas toy.

Announcement of the "toys for every child" campaign was made through the newspapers sponsoring the drive, which is certain to add to the prestige and good will which Harrison and the Hippodrome enjoy as a result of the many worthy community movements in which they have taken a leading part.

Quoting from the newspapers, "Assurance that every child in Waco, no matter how poor their parents, will have a toy this Christmas, is the aim of several Waco institutions in making arrangements for distribution of toys by Santa Claus on the day before Yuletide Sunday.

"Co-operating in the plan to bring happiness to the hearts of unfortunate children The News-Tribune and Times-Herald, the Boy Scouts, the Girls' Reserve and the Hippodrome Theatre, where the Christmas program and presentation of presents will be staged.

"But the success of the project depends upon the children of Waco, the boys and girls who never fail to get any toys, and who want to be sure that everybody else will be as lucky."

Here is the plan:

If there is some toy around your house that you have grown tired of playing with, or is in need of repair, bring it to the Hippodrome, any time between now and Christmas, but the sooner the better. As an extra inducement arrangements have been made by which those bringing a toy will be rewarded by free admission to the show.

Manager J. P. Harrison of the Hippodrome has waived all restrictions as to the show those bringing toys may attend. The offer is effective immediately, which is more good news for the young folk, because a picture of especial interest to boys and girls, starring their own favorite, Mary Pickford, is being shown.

Toys brought to the Hippodrome by the big-hearted little folk will be turned over to the Boy Scouts, who will proceed to repair or paint or do anything else needed to make each toy regain that brand-new appearance. Dolls whose dresses are torn or too old-fashioned will be adorned in new costumes to be made by the Girls' Reserves.

Essay Contest Links Ford Car and Keith Theatre

"Why Keith-Albee vaudeville and the new Ford automobile are great Achievements?" is the subject of a 500 word essay contest conducted by Manager John F. Royal, manager of the Keith Palace theatre. The prize is a new Ford. The contest lasted one week. It started Sunday, December 18th and closes December 24th. The prize will be announced January 3d. Judges are William Vorpe of the Plain Dealer, Archie Bell of The News and E. P. Austin of The Press. This is the swiftest contest ever run in Cleveland. Announcement was made just one week prior to its taking place. The person who wins the prize will receive a new Ford.

THE matched numbers idea found a happy application recently in Lincoln, Neb., as an exploitation stunt for "Get Your Man," playing at the Orpheum theatre. Manager Charles F. Shire issued heralds bearing duplicate numbers and tying up with the title of the picture. The copy advised people to "get their man," the holder of a herald with a matching number and see the show. At the top of the throwaways a heart was printed and then followed the advice "Don't be broken-hearted. Get Your Man. Find the person who has the duplicate of this card (same number) and come to the Orpheum to see 'Get Your Man.'"

BELIEVED to be the first instance of its kind in theatrical history, a bank in Oakland, Calif., has tied up with the Grandlake Theatre of that city in plugging the sale of West Coast Scrip, through which theatregoers are given a 10 per cent discount over box office price. The bank assigned a special teller at a special window to sell nothing but Scrip, and placed a poster before the bank. The bank tied in because of the "thrift" angle in the sale of Scrip.

GIVING exhibitors remote from the exchange center a chance to see pictures before they buy is the policy inaugurated by Manager Harry Lorch, of the Chicago Pathe exchange, in giving trade shows for the benefit of showmen in the southeastern part of Illinois. Manager Lorch's initial trade show was held at the Apollo Theatre, Princeton, Illinois, and invitations were extended to exhibitors within a radius of 100 miles. The show started at 10:30 in the morning and continued through the day and evening except for lunch and dinner.

MANAGER JAMES H. McKOY made two beaverboard circles representing balloons and hung them in the arch to advertise "Now We're in the Air" at the Rex theatre, Spartanburg, S. C. Cloth was glued all around the beaverboard frame, to give to the sides facing the street the effect of half of an inflated balloon. In the back of the beaverboard, a hole was cut large enough to insert a 14-inch electric fan and when this was turned on, it filled out the cloth and gave the effect of a balloon hanging in the arch. Using small white rope, baskets were suspended from the balloons.

MANAGER SAM HAMMOND found it profitable to invite all salesladies to a special morning matinee of "Becky" at the Publix Egyptian Theatre, Greenville, S. C. The special matinee started at 7 A.M., and after the special screening, the 105 ladies present were served toast and hot coffee by a local cafeteria gratis. Hammond arranged to get in a short talk about the theatre and the forthcoming pictures, which was well received.

WALTER L. MORRIS flooded the city with a wide distribution of imprinted papers to advertise "Underworld" at the Plaza Theatre, Asheville, N. C. The imprint in large red letters read, "Bull Weed Escapes—Watch for your Lives—See 'Underworld'—Plaza—Thurs., Fri., Sat."

Key City Reports

New York City

PRE-CHRISTMAS cheer doesn't extend to theatre box offices, and the managers of Broadway picture houses are being well reminded of the fact this year. Last week saw several low spots in the gate-receipt check-ups, though with all things considered there is no reason, on the record, to regard the depression as anything but seasonal and to be expected. Indeed, the evidence was that if you had what they liked the patrons would be there to pay for it.

The Paramount registered a good week's business, a very healthy response being credited for the most part to the attractions of a Frank Cambria stage show with Mae Murray as the star. Based on averages and capacity the Paramount was in lead position with this Mae Murray stage number and "Honeymoon Hate," not rated very highly, as the screen feature. Well up, too, was "Love" at the Embassy.

Others to show more than satisfactory returns for the week were "Wings," now the leader among the long run Broadway offerings since "The King of Kings" closed its Gaiety engagement of 34 weeks' duration; "The Jazz Singer," the Vitaphone presentation of Al Jolson at Warners; "Now We're in the Air" at the Rialto; "Helen of Troy" at the Globe, and "The Gaucho" at the Liberty.

The Capitol had a better than fair week with Lon Chaney's "London After Midnight" as the main attraction. On the other hand the Roxy dropped considerably behind its standard pace with a Fashion Revue on the stage and "Ladies Must Dress" on the screen. The Strand was badly hit by the seasonal depression, though the picture "French Dressing" won favorable comment and boasts a cast of good name strength for the picture-goers. The Colony neither thrived nor suffered during the week with "The Shield of Honor" as the screen attraction. The Rivoli run of "Sorrell and Son" closed with Friday's matinee and the returns for the week were much better than final weeks with the added handicap of a curtailed schedule usually are.

"The Gorilla," though really a second-run for Broadway, did nicely at the Cameo. The others on the Broadway list, all long runs, were less fortunate in luring to the box office a public not concentrating on shopping and such-like holiday occupations. These are "The Student Prince" at the Astor, which continues the tapering-off tendencies which it first exhibited some weeks back; "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Central, and "Sunrise," which bravely carries on without much encouragement from the theatregoers at the Times Square. The Murnau production continues to enjoy the cheers of some of the newspaper reviewers in the pieces they write for their Sunday columns. But the box office indicates that the god to whom these prayers are fervently offered sits cold and stoney in his cloistered shrine, the while bestowing his favors upon cinema children who from the standpoint of the reviewers are far less worthy.

The real sensations of the Street are "Wings" and "Love." The latter is making the Embassy tickets a commodity of profitable trade for the speculators. "Wings" has completed its nineteenth week with an average weekly take of better than capacity for the house. According to A. Griffith Grey, in charge of the Paramount road show department, the picture has averaged $400 a week above house capacity. His statement further details to include the information that more than 7,000 persons have paid $1.10 to stand and see the picture since its opening last August 12th. The picture celebrated its 250th showing at the Criterion on Thursday of this week.

Chicago

BUSINESS held up fairly well during the week ending December 17th, in spite of the near approach of the Christmas holiday and the extreme cold.

The Chicago Theatre had a normal week with "Get Your Man" as the screen feature, elaborate stage show "Florida," and its usual big musical numbers. "Jesse James" held over at the Roosevelt and continued to do good business, while at McVickers, the other long run loop house, "Lovelorn" had a fair attendance. At the Oriental, the strong feature picture, "City Gone Wild" and Mark Fischer with Paul Ash's Gang in "Land of Cotton" went over big. "Wings" roadshowing at the Erlanger, with only eight days more to go, had a fairly satisfactory week, and "The Loves of Carmen" with Fox Movietone News, continued to pull well at the Monroe. "The Jazz Singer" at the Garrick, had another satisfactory week.

"Two Arabian Knights" was the screen feature at both the Uptown and the Tivoli, both houses enjoying average business with the Tivoli having a little the best of it, owing to the presence on the stage of Sophie Tucker. "Dress Parade" was the feature picture and Verne Buck and his boys headed the stage bill at the Sheridan, attendance being fair. The Granada featured "Good Time Charley" on the screen, as did the Marbro, both houses having their usual big stage shows and Vitaphone as an added attraction, and box office reports were satisfactory.

On the southside, "Dress Parade" was on view at the Avalon where Buddy Fischer headed the stage show and Vitaphone rounded out the program, and business was good. The Capitol's screen attraction was "The Silver Slave," Husk O'Hare in "The Minstrel Show" and Vitaphone, also being on the program, the combination playing to fair attendance.

Seattle

THE Fifth Avenue Theatre last week, with "Get Your Man" on the screen and Fanchon-Marco's magnificent "Moonlit Waters" as a stage attraction, set a pace that far outdistanced all other local attractions and piled up the biggest gross that the house has had in several months. The Bow picture pleased every patron, and the surrounding stage show, film shorts and orchestral features put the bill over to a total gross of about $18,500. It was a great box office show from every standpoint.

Second in the running came the Blue Mouse Theatre, playing to packed houses at every performance. The primary reason was the first Northwest showing of the Fox-Case Movietone, with the reception of Lindbergh chosen as the opening subject. It was very enthusiastically received, and will be a regular weekly feature at this house. The bill was rounded out by three or four average Vitaphone subjects, featuring several operatic stars, and a feature picture, "By Whose Hand?" which was not very well liked. Despite the feature picture, the bill went over strong, and business was very big for the week.

At the United Artists Theatre, the second week of "Ben Hur" at popular prices continued to play to big houses, following close on the heels of the opening week, which was a record-breaker. The film finished its fourteen-day run to a total gross of around $24,500, and set a mark that will be difficult to beat in future weeks. Business very strong.

"Les Miserables" at the Columbia Theatre finished its second week to average houses, following a first week that was decidedly above the usual level. The total receipts for the two weeks were very good, and the film was well liked by a majority of the Columbia patrons.

"The Open Range" at the Liberty Theatre was a fair box office attraction, but too many pictures of this same type have minimized the box office appeal to a very noticeable extent. Business at this house was only fair for the week's run.

At the Embassy Theatre, "Backstage" as a film feature and a few specialty acts on the stage were combined to bring average business. This house has a rather consistent patronage that keeps the week's average well up in the running with nearly every attraction.

The vaudeville houses shared average films this week, with "Almost Human" at the Orpheum and "Very Confidential" at the Pantages. Neither picture had any great box office strength, and the vaudeville programs put the bills over, with the Orpheum getting away to a bigger gross by far than the other house. McIntyre and Heath as Pantages headliners were not very strong money attractions. Both houses did average business.

Pittsburgh

THE business last week proved that there is no such thing as a pre-Xmas slump, IF you give the public what they want. Four of the down-town houses did above normal business, the rest doing average, and at that the weather was bad four days of the six playing days in the week.

Comparatively, the Grand with "Underworld" did the best business. They had a midnight show and turned away over 2,000 people, getting front page stories and all in all had one of the best weeks this house had in years. The new Penn played "Tea For Three" but Paul Whiteman and his Orchestra was the main draw. The Penn has only been open since Labor Day and this week figures as one of the four best since that date. The Davis having "Two Girls Wanted" starring Janet Gaynor drew very big, as the Gaynor girl was the talk of the town last week in "Seventh Heaven" and she got herself a big following in this town since then. The Aldine, showing "The Understanding Heart," having the backing of the Hearst paper with the aid of their unusual publicity and the appearance of a local boy, Neville Fleeson, on the vaudeville bill, turned in a nice gross.

"Les Miserables" at the Cameo for a third week was obviously a forced run, as Universal owns the house. Olympic running "The Missing Link" with Vitaphone ran no lower than usual, as did the State with a Zane Grey Paramount Western.

The Olympic Theatre had "The Covered Wagon" booked for a week in addition to Vitaphone attractions. Usual advertising was given the attraction and on the third day (Wednesday) in the afternoon the picture was taken out with Leatrice Joy in "The Angel of Broadway" substituted, Vitaphone bill staying as is. This is the first time this has happened in Pittsburgh since the days of modern theatre exhibition.

Cleveland

CONSIDERING the fact that Christmas was only two weeks off, the theatres managed to pull through with pretty good results. While none of them approached any records, still, the big pictures did average business.

"Sorrell and Son" in its second week at the Stillman, continued to fill the house consistently and is being held a third week. This is unanimously agreed to be a screen classic. Keith's Palace had a pretty good week with Bebe Daniels in "She's A Sheik," with Henry Santrey and his orchestra as the headline vaudeville attraction. The Allen had about an average week. The feature was "Get Your Man," a typical Clara Bow picture. "One Round Hogan" brought satisfactory returns to the State. Also it got good newspaper notices, as being a good prize fight story. "Les Miserables" at Reade's Hippodrome, was accorded all due honor by the critics, but only fair support by the public. Probably because it was not put on with a lot of fanfare. But those who saw the picture, liked it. "Good Time Charley," labelled by connoisseurs as an above-the-average melodrama, suffered from competition with Santa Claus. Although a good audience picture, it didn't have a chance to prove its possibilities. Keith's East 105th St. reports fair business with "The Red Raiders," exciting tale of the plains as the feature attraction.

While the first run houses noticed a decided dropping off of business just before Christmas, it is the neighborhood houses which are suffering the most. These houses report business is at a standstill.

Legitimate theatres were offering Mrs. Fiske, Otis Skinner and Henrietta Crossman in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" at the Ohio; "Chicago" at the Hanna; "Kongo" at the Colonial; "Hamlet" at the Little Theatre, and "The Gold Diggers" at the Alhambra.

Los Angeles

THE Metropolitan offered "Man, Woman and Sin" on the screen and Rube Wolf and his orchestra. Normal business was the report.

"The Garden of Allah" proved a decidedly big drawing card for the week at Loew's State. The second week of "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" continued to bring in the same good business as the preceding week. "Old San Francisco" with the Vitaphone was a fairly strong attraction at the Criterion in its third week and played to fair houses. "Silk Stockings" drew well at the Boulevard. Gene Morgan and his band of music-makers are favorites with the customers. "The Gaucho" in its seventh week at Grauman's Chinese found a liberal patronage. Publicity circulated to the effect that "it won't be long now" in increasing the box office receipts.

"Sunrise" at Carthay Circle has exceeded even the hopes of Fred Miller, director of the house. He predicts new box office records.

Baltimore

DUE to the approaching Christmas holiday season with people out in force doing their shopping, patronage at the moving picture theatres has fallen off as usual for this time of the year in Baltimore; the only two first-run theatres doing a good business were Loew's Valencia with Mary Pickford appearing on the screen in "My Best Girl," and the Little Theatre, where "Tartuffe the Hypocrite," starring Emil Jannings, proved a very good drawing card for the opening week of that 250 seat house operated by the Motion Picture Guild.

"By Whose Hand?", with Ricardo Cortez, proved a good drawing card at Keith's Hippodrome with five acts of Keith family time vaudeville. "The Thirteenth Hour," featuring Lionel Barrymore, went over fairly well at Loew's Century with Sam Robbins' Baltimoreans on the same bill but the take-in did not come up to what was expected. The audiences regarded the picture more as a burlesque than as a mystery film. "The Forbidden Woman," with Jetta Goudal, Joseph Schildkraut and Victor Varconi, proved a fair drawing card at the New Theatre with a stage prologue including a dancing team.

The patronage at Warners' Metropolitan with "A Reno Divorce" was poor and again the fact has been brought out that the public does not seem to care for the Vitaphone accompaniment for music only. At the 4,000 seated Stanley, "Rose of the Golden West," with Mary Astor, Gilbert Roland, went over less than fair with a large company being seen in an atmospheric prologue featuring Henri Margo and Helene Beth. Mary Astor was also in "No Place To Go," at the Rivoli and business throughout the week there was poor. Evans brothers and Belmont were on the program also.

Minneapolis

ANOTHER big snow storm hit Minneapolis last week, and while it did not reach the proportions of the blizzard of the previous week, it slowed up traffic pretty badly, and people hesitated to stir out unless it was necessary. The theatres, as a result, felt the effects of the storm on a lowered attendance for the better part of two days. The week as a whole was just an ordinary one with no specially big attractions to keep the ticket girls busy.

"The Garden of Allah" did an average business at the Garrick, but wasn't good enough for a second week. The State reported "just a good business" for the week, with a program including Marion Davies in "The Fair Coed" and a big stage band revue featuring Moss and Frye. Pola Negri in "The Woman on Trial" did only a fair business at the Strand, while "Man Crazy" played to ordinary crowds at the Lyric. The Hennepin-Orpheum showed "The Harvester" and of course this picture attracted a lot of Gene Stratton Porter fans. Pantages gave "Publicity Madness" with Edmund Lowe the benefit of some good advertising, booking it up with Lowe's performance in "What Price Glory," and the film proved a good attraction.

"The Clown" came into the Seventh street theatre, and seemed to prove that circus films are still popular. "Is Your Daughter Safe?", the sensational sex film, returned to the city, this time at the Garden, and drew fair crowds at a reduced price.

The neighborhood houses fared no better than the down town theatres, and experienced just an average, or slightly worse than average week. Among the pictures shown at the Rialto, Loring, Lagoon and Lyndale were "Breakfast at Sunrise," "Metropolis," and "White Flannels."

Kansas City

THE hustle and bustle of Christmas shopping took its toll at the box office of most first run houses in Kansas City this week and attendance was below normal.

At Loew's Midland "Body and Soul" played to fair crowds only, while the second week of "Ben Hur" at the Newman was greeted by poor attendance. At the Mainstreet "The Wreck of the Hesperus" played to about normal business, but "Good Time Charley" fell below the normal mark at the Globe. A double program, "The Immigrant" and "Stranded" at the Liberty played to fair crowds, as did "Soft Cushions" at the Royal.

"Pajamas" at the Pantages did not draw up to expectancy, which also holds true of "Once and Forever" at the Capitol.

There virtually was no effort at any special exploitation. The Capitol continued its unusually large newspaper advertising campaign, while the other theatres maintained their usual advertising policies.

Boston

THE usual pre-Christmas dullness in box office receipts was manifest throughout the week although in some instances attendance did not fall off to the extent expected. By New Year's day it is expected that the upward swing will commence again and the first week in January should bring back full attendances at all houses. At any rate, the theatres are all planning special attractions for New Year's week.

The mystery film, "The Thirteenth Hour" at the Loew's State was one of the bright spots in the week, drawing exceptionally good houses. Metropolitan Theatre is showing "Serenade" to good houses. Menjou's films have predominated at the Metropolitan this season. Transient crowds fill the Metropolitan when the regular patrons take up other activities so that holiday seasons affect but little the box office returns.

Loew's Orpheum is showing "The Fair Co-Ed" with five acts of vaudeville; "Judgment of the Hills" is the offering at the Scollay Square Olympia; "Angel of Broadway" heads the bill at the twin houses, Modern and Beacon Theatres, with "Women's Wears" as companion picture. At Keith-Albee's Boston "The Spotlight" heads the bill and "Spring Fever" is being served at the Bowdoin Square. "Figures Don't Lie" and "The City Gone Wild" head the split week programs at the Fenway with "Judgment of the Hills" and "High School Hero" as associate films. "Shanghai Bound' is the Exeter's feature while "Smilin' Through" heads the Lancaster bill.

Atlanta

ALTHOUGH Atlanta theatres have for the past few weeks taken a noticeable slump downward, business showed up fairly well last week.

The Rialto headed the list with a broken record playing "Motherhood," the entire week. In fact, the box-office yawned so amazingly that the management could not turn it loose and "Motherhood" is to be seen three extra days this week. Quite a boom for the Rialto, which certainly needs it.

Next in line comes "Sorrell and Son," shown at the Howard. It received wide applause from all local critics and patrons seeing it. Yet, the box-office returns did not reach the peak they should have.

The Capitol played to a good house with Laura LaPlante in "Silk Stockings." Keith's Georgia had fair attendance to see "Two Flaming Youths." Lon Chaney in "London After Midnight" drew only a fair crowd, despite the fact that the picture stacked up and was liked. "The Girl From Rio" with Carmel Myers was featured at the Metropolitan, bringing small houses. The Tudor, with "Yours to Command" and "Galloping Fury," fell down a bit. "Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl" and four second runs proved only fair for the New Alamo. However, this theatre has for some time been the most successful, all considered, of Atlanta theatres. Its location in the heart of the business district is admirable to draw tired shoppers.

Milwaukee

AT some Milwaukee theatres this week managers reported unusually good business, and at others things were rather dull, so all in all this was probably what could be called an average week. The week started with near zero weather and ended with near zero weather, with a few days of very warm weather between, none of it very conducive to good theatre business.

The Wisconsin offered a very good stage presentation together with "London After Midnight," a combination which made it the most popular theatre last week. Another picture of much the same type, "The Wizard," played at the Orpheum, where it was apparently very well enjoyed by patrons. "The 13th Juror," at the Alhambra, did not make much of a bid for popularity, and business here was a bit below par. The Garden enjoyed a good week with "The Gingham Girl" and Mme. Schumann-Heink on the Vitaphone. "In Old Kentucky," at the Merrill, was just fair as a business getter. "The Valley of Giants" at the Strand, drew fair houses.

Outlying theatres found this a very dull week. Business was slow in spite of good programs. "Now We're in the Air" was featured at four Saxe houses, Garfield, Modjeska, Uptown and Tower, where, generally, business was just fair. "The Garden of Allah" brought in good results at the Oriental. "Old San Francisco" played at the Colonial, Downer and Venetian to fair houses.

Salt Lake City

THE cold weather experienced in Salt Lake and the surrounding country of late has been an aid toward good theatre business, even though the Christmas season is on, which slightly affects the motion picture patronage.

The Capitol Theatre, under the management of George E. Carpenter, just closed a very successful week during their showing of Milton Sills in "The Valley of the Giants." The Fanchon and Marco stage presentation also was well received, being billed as "The Dance Demons."

The feature picture shown at the Pantages Theatre this week was "Annie Laurie," which fared moderately well. An exceptional amount of exploitation was used in connection with this production.

Reginald Denny in "That's My Daddy" went over good at the American Theatre. "The Gorilla" was a big drawing card at the Paramount Empress, where fairly good crowds were had throughout the entire week. "Pajamas," with Olive Borden and Lawrence Grey, brought in excellent results at the Victory Theatre. Vera Reynolds and Rudolph Schildkraut, in "The Main Event," played to very satisfactory business at the Gem. The Rialto Theatre was packed during the second showing of Clara Bow in "Hula."

Central Penn.

NOTWITHSTANDING generally strong attractions in the leading first-run theatres of Harrisburg during the week of December 12, the influence of Christmas shopping as a counter attraction was quite noticeable in reducing box office receipts. Managers said attendances were below normal, but hastened to add that such is usually to be expected in the second week before Christmas.

It's fairer, perhaps, to judge the pictures by what those persons said who actually saw them, rather than by the size of the audiences. At Loew's Regent the main film was Lionel Barrymore in "Body and Soul" and the verdict of audiences throughout the week was that it was an exceptional picture.

"Old San Francisco," which was featured in the Colonial theatre, with Dolores Costello, generally pleased those who saw it. Saturday's receipts were stimulated somewhat by a special children's Christmas matinee, held in the morning, in cooperation with the Harrisburg Story Tellers' League.

The offering at the Victoria was Richard Dix in "The Gay Defender," a sprightly play that deserved better support than it got in competition with Santa Claus. Jack Luden, starring in "Shootin' Irons," was the film attraction at the State the last half the week, and showed a fair amount of pulling power.

The Broad Street, a neighborhood house, advertised a first-run showing in Harrisburg of Fred Thomson and his horse, Silver King in "Don Mike," which had an appeal, especially for men and boys who are fond of Westerns. The Grand showed Carol Dempster in "Sorrows of Satan," with some degree of financial success.

Tampa

THE stage presentation assisted quite materially in the draw at the Tampa this week. Lon Chaney, featured in "London After Midnight" for the first half, is a sure-fire drawing card in Tampa. Anyhow, the combined bill of pictures and Alla Axiom, a psychic expert, packed 'em in. For the last half "The Fighting Eagle" was featured, with the psychic man putting over some publicity stunts, so this end of the week went over big too.

The Victory also used a stage presentation, an Oriental dancing number, which was presented in connection with "The Garden of Allah," which was featured the first four days. The show was fine and seemed to please, but it failed to develop a draw, and business was just about average. For the last half "The Gay Retreat" and five acts of vaudeville pulled the usual big business.

"Very Confidential" opened the week for the Strand, and did very good. "Man Crazy" went over nicely for three days and "Two Flaming Youths" drew excellently for the two days' showing. The 'Franklin used Harry Langdon in "Three's a Crowd" as a mid-week feature, expecting he'd do better than average business, but he didn't. Publicity Madness" and "Painted Ponies" both drew average.

The Rivoli, in Ybor City, the Latin portion of Tampa, uses second runs usually, but bought "Moon of Israel" for the first run in Tampa. They billed it big, using 25 billboards, card, heralds and bally-hoo. The picture has titles both in Spanish and English, which made a hit with the Latin people, and the picture drew excellent business.

Albany and Troy

CONSIDERING the season of the year, for there is always a let down in business just before the Christmas holidays, the motion picture theatres of Albany and Troy, did what the owners and managers termed last week a fairly good business. For instance, "Hard Boiled Haggerty" at the Leland in Albany, ran to receipts just about equal to the corresponding week a year ago. This meant that business during the week was fairly good. There was a slump in all theatres on Friday night, due the weather conditions. At the Mark Strand in Albany, Clara Bow in "Get Your Man" filled the theatre each evening, but there was no stand out business and, in fact, none was expected. This picture appeared to please, and was coupled with Vitaphone presentations. Business was normal last week at the Clinton Square Theatre in Albany, with "Dance Magic." The same characterization can be made of "The Gay Defender," which ran for the week at the Mark Ritz in Albany.

In the neighboring city of Troy, "Rose of the Golden West" appeared to please, but did not posses sufficient drawing power to fill the house. The Lincoln ran well with "Man Crazy."

Exhibitors in the two cities do not expect any great amount of business now until after New Year's. Several of the big first-run houses are already making plans for midnight shows. Neighborhood houses report business as being off, and attribute this to the season rather than to the attractions that have been booked.

Ottawa

MERCHANTS of Ottawa, Ontario, were complaining that business during the week of December 12 was not up to the mark with Christmas in the offing, but Ottawa theatres were not suffering for want of patronage. Big hockey crowds made a dint in attendance on a couple of nights but otherwise it was good sailing.

"She's a Sheik," starring Bebe Daniels, proved a better picture than people thought it would be and as a result B. F. Keith's box office was busy all through.

For real war stuff with spectacular action and inside dope on the fighting, the British feature "The Somme" at the Regent Theatre carried off the honors. This is one of the best that the British have turned out and is equal to "Zeebrugge" for war thrills.

Clara Bow in "Hula" would have been all right at the Imperial except for the fact that the Ontario film censor saw it first. There were wide open spaces in the story and many of the hula quivers were left to the imagination. The attendance was quite fair, nevertheless.

"American Beauty," starring Billie Dove, attracted the regulars to the Centre Theatre and it proved to be standard entertainment for them. But there was little comment around town on this picture.

Two theatres over in Hull did good business with pictures that had previously pleased fans at the Centre Theatre, Ottawa. These were "The Chinese Parrot" at the Laurier Theatre and "Breakfast at Sunrise" at the Eden Theatre. The last named feature was particularly effective.

San Francisco

THE past week at the several local motion picture houses was a fairly good one and in two instances the receipts were especially good. The cold weather filled many theatres, both first and second run, as did one rainy night.

The Granada Theatre was the leading one partly because of the picture "The Gay Defender" and partly because Will King, prominent in this city, appeared on the stage with sixteen girls in a Fanchon & Marco production entitled "Revusical Comedy." The California Theatre did exceptionally well with "Sorrell and Son." Because of the good receipts, the picture will be held over.

"The King of Kings" played for the last time at the Columbia theatre. It did not do as well as anticipated and for that reason was not held over for a fourth week. Both ministers and rabbis of this city criticized the picture. "Now We're in The Air," because of its popularity, was held over for a fourth week at the St. Francis Theatre and continued to draw crowds, this comedy making all laugh.

The Golden Gate Theatre did very well with its acts of vaudeville and the picture, "The Girl in The Pullman." In the Union Square Theatre, the box office reported good business, attributing it to the picture "Galloping Fury," and five acts of vaudeville. The Cameo Theatre did well with "The Cherokee Kid." The Embassy reported good business with "The Missing Link" and Al Jolson and others on the Vitaphone.

Des Moines

AT the Des Moines the attraction last week was "London After Midnight" which was somewhat off in attendance as was expected in the pre-holiday slump. It did not do even as well as was expected, however. At the Capitol the new stage director, Paul Spor, received more attention but business here was also not so good with Richard Dix in "The Gay Defender." At the Strand "Jesse James" took a big flop as it has done in several places over the state while "The Woman on Trial" finished the half week with a fair average. "The Passion Play," a State Rights picture which has been booked by a number of Iowa exhibitors has been reported as taking a big flop in every case.

With the finishing of "Burning Up Broadway," exactly one-half of the Sterling program for this season has now been finished. Four are still to be made.

Fox Films will start construction shortly on a large motion picture stage at Fox Hills. The structure will cost $100,000 to build and equip.

Percy Heath, writer of original stories, has renewed his contract with Paramount.

Harmon Weight has been signed by Pathe-De Mille to direct "Midnight Madness." Jacqueline Logan has the starring part.

The cast of "A Girl in Every Port," the Fox production, put out to sea recently to sail until a storm was encountered, when storm sequences were then taken.

Filming of "Red Hair," Clara Bow's next Paramount film, began last Monday at the Paramount Hollywood studio, with Lane Candler playing opposite the star. Thelma Todd has the ingenue role.

Lloyd Hamilton will be a football player in his next Educational comedy, which Norman Taurog will direct.

"Walking Back," a Pathe-De Mille feature starring Vera Reynolds, was started in production last Monday at the Pathe-De Mille studio. H. B. Warner, Arthur Lake and Ivan Lebedeff have supporting roles.

Al Hustwick will do the titles for "Under the Tonto Rim," a Paramount Western co-featuring Richard Arlen and Mary Brian.

Tod Browning, director for M-G-M and responsible for practically all of Lon Chaney's pictures, has signed a new long-term contract with M-G-M. When he has finished "The Big City" he will leave for a three-months' vacation in Europe.

Nancy Carroll and Jack Luden, players, and Owen Davis, the playwright, have signed new contracts with Paramount, the latter to write screen plays exclusively for Paramount for the next 18 months.

Sidney Jarvis has joined the cast of M-G-M's feature comedy formerly titled "Circus Rookies," but now definitely named "Monkey Business."

Eddie Phillips will attempt something different from his villainous roles in "Honeymoon Flats," Universal's forthcoming production. Jackie Coombs, the kid actor, will also play a part.

Jack Pratt is the latest player to join the cast of "The Cossacks," the M-G-M John Gilbert vehicle, which George Hill is directing.

Chester Franklin, M-G-M director, will direct George K. Arthur and Karl Dane in a boob detective story after that team has completed "Monkey Business." F. Hugh Herbert is now writing the scenario.

"Marry the Girl," an original by Norman Houston, will be the fifth production to be made by Sterling on the Coast this season. The picture goes into work in the middle of January.

James Wong Howe, the Chinese cameraman, has been engaged by M-G-M to photograph Lon Chaney's next vehicle, "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." Howe has worked before with Herbert Brenon, who will direct the picture.

Christy Cabanne has begun work on a special production for Tiffany-Stahl Productions. The name of the new picture has not been announced. Its leading roles will be in the hands of Antonio Moreno and Claire Windsor. Eddie Gribbon, Sally Rand and Ray Haller will appear in the support.

Ford Sterling has recovered from his recent injuries and is back again on the Paramount lots making "Sporting Goods" with Richard Dix.

"Sweeties" is the newest Christie comedy for Paramount, starring Bobby Vernon, to go into production. Frances Lee is the girl lead.

Melbourne McDowell has been assigned the role of the uncle in Paramount's feature comedy, "Feel My Pulse."

Estelle Bradley has the girl role in "Racing Mad," a new Educational comedy featuring Al. St. John.

Emmett King has been added to the cast of the Pathe-De Mille picture, "Midnight Madness." George Webster has been made assistant director to Harmon Weight. Additions to the cast include James Bradburry, Sr., Clarence Burton and Virginia Sale, a sister of "Chic" Sale.

Tullio Carminati has been cast for a role in "The Patriot," Emil Jannings' new Paramount vehicle. Vera Veronina will also have a featured role.

Leila Hyams will again play in a Fox Films production through the courtesy of Warner Bros. This time she will portray a role in "The Red Dancer of Moscow."

Two of the largest sets ever constructed at the Educational studio are being used in Lupino Lane's new comedy—which goes back to the days of the Caesars for its laughs.

William Powell, Arthur Housman, Mary Brian, Richard and Albert Roccardi have all been cast for roles in the new Berry-Hatton comedy for Paramount, "Partners in Crime."

Anders Randolf has been added to the cast of Warner Bros.' "The City of Sin," now under way at the Warner studio.

Hick Cogley has been assigned the role of Father Whalen in Paramount's "Abie's Irish Rose."

A new title has been chosen for "The Fruit of Divorce," the Gotham production co-starring Percy Marmont and May Busch, "'Frisco Nights." It is the first time that a change has been made in one of its pictures, says Gotham.

Billy Platt, midget, has been cast for a role in "Tillie's Punctured Romance," the Paramount Christie production in which W. C. Fields, Chester Conklin and Louise Fazenda have important parts.

Joseph Jackson, scenarist, has signed a new contract with Warner Bros. He joined the company three months ago and has worked on "Powder My Back."

George Marion, Jr., will title "The Legion of the Condemned," Paramount's special about airmen, which co-features Gary Cooper and Fay Wray.

No one particular character dominates the rest in the Gotham production, "Bare Knees," on which Erle C. Kenton will shortly start camera work. There are six featured players, Virginia Lee Corbin, Forrest Stanley, Jane Winton, Johnny Walker, Maude Fultin and Donald Keith. The place of honor in the advertising matter will be awarded to the player giving the best performance, it is said.

Fred Humes, Western actor, will enact the role of a gorilla in "Circus Rookies," a new M-G-M comedy number.

Warner Bros. have changed the title of "The City of Sin" to "The Crimson City."

Larry Kent will be the leading man in Billie Dove's "The Heart of a Follies Girl," to be directed by John Francis Dillon for First National.

Viola Richard has the leading feminine role in Hal Roach's next comedy for M-G-M starring Max Davidson, as yet untitled. Hal Yates is directing.

In "The Godless Girl," Cecil B. De Mille's next personally directed picture for Pathe, will be Eddie Quillan.

Mary Brian will have the feminine lead in "Partners in Crime," Paramount's new comedy featuring the comedy team of Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton.

With Charley Chase in his new Hal Roach comedy for M-G-M are Priscilla Dean and Edna Marion. "All for Nothing" is the title of the comedian's vehicle, which James Parrott directed.

Paramount's "The Last Command," featuring Emil Jannings, will be titled by Herman Mankiewicz.

John Lancaster, former manager for film stars, has been made assistant to Louis B. Mayer at the M-G-M studio. He will first reorganize the casting department, due to the resignation of Clifford Robertson, who has been succeeded by Fred Beers.

"Pass the Gravy" is the title of a new Hal Roach comedy for M-G-M starring Max Davidson.

In Charley Chase's new comedy for M-G-M, the 75-piece 160th Infantry Band has been supplying music as well as color, appearing in red uniforms as part of the political rally which occurs when Charley runs for mayor.

Ken Maynard's next Western for First National, "The Canyon of Adventure," is now in production, with Albert Rogell directing. Virginia Browne Faire has the chief feminine role and Tarzan, the horse. Eric Mayne, Theodore Lorch, Bill Franey have featured roles.

Lupino Lane is making another costume comedy at the Educational studio, this time appearing as a gladiator in the days of Nero. Anita Garvin has a Cleopatra-like vamp role, and Wallace Lupino has an important role in the support.

"Flying Romance," is the title chosen by First National for the picture now in work with Charlie Murray and George Sidney. It went into work under the title of "Down Went McGinty," and is now nearing completion under Mervyn Le Roy's direction.

Richard Dix' "Sporting Goods" (formerly titled "The Traveling Salesman"), was finished at the Hollywood studio last Saturday. It was originally planned to have the Paramount star next appear in "Oxford," but owing to the weather "Woman Trap" will be his next vehicle. Gregory La Cava to direct.

Police Picture Will Entertain

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

BESIDES the excellent exploitation possibilities which always go hand in hand with Emory Johnson's pictures this, his latest, has some bang-up action and timely airplane material that will score with the average audience. No other director in this business has had more experience with pictures of this kind and Mr. Johnson has not failed to add an interesting yarn to the glorification of this country's police departments. The fire laddies also get an opportunity to show their stuff. The work of the principals, Neil Hamilton, Ralph Lewis, Dorothy Gulliver and Nigel Barrie is all that could be asked for.

There's a trace of the pathetic old doorman of "The Last Laugh" when Dan McDowell, (Ralph Lewis) in answer to a retiring order, turns in his shield and returns to his family without the familiar decoration on his uniform. But his son Jack (Neil Hamilton) is destined to carry on his father's honorable career as the department's first air officer. This event is celebrated with a review of the force.

Old Dan is somewhat mollified by a later appointment as night watchman for O'Day's big jewelry shop, where Chandler (Nigel Barrie), a trusted executive, is the head of a gang engaged in the novel scheme of stealing the firm's jewels and selling them back.

In the meantime, a romance has developed between Gwen O'Day and young Jack McDowell. The latter finally locates the thieves' rendezvous and Chandler, accused, plans a getaway via airplane. Not, however, before laying plans to blow up the store where Gwen is locked up in a vault. The story comes to a satisfactory close with a thrilling air chase.

Drawing Power: Good for all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Excellent; police, fire departments and airplane material. Also good cast.

THEME: The unsung heroes of the police department. Romance and thievery interwoven.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Release date, Feb. 19, 1928. Length, 6,173 feet. Cast: Neil Hamilton, Dorothy Gulliver, Ralph Lewis, Nigel Barrie, Claire MacDowell, Fred Esmelton. Thelma Todd and David Kirby. Director, Emory Johnson. Story, Emilie Johnson.

Land of the Lawless

A Good Western

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

ANOTHER Western star—Jack Padjan —joins the Pathe rodeo of cowboy heroes and makes himself quite at home in this, his first release under the banner of the rooster. A pleasant-faced chap, he can ride a horse with all the hardy abandon that shows up so well in the numerous shots of flying horsemen astride galloping steeds. In his role of a ranger after a gang of murderous cutthroats he bunks up against some stiff opposition in the person of Tom Santachi, very convincing as a cold-blooded lecherous killer. It would not be a doubtful assertion to say that Santschi very nearly runs away with the picture. There is one long sequence in the home of the girl which is entirely dominated by his figure.

The plot is very simple. Baldly stated it is a story of a conflict between the killer and the ranger who is out to capture him. The killer captures the officer and while he is under guard goes to the home of the girl and her father in dread of the evil name he bears. He is a menacing figure when they first lay their eyes on them and he grows more threatening as time goes by; he is swaggering, confident and assured of his power and they tremble and are helpless to defend themselves from his advances.

In the crisis as presented in the picture all help depends on the hero. You are assured that he will arrive in time to save the girl and her father from the drunken brute.

Drawing Power: Suitable fare for the numerous Western clientele at the neighborhood and second run houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up Santschi and new star.

THEME: Ranger captures killer, who threatens the safety of girl and her father. He wins the girl after he has demonstrated his ability to protect her.

Distributed by Pathe. Released, Dec. 25, 1927. The Cast: Jack Padjan, Tom Santschi, Jos. W. Rickson, Chas. Clary, Vivian Winston, Frank Clark, Duke R. Lee, Otto Fries. Story by W. Smith. Adaptation by P. Fejoe. Photography by Leon Shamroy. Director, Thomas Buckingham.

Roaring Broncs

Action and Pep in Western Vehicle

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

BUFFALO BILL, JR., that confident young man who is one of the best of the heroic Westerners performing in Lester F. Scott, Jr.'s five-reelers for Pathe, has a fairly good piece in "Roaring Broncs," which boasts enough actionful shots and complications to give it a place in the category of entertaining Westerns. The star rides a motorcycle in this one and brings into play a tractor to subdue the villains, whom he has caught red-handed in the act of smuggling Chinamen over the border. Often the hero cuts a different figure in various parts of the film, although the plot, stripped to its bare essentials, is basically the same as that found in the usual Western.

Seeking the smugglers Bill takes a job at the ranch of Ann McKay, and, of course, becomes interested in her. He has a rival in the person of George Magrill, the son of the other partner of the ranch, who is in league with the smugglers. When the villains are unmasked they flee in a car with Bill after them on his motorcycle. Tackling them single-handed he is overpowered and manacled, while they take refuge in an empty shack to defend themselves from Bill's friends. Handicapped as he is with the manacles, Bill nevertheless climbs aboard a nearby tractor and, dodging the fire of the villains, demolishes their refuge with the tank, leaving them helpless in the debris.

Drawing Power: Okay for Western fans. Exploitation Angles: Display a motorcycle which the star uses instead of the customary horse.

THEME: Western drama. Member of U. S. Border Patrol joins girl's ranch where he discovers the men responsible for the smuggling of Chinese over border. He wins the girl after catching the smugglers red-handed.

Produced by Action Pictures, Inc. Distributed by Pathe. Released, December 4, 1927. Length, 4,375 feet. The Cast: Buffalo Bill, Jr., Ann McKay, Harry Todd, Lafe McKee and Geo. Magrill. Story by F. L. Inghram. Photography by Ray Reiss. Director, Richard Thorpe.

Laddie, Be Good

Doesn't Stand Up Any Too Well

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS Bill Cody vehicle endeavors to experiment successfully with the usual formula for the Western films and does not get very far with the idea. It's more of a type of burlesque on the Western theme which would depend on its central figure for any degree of plausibility. The idea is to have the hero leave his Western ranch to go to live in a mansion in the big city where he proceeds to change everything to suit his cowboy tastes. Cody's efforts to be a forceful personality—a mixture of an athlete and a comedian—are rather weak, to our way of thinking. His little mannerisms often do not carry home and his gambols with his city-bred neighbors will not, we think, provoke the laughter the producers aimed for. As an attraction for a children's matinee the picture would probably create some excitement, but as for going over with a bang for the more adult audiences the prospects appear few.

Next door to Cody's mansion lives a girl and her father. There is a feud existing between the latter and the hero and this, of course, stands in the way of the romance which blossoms up between the cowboy and the girl. The father is adamant in his refusal to have anything to do with the cowman, whose grounds he covets, hiring an unscrupulous lawyer to secure them for him.

After several escapades with the police (who object to the presence of a steer at Cody's housewarming) and the lawyer's gang of thugs, Cody convinces the girl's obstinate father that he is a worthwhile sort of chap.

Drawing Power: Weak. Exploitation Angles: You might make use of whip. The star uses this weapon instead of a gun.

THEME: Western comedy drama of cowpuncher who comes to live in big city and his subsequent difficulties with his neighbor whose daughter he finally wins.

Produced by Bill Cody Productions. Distributed by Pathe. Released, January 1, 1928. Length, 4,155 feet. Cast: Bill Cody, Rose Blossom, George Bunny, Henry Herbert, Fred Gambold. Story by Bill Cody. Continuity by L. V. Jefferson. Photography by Arthur Reeves. Director, Ben Cohen

The Devil Dancer

Gilda Puts It Over

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

GILDA GRAY is still in the Far East insofar as the screen is concerned, although she has moved from the South Seas to take up temporary residence in Tibet. And the change has done her good. She exudes personality as an actress and as a dancer—and her versatility is well marked in her execution of the Nautsch dances. As the star makes personal appearances with the picture—that is through the key cities—it should do business. And what about the title? It suggests romance and adventure to the folks who never stray very far from home.

The picture has something of a hackneyed plot which builds in a more or less mechanical fashion. The central figure is a white girl who has been reared in a Himalayan monastery—and the action develops around her ultimate rescue by an adventurous Englishman. There is counterplot which has to do with the hero's sister registering much caste. The latter is ashamed of the dancer's background and manners. One of her gestures frowned upon is that of sticking out her tongue whenever she extends a greeting.

It isn't so real. Indeed, it is truly movieish, but it is colorful and staged with a discriminate eye for atmosphere. The sets are elaborate and money has been expended toward giving it the correct ferver of the Tibet country. The temple sets are especially fine. Miss Gray makes a vivid heroine, and Clive Brook gives an excellent account of himself as the English lover. Good character acting is contributed by Sojin and Michael Vavitch.

Drawing Power: Star should get them. Suitable for all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Put on dance prologue suggestive of picture. Garb ushers a la Oriental. Play up star.

THEME: Drama of white girl reared in Orient who is rescued and brought out to civilization.

Produced by Samuel Goldwyn. Distributed by United Artists. Released, December, 1927. The Cast: Gilda Gray, Clive Brook, Anna May Wong, Sojin, Michael Vavitch, Albert Conti. Clarissa Selwynne. Director, Fred Niblo.

The Last Waltz

Graustark Via Germany—Fairly Good

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THAT Ufa is still able to function adequately enough, despite the general exodus of most of the sons and daughters from the Fatherland, is proved in this latest importation. The Germans have turned out a Graustarkian romance that generates considerable color and charm. It is different from the customary pattern—a work that need not be taken very seriously. Whenever the situations have a tendency to becomes serious, the Teuton director injects enough comedy to keep it balanced with mirth.

There are some effective stage settings, the lighting is fairly good—and the cast acquits itself with creditable acting, especially Willy Fritsch and Suzy Vernon. All of the players succeed in being convincing. Naturally this makes the story just so much more plausible.

Here we have a princess and a countess in the act of changing their names to get themselves out of a ticklish situation. And before the final scene is disclosed the spectator is introduced to much court intrigue and what not before order is brought out of chaos. There have been better Ufas, but "The Last Waltz" is provocative enough to satisfy seven people out of ten. The other three would probably prefer a Western, anyway.

Drawing Power: O. K. for average houses. Suitable for feminine patrons. Exploitation Angles: Nothing much to put it over because of its being a German film. Best angle is the romantic theme.

THEME: Romantic drama on a Graustarkian theme of intrigue.

Produced by Ufa. Distributed by Paramount. Length, seven reels. Released, December, 1927. The Cast: Sophie Pegay, Hans von Schlettow, Willy Fritsch, Liane Haid, Suzy Vernon, Elsie Vanya, Fritz Rasp. Director, Arthur Robison.

Her Summer Hero

An Agreeable Little Picture

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THERE is a pleasantness about this picture of the summer sands and the summer heart throbs. Bedecked with many youthful faces, the film's reaction on the onlooker is one of quiet receptivity. For it is the sort of story that does not search after thrills, but is content to be a simple little romance between a co-ed and a life guard. Quite a bit of feminine coquetry is discernible in it, as well as the male's responsive susceptibility. Nicely conceived and put together, the production is entertainment of a subdued sort. Unless a fan believes implicity that action must be paramount in a picture that things must always be "sizzling," so to speak—he will find its play of conversation and the expressions on the faces of the contrasted types providing an enjoying hour or so.

Hugh Trevor, a college boy turned life guard for the summer, is the "summer hero" of Duane Thompson, whose attentions are sought by the egotistical Harold Goodwin, who defeated Hugh's college in a swimming event. He, in turn, is the object of an offensive launched by attractive Sally Blane. Unresponsive to her wiles, Sally snares the big life guard, portrayed with humor by James Pierce, who, with Trevor, guards the lives of the swimmers.

The blooming romance between Trevor and Miss Thompson goes to the rocks and is being fast disintegrated when the girl sees Trevor's sweater on the back of a life guard spooning with another girl. These two, of course, are Sally and Pierce, but Miss Thompson thinks her boy friend has been false to her, so she refuses to speak to him, discouraging him so much that he loses interest in the swimming contest in which he has a chance to even up the victory over his alma mater scored by the ego-filled Goodwin.

He is prevailed upon to race, however, and after a hard struggle emerges victorious from the contest to meet the now smiling Miss Thompson, who has discovered that the other life guard was the inhabitant of his sweater that night.

Drawing Power: About good. Exploitation Angles: Create the atmosphere of summer beach. Use parasols, life preservers, etc.

THEME: Comedy drama of young folk during the summer season. Co-ed and student, in love with each other, have a quarrel which is patched up when the boy wins a swimming race and the girl discovers that she had been wrong in her charges.

Produced and distributed by F B O. Released, February 12, 1927. Length, 5,146 feet. The Cast: Duane Thompson, Sally Blane, Hugh Trevor, James Pierce, Harold Goodwin, Cleve Moore. Story by Gertrude Orr. Continuity by Jean Dupont. Director, James Dugan.

The Ballyhoo Buster

Is Better Than the Ordinary

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

BUFFALO BILL, JR., can be counted on to give a fairly good account of himself in a picture having to do with things Western. As he has that knack of making the things he does convincing and of lending his role a pleasing personality and an ability to be stern or humorous as the occation demands his vehicles are generally always worth looking at. "The Ballyhoo Buster" is a well told story, capably acted and directed and with a smattering of events that have not as yet been hashed to death by the makers of films of the great outdoors.

In his latest production, Bill falls into the hands of a duo of dupes, who drug and rob him of money received in payment for his stock of cattle. Penniless, he is assisted by the proprietor of a medicine show who uses him as a ballyhoo—offering a reward to any spectator of his show to last three rounds with him with the gloves on. He proves to be a drawing card and upon invading his home town is asked to battle the man who won his girl. He knocks the fellow out and then goes off in pursuit of the two crooks whom he had noticed at the ringside.

One of them has his money and this fellow Bill captures while the other thief goes over an incline in an auto, dying in the crash. His money recovered the cowboy learns that he owes this good fortune to a girl he met at the time of the party before he was drugged. The girl had taken the money from the two crooks and had trailed him to his home town in hopes of finding him, the crooks robbing her at the time of the fight.

Peggy Shaw takes the part of the devoted girl who helped the hero, while Nancy Nash is the flippant lass who gave him the air after he suffered his reversal in finance.

Drawing Power: A good show for fans who want action and story interest. Exploitation Angles: Mention star and utilize medicine show and prize ring angles of the story.

THEME: Western drama of cowhand, who, robbed of his money, temporarily joins medicine show and succeds in getting his money back from the crooks who drugged him. His girl leaves him when he becomes penniless but another girl proves to be a loyal soul and helps him to recover the stolen bills.

Produced by Action Pictures, Inc. Distributed by Pathe. Released January 8, 1927. Length 4,805 feet. The Cast: Buffalo Bill, Jr., Peggy Shaw, Nancy Nash, Albert Hart, Floyd Shackle, Lafe McKee, Geo. Magrill, Jack Richardson, Walter Brennan, Al Taylor. Story by Rob't Walker. Continuity by F. L. Ingraham. Director, Reeves Eason.

The Lovelorn

All to the Advice—Entertaining

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE young folks who have been worrying Beatrice Fairfax about their love affairs may find some admirable advice from her via celluloid. The heart doctor tells a story—an average story, by the way, but as it concerns romance it can be easily understood by the love-sick determined to discover how to hold him or her. Miss Fairfax is portrayed on the screen in a sympathetic manner, Dorothy Cummings attending to the portrayal. It is her job to make an appearance in a "shot" here and there just to show motivation. She answers the heart questions of Molly O'Day and her sister. Sally O'Neil.

Molly does the worrying and Sally laughs it off. Both are in love with the same man—a type of fellow who sports loud clothes, et cetera. He, naturally, gravitates towards Sally, who keeps him in tow until a chap bobs up with a high-priced car. Then she ditches him. It follows that he takes up with Molly, the more serious and dependable girl. The heart problem enters when Sally, repentant, tries to win the youth back. Molly's task is to take Beatrice Fairfax into her confidence. What the heart doctor says furnishes the surprise of the story.

It is well staged, acted with understanding by the principals, and, while it is no great shakes as a picture, you can chalk it up as entertaining.

Drawing Power: Should draw through title and smart publicity. Good for average houses. Exploitation Angles: Tease the title and publicize Beatrice Fairfax. Play up cast.

THEME: Romantic drama of two sisters confronted with heart problems—which are answered by heart doctor.

Produced by Cosmopolitan. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, six reels. Released, December, 1927. The Cast: Sally O'Neill, Dorothy Cummings, Larry Kent, Molly O'Day, James Murray, Charles Delaney, George Cooper, Allan Forrest. Director, John McCarthy.

Desert of the Lost

A Pretty Good Western

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

WALLY WALES comes across with a nicely put together Western. He plays the part of a cowboy, who runs away to Arizona and then to Mexico to elude a persistent detective, whom he believes is after him because of a shooting. It succeeds in getting somewhat off the beaten track of Westerns, the land beyond the Mexican border supplying the background and evil Chinaman, and his hordes of Yaqui followers the obstacles which the cowboy has to overcome before he can rescue the daughter of a renegade American to whom he had come for shelter. Wales has a role into which he fits easily.

Coming to the inn of the renegade, a part played very well by Wm. J. Dyer, he is befriended by the girl who is being forced into a marriage with El Chino, the insidious Oriental. He defends the girl from them, thereby winning their hatred. Apparently falling for the fake map of the secret gold mine, the young fellow deserts the neighborhood of the inn, as he knows that the detective will soon arrive there. The villains plan his death while he is crossing a desert to reach the supposed site of the mine, but contrary to their expectations he persists in clinging to life, even going to the extent of locating the fabulous mine, capturing the Yaqui workers and their leader, El Chino.

The evil gang turned over to the Mexican government, the cowboy is now free to claim the reward offered for their capture and return to his native country with the girl. The obstacle of the detective is removed when he learns that the charges against him have been dropped.

Drawing Power: Suitable for program of average house. Exploitation Angles: The usual Western ballyhoo will not be amiss.

THEME: Western drama. American youth flees to Mexico with detective in pursuit. He discovers a half Mexican girl in a sorry plight, her father trying to force her into marriage with a Chinese bandit. He saves her from them, and learns that he is not wanted by the police. He returns to the states with the girl.

Produced by Action Pictures, Inc. Distributed by Pathe. Released, December 18, 1927. Length, 4,933 feet. The Cast: Wally Wales, Peggy Montgomery, Wm. J. Dyer, Edward Cecil, Richard Neill, Kelly Cafford, Ray Murro, Geo. Magrill, Chas. Whitaker. Story by W. J. Coburn. Director, Richard Thorpe.

Man Crazy

No Great Shakes, But Interesting Enough

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

FOR the average houses here is a picture that should click like the proverbial million dollars. Its title is really against it—but it rises above it and furnishes a fair enough entertainment. It isn't a yarn that will tax anyone's gray matter—and it won't be remembered in, say, a month or two. It resolves itself into a typical romantic excursion that doesn't make any great pretentions. The direction is first rate, there being instances of originality in a few of the scenes and the handling of the characters.

It tells the story of a society girl bored with life. She goes to work and falls in love with the poor, but honest, youth—who eventually turns out to be in the social swim. Can't do, you know, to upset the conventions! The original twists are in the situations and not in the development of the plot. The heroine operates a hot dog stand—and the young man operates a truck. Both of them consider themselves as entitled to social recognition.

This may all sound as if it was one of those things, but really it contains a good sparkle—is acted, moreover, right up to the handle, and is topped off with some life-like incident and atmosphere.

Drawing Power: First rate for neighborhoods. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and tease it along comedy lines. Emphasize the desire of young society girls to go to work, etc.

THEME: Romance of rich girl bored with social life who goes to work and cultivates romance with youth, supposedly poor, but who has background.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Released, December, 1927. The Cast: Dorothy Mackaill, Jack Mulhall, Phillips Smalley, Walter McGrail, Ray Hallor. Director, John Francis Dillon.

Wizard of the Saddle

"Buzz" Barton Vehicle Keeps A-Moving

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

FB O'S little sorrell-topped star, "Buzz" Barton is shown off to good advantage in this melodrama of prospectors, gold and villainy. Teamed with Milburn Moranti young Barton is not handicapped by his size when it comes to riding a horse and doing other things of a sort usually delegated to his elders. The boy has a seriousness in his moments before the grinding camera; his forte is riding a horse, but he is quite good at interpolating bits of comedy or appearing tragic as the plot unfolds. Good direction is marked in this melodrama in a Western setting, good acting and photography. It is suitable entertainment for youngsters and adults, alike.

"Buzz" and his friend ride into the lives of an old man and his daughter, who have unwittingly taken possession of a mine found by "Buzz." Three desperados in the neighborhood, anxious to drive the girl and her father from their cabin in which they hid years ago a counterfeiting plant, are balked in their attempts by "Buzz" and his friend and nearby prospectors, one of whom is a government official.

Later, however, the villains find the girl and her father alone; they are ripping up the floor to get their counterfeiting tools when the surveyor appears and also falls into their hands. Discovering that the claim is open for filing, the villains rush to town to sign the necessary papers but are beaten to the filing office by "Buzz." The surveyor, arriving later on the scene, reveals his identity and arrests the counterfeiters. The claim is filed for the girl's father, the erstwhile surveyor and the girl have one of those romantic scenes and "Buzz" and his friend resume their travels.

Drawing Power: Good as a program attraction. Exploitation Angles: See press book.

THEME: Western melodrama of boy and man and their efforts to aid girl and her father save mine from gang of counterfeiters. A surveyor in the neighborhood, in reality a government official, assists them in defeating the villains.

Produced and Distributed by F B O. Released January 28, 1928. Length 4,805 feet. The Cast: "Buzz" Barton, Milburn Moranti, Jimmy Ford, Duane Thompson, Jas. Welch, Bert Apling. Story by F. H. Clark. Photography by Roy Eslick. Director, Frank Howard Clark.

"So This Is Sap Center"

(Universal—One Reel)

A MUCH better story than usual, is this one-reeler; too good a story, in fact, to be given the treatment it is on the screen. It is fairly meaty with action and could be a real lively little comedy without so much of the slapstick and knockout stuff. Had about two-thirds of this been eliminated, and some more subtle humor injected, it would have been better for laugh or any other purposes.

A crooked promoter induces Harold Highbrow, editor of the Clarion, to serve as judge of a baby show, in which is entered the ugly offspring of a hard boiled thug. The latter persuades Harold he had better give his baby the prize if he knows what is good for him. The baby's number is 13, but in a playful mood he changes with a Colored child. The wrong is righted and the thug is handed the prize envelope, which the crooked promoter has filled with worthless paper and skipped. Harold and his cohorts give chase and capture him and all ends happily.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Sliding Home"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

IN this collegiate series Universal has a splendid short subject bet. To its credit it may be said that the quality of the stories is being maintained consistently. There is invariably something in them that makes them attractive. They fairly abound with the light, frivolous air of the campus that spells youth in all its glory.

This one is no exception. In fact it varies just enough to make it even better than usual. It shows the somewhat despicable Don Trent in a more manly light when Ed Benson, the hero, gets him his chance in the big baseball game of the season.

Trent, the star pitcher of the Calford nine, disgusts the coach with his boasting, so Benson is scheduled to pitch the game the next day between Calford and Midvale. Don sees that Ed is kidnapped just before the game, but even then he does not get his chance to pitch as a third string pitcher is sent in.

Don is much annoyed, as his parents have come on to see him pitch the big game. Ed is also aware they are present and feels sorry for Don. Things go badly for Calford until the seventh inning, when Benson, after a wild ride, reaches the stadium and makes the pinch hit that sends Calford into the lead.

The coach orders Ed to the box for the balance of the game, but in order to give Don his chance, Ed feigns a sprained ankle when he steps on a bat. Don goes in and holds the Calford lead to the end. He is aware of Ed's magnaminity and shows his appreciation when the game is over.

"Felix the Cat in Whys and Other Whys"

(Educational—One Reel)

THE latest adventure of the Sullivan cat again present him in a domestic light. This time he is gloriously drunk, having wined with great gusto to the wee small hours of the morning, when he finally begins his journey home. Buoyed up by the liquor the cat is walking on air, seemingly without a care in the world. In his confident state he enters the house to explain to his worried and angry wife the reason for his absence. Plenty of alibis come to mind and his mind is exceptionally keen and ready. He strings yarn after yarn and his wife is apparently content with his fictions. In his intoxicated state Felix does not notice her angry whiskers and quiet watchfulness and when she finds a blonde hair on his furry shoulder, he tries to put her off with a story about a lion. It ends, of course, with the wife storming up with a rolling pin and shouts of "liar!" and Felix tasting the jarring clouts and sharp tongue of a feline Amazon.

This is quite a different adventure for the Sullivan cat, revealing an hitherto unsuspected side of him. In one of his mythical tales to his wife there is a good storm with strong black and white formations, giving it an artistic touch. Then again the cat's walk home in his stewed condition is well done. Its up to the standard of the Sullivan men—and that's a high one, as you know.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"The Fireman"

(Export & Import—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS old Charlie Chaplin comedy, released some dozen years or so ago, may be shown again by exhibitors with profit as plenty of laughs can still be gotten out of the antics of the inimitable star. These Chaplin comedies are rightly called "classics" and their longevity is assured as long as motion pictures will continue to be shown and as long as people will want to laugh. Their span of life has been and will continue to be a great deal more persistent than the many comedies already or nearly lost in the limbo of movie oblivion. Charlie is such a master comic pantomimist almost equalled in subtlety by Langdon only. Charlie can elevate even a slapstick affair into the region of genuine comedy. And it is well to note, too, that the present day crop of comedies do not indicate any advance (except in technical lines) from this relic of the pioneer days of the movies. Frankly, we cannot see how they are going to manufacture comedies better than these early ones. The present day two- and one-reelers are no better. And how many stars, we ask you, have since appeared and shone with one half the brilliancy of this small figure, a precursor for later comedians, if there ever was one?

We cannot go into detail here about the plot of the story. Roughly, it concerns a young fireman in love with the girl of the fire chief. The girl's father burns his house to get the insurance and Charlie saves the girl, confined to her room on the top floor. They are plainly kidding in some of these sequences, such as the rescue scene. There are only one or two titles and these are not "dumbed up" after the fashion of the modern title writer. As a matter of fact, Charlie does not need props of this sort.

It's great how these old Chaplins click along after all these years! Edna Purviance and Mack Swain are in the supporting cast.

News Reel Resume

Simultaneous with the closing days of 1927 the newsreels have an opportunity to again present the modest figure of "Slim" Lindbergh, than whom perhaps they would not like to have any other choice. Lindbergh supplied them with what was probably their biggest stories of the year last summer and all of them did Trojan work in covering his flight and reception at Le Bourget. With this remarkable young man again a topic of conversation for the press, the masses and the newsreels it is only natural that his reception in Mexico is the most important story of the week in the realm of the newsreel. "Lindy" has probably more followers than any other figure before the public today and his pictures are a lure for any theatre.

A tragic contrast to the Lindbergh festival in Mexico City is the other important news story—that of the sunken submarine off the coast of Cape Cod.

Follows a brief outline of the contents of the various reels:

Paramount News, No. 41: "We" in Mexico City; Dutch East Indians in sacred festival; Col. W. L. Stimson, new Governor-General for Philippines; League of Nations; new aircraft carrier, the U. S. S. Lexington; Georgia Tech students working on annual show; Bennett Doty leaving prison where he was sentenced; loggers working in snow-covered Maine forest; tricks of Los Angeles German police dog; workmen laying cable between France and the U. S.

No. 42: Navy at work in vain efforts to save crew of the S-4; Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh begins flight to Mexico City to join her son; winter sports atop Mt. Hood in Oregon; Maine restores flags of Confederacy to South; Norway's new minister, H. H. Bachke; new type of water craft has try-out on Seine; a great dane in domestic poses; fast craft competing at San Diego; "We" in Mexico.

Kinograms, No. 5353: Modern methods prevailing in Philippine prison (exclusive camera story from Donald C. Thompson); Col. H. L. Stimson; Tommy Loughran, light-heavyweight king; German warship off for trip around world; senators accused by Hearst of bribery; oriental beauties arrive in New York; Virginian society women have tea during airplane [illegible]

No. 5354: Mexico City's welcome for Colonel Lindbergh; U. S. S. Texas in New York harbor for grooming; speedboat regatta at San Diego; Siberians march for the Soviet cause; Dixie's Confederate flags returned; Navy ships on scene of submarine disaster.

Pathe News, No. 103: Lindbergh in Mexico City; U. S. S. Lexington, new plane carrier; new Atlantic cable between France and U. S.; California nymphs dancing on seashore; Col. Stimson; huskies trained for Byrd South Pole expedition; heads of big league baseball; new army air chiefs, Generals Fechet and Foulois; Quebec orphanage destroyed by fire; new citizens receive first papers.

No. 104: Activities off the coast of Cape Cod over spot where the S-4 went down; Philadelphia's cat show; Republicans preparing for national convention; Navy tests new parachute; Eskimos try to cross the Hudson River in canoe; Red delegates head address at Soviet World Congress; Japanese youths hold kite-flying contest; Mrs. Lindbergh flies to greet her son.

M-G-M News, Vol. 1, No. 36: Coast Guard rescuing crew aboard helpless vessel; Jap kiddies offer prayers to Cupid; army of turtles destined for Christmas consumption; West Point cadets training with rapiers; Ramonoff Court gems on display in England; whippet beats horse in lightning race; Lindbergh.

No. 37: Speed boats race over 5-mile course at San Diego, Texas and North Carolina banners in Civil War restored to states; tugs fighting ice blockade; planes test bombs; climbers wearing bathing suits on top of Oregon mountain; Hawaiian cowboys lassoing cattle in surf; annual sheep round-up in Australia; Navy rescuers at work to save crew of sunken submarine; Lindbergh's arrival in Mexican capital.

International News, Vol. 9, No. 102: Scenes in Mexican capital upon arrival of Lindbergh; Italian troops in physical drill; new Miami harbor opened by dynamite blast; Japanese Buddhists in picturesque procession; California girls in [illegible] dances; Santa Claus; all sorts of animals dwelling together in California menagerie.

No. 103: More pictures of Lindy in Mexico City; highspeed boats race at St. Augustine; speedboat regatta at San Diego; national guard preventing meeting of Oklahoma legislators—Governor H. S. Johnson, Adjutant General C. F. Barrett and leaders of the House, who figured in the impeachment proceedings against the governor; pelicans wintering in Southland; Maine restoring war-torn banners to Southern states; winter sports; the Navy's fight to save men in sunken submarine.

Fox News, Vol. 9, No. 24: Lindbergh arriving safely at Mexico City; buffaloes forced to seek shelter from winter weather; Col. H. L. Stimson; Col. G. B. Harvey, former U. S. Envoy to Britain; moguls of baseball, E. S. Bernard, Judge Landis and John Heydler; cat and puppy indulging in flirtation; the Lexington, new mother ship to airplanes; geisha girls celebrate Japan's recovery from earthquake; new capers of Looney Lens,—a reverse of Christmas shopping on the avenues.

Five displays featuring "The Chinese Parrot" are illustrated in the layout above. These were used to exploit first run showings of the mystery melodrama at the following theatres: Capitol, Miami; Majestic, Grand Rapids; Rialto, Washington, D. C.; Columbia, Seattle, and Albee, Providence. The ads for the Albee and Majestic are in four columns, while the other three are two-column displays.

DAVID H. FITZGIBBONS, for 40 years connected with the Keith-Albee interests, particularly on the musical end, died at the Peter Bent Brigham hospital in Boston Friday of pneumonia. His home was in Roslindale, Mass.

He started his career in the old Keith Gaiety Theatre in Boston when 16 years old. Later the theatre became the Bijou. He was closely associated with E. F. Albee in the early days of the Keith-Albee organization. He was in charge of the opening musical programs for the Keith theatres in New York, Philadelphia, and other cities and had general oversight of the music for the company. He leaves a wife, two brothers who are both identified with theatrical interests, and two sisters.

The new Steinberg Theatre in Worcester, which was formally opened a little more than a year ago, has been taken over from Henry Steinberg by the United L. A. W. Corporation, of which Louis A. Wolf is president. The company plans to operate the theatre for the present. It is probable that the theatre will shift its policy to a three-change a week plan instead of the daily change. It is understood that the theatre in recent months has been very profitable.

The Winter Hill Theatre at Somerville has been sold by R. Maxwell to E. N. Branca who will also manage the theatre.

The Comique Theatre at Salem has been sold by J. Alpert to Sam Wilkinson and L. Halpert.

Fred Lovett, of Olneyville, R. I., has been appointed manager of the new Circle Theatre, at Pawtucket, R. I.

Charles Shute, who formerly managed theatres in Lawrence, Mass., has been made manager of the new Wernick Theatre, at Chicopee, opened a week ago by Wernick Brothers. The house seats about 1,000 and is one of the most attractive of the Western Massachusetts community type theatres.

Michael White, of the Orpheum Theatre at Dover, N. H., was a visitor to Film Row during the week.

District Manager M. N. Wolf of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with headquarters in Boston, is recuperating from a minor operation performed at the Cottage Hospital, Dorchester, on Monday.

The new State Theatre at Stoughton, Mass., opened Monday. The theatre seats about 1,000 and is owned and managed by Morris Pozner. A policy of pictures with vaudeville three times a week is in operation.

Jack Magann, of the Boston exchange of First National, was presented with a beautifully fitted traveling bag by ex-President Lieber, now chairman of the board of First National. Magann was the leading salesman of all First National salesmen in the country during the John McGuirk month drive.

The Crown Theatre, Lowell, Mass., has been sold by Cy Silverman to F. E. Leiberman.

The Humboldt Theatre, Roxbury, has changed its policy, and will have three changes of program weekly instead of two.

Howard Duffy, who operates theatres at Old Orchard, Me., has been appointed field manager and advisor to the E. M. Loew Theatres.

Thomas Waters, assistant treasurer of the Gaiety Theatre, Boston, is receiving congratulations on the arrival of an eight-pound daughter in his home Friday.

A. J. Purcell, formerly with Nate Yeamans theatres in Fall River, has been appointed manager of the Premier Theatre in Fall River.

Walters, Denish & Frisco, Inc., Boston, has incorporated to conduct an amusement bureau, with capital of $25,000. Incorporators are: Ross Frisco, Boston; Paul N. Denish, Arlington; and Louis E. Walters, Boston.

"Jack" Fitzgibbons, formerly of the F B O outfit at Boston and more recently identified with the industry in New York City, was welcomed on a return visit to Boston during the week.

William Dehlman, manager of the Modern Theatre, Providence, died at his home in that city Monday night. Death was due to heart trouble. He was at one time manager of the Imperial at Pawtucket.

Charles Spink has been appointed [illegible] at Providence. He was formerly manager of the Carleton Theatre.

Martin Tuchy, formerly of the Fay Theatres in Providence, has been appointed manager of the Carleton Theatre, Providence, succeeding Martin Tuchy.

David W. Grover, cashier of the Pathe exchange, Boston, is confined to his home with the grippe.

Al W. Anders has taken over the Bijou Theatre in Springfield, Mass. Anders also operates theatres in Holyoke, Mass. The Bijou was formerly operated by Abe Goodside and later was taken over by Louis Richmond, who now disposes of the theatre to Anders.

James Greco, who owns and operates the Rialto Theatre in Worcester, and who has been in poor health since attacked by robbers at his garage nearly a year ago, has been discharged from the Peter Bent Brigham hospital in Boston, and is much improved in health. He expects to resume active charge of his theatre and real estate interests the first of the year.

Central Penn

CONTROL of two picture theatres in Harrisburg, Pa.—the New Rialto, at Third and Harris streets, and the National, Sixth and Division streets—has passed into the hands of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Krupa, of Lancaster, who have taken the properties under five-year leases from Isaac Marcus, the owner, of Harrisburg, and have also obtained a five-year option to purchase outright. The Krupas also are understood to be negotiating for a similar lease on the Royal theatre, Third street, near Herr street, Harrisburg, also owned by Mr. Marcus, and the only remaining theatre he controls in Harrisburg.

The Krupas will make elaborate improvements to the New Rialto and the National, both of which are large and prosperous neighborhood picture theatres, which, it is stated, will place them on a par with the finest picture houses in the downtown section of the city. It is intimated that they will become first-run houses.

The improvements will include installing modern pipe organs in both theatres and practical rehabilitation of the interiors. Already, under Marcus control, extensive changes were being made to the New Rialto, including the building of a new front on Third street, with marquee overhanging the sidewalk, and a material increase in the seating capacity.

Mr. and Mrs. Krupa had been in the picture theatre business in Lancaster for nineteen years until they recently sold the Capitol theatre, and the lease of the Hamilton theatre, in that city, to the Stanley Corporation of America, at a figure said to have been $455,000.

When the old York Opera House, York, Pa., was reopened on the evening of December 26, the management announced the name hereafter will be the York Theatre. The Nathan Appell Enterprises, Inc., owners of the theatre, had closed the house for several weeks to undergo extensive improvements, outstanding among which was an entirely new decorative scheme, including new draperies, and a more modern system of lighting. Ed R. Moore is manager of the house.

A contract has been let by William Boyd, of Manoa, Pa., to Hodgens and Hill, Philadelphia architects, to prepare plans for the erection of a new picture theatre in Manoa.

Louis J. Appell, of the Nathan Appell Enterprises, Inc., which control a string of theatres in that city and nearby towns, was host, on December 14, at the Strand theatre, York, to the children of the Hoffman orphanage, of Littlestown, Adams county. The feature of the entertainment was the film play, "The Rough Riders."

While employed as a steel erector in the construction of the new Colonel Drake theatre, Oil City, on December 10, Rudolph Georgenes, of Buffalo, N. Y., was truck on the foot by a falling beam. Three toes were crushed.

For several weeks following the openings, on November 21, of the palatial new Capitol theatre, Pottsville, a part of the big chain operated by the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, Clark Friars, of Chicago, was employed as guest organist.

His fellow employes at the Colonial Theatre, Lebanon, were recently guests of Charles Umberger, chief electrician, at a turkey dinner at Harper's Hotel, near that city.

The Sunbury Federation of Musicians, Local 605, which includes musicians employed in theatres of Sunbury and vicinity, announces the election of the following officers: President, Professor I. W. Rothenberg, of Sunbury; Vcie-President, Frank H. Butler, Selinsgrove; Secretary, Ivan Fox, Sunbury; Treasurer, J. L. Spangler, Sunbury, and Sergeant-at-Arms, Charles Kniss, Sunbury. Members of the executive committee are: Clyde A. Zimmerman, Nevin Stuck, Clyde Fulmer, Norman Hull, Russell Hoover and Hiram Dressler.

The Colonial, Victoria and State theatres, Harrisburg, owned by the [illegible] set aside a day in advance of Christmas on which children were admitted by the presentation of a toy each at the box office. The toys later were given to the Toy Mission of Harrisburg, which distributed them to the needier of the city for Christmas presents.

[illegible] on December 13, appeared before the Rotary Club in Altoona and presented a review of important events in motion picture form.

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES

¶ In extending BEST WISHES for a HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR, I wish to add my Grateful Appreciation of the many compliments from Exhibitors who have presented my Pictures during 1927.

MAY 1928 BE A BANNER YEAR

Des Moines

T. H. WEIL, who has the Opera House theatre at Blairstown, Ia., has left for Biloxi, Miss., where he will spend the winter. Mr. Weil usually goes South in the winter. The theatre is left in charge of his son.

Theatres over the State are planning on special New Year's Eve shows with quite elaborate plans being made for the special midnight shows. The theatres of the A. H. Blank chain over the State will all have special New Year Eve shows in accordance with their regular custom, while many exhibitors who have not previously had these special shows will this year give parties at which movie patrons may celebrate while the New Year comes in. The Capitol, of which Harry Watts is manager for the A. H. Blank-Publix chain, Jess Day, who has recently become the manager of the Des Moines Theatre in Des Moines and the Strand Theatre, which is now under the management of Lionel Wasson, will all have special holiday shows, and will have elaborate performances on New Year's Eve, with favors for all the guests and special stage entertainment.

Joe Benjamin Gerbracht, of Ames, who has a number of theatres there which are consolidated under the name of the Ames Theatre Company, is planning a special New Year's Eve entertainment at his theatres this year. Mr. Gerbracht, who is one of the up and coming exhibitors of the State, is having the special midnight show at his theatres for the first time this year.

John Veenschoten, who has the Hiland Theatre, a Des Moines suburban house, has installed a new organ, and has planned a number of musical programs for special treats for the holiday shows.

First National, which won two out of the three games placed last week at the bowling alley, is now in second place. "It won't be long now," they say, looking at first place.

Oh, it was a grand and glorious feeling when the members of the staff of Universal received their checks as winners in the national contest of the Wives' and Mothers' drive just concluded. Al Yarowsky and M. Lee, of the booking department, also received bonuses as winners in second place in this district in the booking department contest.

George F. Adams, who recently opened up offices at 321 in the Security Building, reports the sale of a Reproduco organ by E. T. Dunlap, of the Dunlap Theatre at Hawarden. The organ was installed last week.

Two Powers machines were added to the equipment of the theatre at Winterset, Ia., last week. Mr. Pettit has the theatre at Winterset.

Herb Grove, who has the very important job of opening up the theatre at Waterloo, the new Riviera, which is one of the A. H. Blank-Publix houses, is just the very busiest man in the State. It has now been definitely promised that the theatre will be ready for opening before the old year dies and the New Year dawns. The Riviera, which is one of the most unusual in design of most Iowa theatres, and one of the key theatres, is scheduled to open on December 29. The midnight show on New Year's Eve is being billed in big letters, and promises to be a guarantee that the New Year will be begun for the Riviera in flying colors.

Mrs. Wilhemine Alff, who lives at Cherokee, Iowa, has seen 2,920 shows since 1919. Mrs. Alff, who has some interesting comments to make upon pictures which she has seen, has not missed a single night at the theatre. She believes that her report shows a record theatre attendance.

The theatre strike at Mason City, which effects the Palace and the Bijou there, has not yet been settled. The Star and the Cecil theatres there are not involved in the difficulty. The motion picture projectionists are out on strike in sympathy with the musicians who walked out three weeks ago. An agreement was made between the international officers of the operators and the musicians' organizations that they should stand together in the strike for more fair terms for organized labor. The Palace and the Bijou are employing non-union musicians and projectionists.

The new president of the Kiwanis Club at Burlington, Iowa, is Harold D. Barnes, who is manager of the Rialto Theatre there for A. H. Blank. Mr. Barnes is successful in co-operating in community organizations, and has added much to his success in the film game by his pleasing personality.

Visitors in Movie Row last week were Mr. Carroll, of Colfax; Mr. Livermore, of Garner, and Mr. Eddy, of Indianola.

L. M. Palmquist, ad sales manager for Famous Players, will spend the Christmas holidays with his folks in Minneapolis.

O. C. Johnson, who has recently taken over the Atlantic and the Strand at Atlantic, has bought all the contracts which were held by B. Pierce, the previous owner, and was in Des Moines last week to make these arrangements at the film exchanges. Mr. Pierce, who has been an exhibitor at Atlantic for some time, is compelled to leave the theatre trade for a time, due to a nervous breakdown. He plans to return to the theatre business after several years in complete rest.

Big storms which piled the roads with snow and made traffic difficult in many ways have played havoc with the theatre business for a number of exhibitors in smaller towns. Several theatres have reported that they are closing at this time due to lack of business which bad weather has occasioned. The Wonderland Theatre at Bradgate has closed, while the Opera House at Rowan has given notice that the theatre will close.

New York & New Jersey

ANOTHER Jersey community again danced to the tune of the "blues" when the Justice of the Peace of Dumont appeared in person at George Ruckle's Dumont theatre last Sunday, Dec. 18, and read a proclamation to a large and distinguished portion of Dumont's population.

Describing the activities of the Justice a special dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune stated:

"He stopped the pipe organ, snapped on his flashlight and read the following proclamation: 'At the instance of Mayor Stephen De-Long and Borough Counsel Fred J. Mattocks, State of New Jersey, by virtue of an act of this state entitled 'An act to prevent riots and tumultuous assemblies,' I am directed to charge and command all persons here assembled immediately to disperse themselves and peaceably depart to their habitations, or to their lawful business, upon the pains and penalties contained in the said act. God save the state.'

"Chief Grimes proclaimed that the audience would be allowed an hour to leave, and then went out and put a stop to a football game between the local club and Hose Company No. 3. He returned and found George Ruckle, manager of the theatre, along with representatives of the Board of Trade, raising a protest at police headquarters that buses should be stopped, soda water stands closed and the West Shore Railroad held to the legal limit of one train a day on Sundays.

"Several hundred persons were still in the theatre, and Chief Grimes threw up his hands and said that summonses would merely be served on the theatre owners. The evidence will be heard by Judge C. J. McCarthy of Hackensack.

"The theatre was open last Sunday, but it was a benefit performance, and no action was taken. Bergen County is strongly divided on enforcement of New Jersey's blue laws, passed in the eighteenth century. Englewood will not permit open theatres, Ridgefield Park is trying to decide, and Hackensack, Leonia and Grantwood are not bothered. Prosecutor A. C. Hart has announced that he will prosecute all cases brought before him, but will not take the lead."

That night the population of Dumont was again gazing upon Laura Plante, and Chief Grimes stuck to his fireplace.

Mr. Ruckles also operates the Palace Theatre in Bergenfield and from all reports will do his utmost to arouse public sentiment against the attempts to enforce the 18th century Sabbath laws.

George Seed, brother of Harry Seed, who manages Warner Bros. exchange at Albany, N. Y., is now connected with the Small and Strausberg theatre circuit of Brooklyn and Long Island as manager of the Roebling Theatre, Williamsburg. Mr. Seed is a showman of ten years' experience.

A. G. Hurlburt was recently placed in charge of the Tiffany Theatre, one of Messrs. Schwartz and Gold's houses. The Tiffany is located at Chester and Livonia avenues. Mr. Schwartz is at present away in the country for a rest, and Irving Gold is looking after the affairs of the Cross Bay Theatre.

It is reported that William Applegate will assume the duties of J. D. Fink, the latter having recently resigned as general manager of the A. H. Schwartz chain of Brooklyn theatres.

A rather belated report is that Stanzler and Son have disposed of all of their Long Island theatres. Their holdings were located in Amityville, College Point and other sections.

R. J. Ryan, formerly connected with A. H. Schwartz' Albermarle Theatre, is now manager of "Mike" Glynne's Bayshore house.

The Fifth Avenue Playhouse Group, Inc., of 67 West 44th street, New York City, operators of the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, New York, The Playhouse, Chicago, and allied theatres, will hold the official opening of the new St. George Playhouse, 100 Pineapple street, December 23.

Joseph R. Heisler, one of the company executives, claims that their new house is "just a motion picture theatre—not a salon of the cinema, a cathedral of the motion picture or even a synagogue of the cinema."

The St. George will first open in December 21 with a benefit for the Junior League and on December 22 will follow with a special performance for the Christmas fund of the Brooklyn Eagle. A dinner will be held on the evening of December 21 at the St. George Hotel in honor of the event.

Kenneth Gratton has recently succeeded Manager Fishkin at Loew's Premier Theatre, Brownsville, Brooklyn.

The Ridge Theatre, Wilson avenue, Brooklyn, is reported as having closed. The Ridge was operated by R. Gillespie.

More evidence that the ladies are not only coming into their own, but are already in, is evidenced by a communication from Dan McElwaine of the Fox office.

The girls of Fox films are forming a bowling team in order to challenge the fair bowlers of other motion picture companies.

In the first series of games played this week at Dwyer's Bowling Academy, Catherine Costello led with an average score of 72; Amy Silberman was second with 68; Evelyn Costello gained third position with 54; Gertrude Eisele had 51, and Henrietta Klein scored [illegible] points less than her sister Augusta accounted for.

This week the Fox [illegible] mental girls will bowl the Laboratory group, and the Fox team will include the best bowlers from each division.

According to the present schedule, the Pathe girls' team will meet the fair bowlers of Fox at Dwyer's Academy some Monday night during January in a match to determine the contenders for motion [illegible] honors.

The teams entered in the motion [illegible] are set to a great start on Thursday night at Savage Gym when Fox Films came from behind in the last minutes of play to win over Consolidated by a 28 to 26 score, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer turned the tables on Paramount 49-32 after the latter team had led 21-20 at the half way mark. Pathe, last year's movie champions, will begin their season next week, when they meet the Fox five.

By invitation of the league, Douglas N. Tauszig, Treasurer of Fox Film Corporation, tossed up the basketball to officially start this year's race. Mr. Tauszig made a hit with the assembled players and rooters when he offered as a slogan the sportsman's motto: "May the best team win!"

The players who distinguished themselves during the game were: Doc Weiner and Milt Beecher, of Metro; Keenan and Ray Pratt, of Paramount; Harry Weiner and Al Star, of Fox; also Jack O'Connell and Fred Housley of Consolidated. E. Geisenheimer refereed both contests to the satisfaction of everyone.

To every reader of these columns and to those who have assisted the writer in the way of gathering news items, we wish you all a very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Canada

TWO hundred members of the Moving Picture Operators Union at Toronto, Ontario, attended the annual meeting of the organization at the Labor Temple when Charles A. Dentlebeck was re-elected president of the union for 1928. Mr. Dentlebeck, who is associated with Famous Players Canadian Corp., in an executive capacity, has been president of the Toronto local for the past 12 years.

William Covert, who was re-elected business manager, is International vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and has long been prominent among organized theatre employes. H. M. Elliott was elected vice-president and George H. Jones was made secretary-treasurer. The union's executive board comprises S. Wells, H. Dobson, A Milligan, W. Ayris and B. Higgins.

The name of the leading Famous Players house at Nanaimo, B. C., has been changed from Dominion to Captol Theatre by Manager D. G. Borland to link it more distinctly with the chain of Capitol Theatres operated across Canada by Famous Players. The re-named house was closed recently for five days when it was in the hands of the decorators.

Robert Innes, associated with the Canadian Theatre and Electrical Supply Company, Toronto, is laid up with a broken leg which he sustained when he fell while arranging a radio aerial at his home.

One of the most unusual of crimes was perpetrated at the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, when unknown miscreants broke into the lobby of the theatre late on Saturday night and proceeded to have a merry time with the reels of film which had been prepared for shipment to exchanges in Toronto.

When members of the orchestra returned to the theatre for rehearsal they found the film all over the floor, broken and mutilated in many places. Three reels were entirely missing, these comprising a portion of the feature and two other reels. A sperial reward was offered by Manager Ray Tubman for the return of the films in good condition, but there was no response to the offer.

Rumor has it that Toronto, Ontario, is to have a new downtown film place, seating 3,800, on a site on Temperance Street which would include the present Empire Theatre, owned by Mrs. F. W. Stair. Formerly a burlesque house, the Empire has been presenting repertoire stock for the past two years.

Leading exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, arranged a special assortment of features for the week between Christmas and New Year's to attract holiday crowds, and the many children enjoying the mid-winter vacation.

The Capitol Theatre, Moose Jaw, Sask., owned by Famous Players and managed by E. P. Fields, suffered considerable loss from smoke when fire destroyed the adjoining store premises also [illegible] Theatre [illegible] necessary to redecorate the theatre throughout. There was no interruption to business because the painting crews rushed operations from 11 p.m. to noon each day.

Pittsburgh

RUMORS are rife regarding the erection of a new film building in the 1600 block on the Allies boulevard. A group of Chicago contractors are said to be considering a site in this neighborhood for the proposed new structure. However, nothing has been apparently decided as yet. Other properties in various parts of the city are also said to be under consideration.

Exchange managers in Film Row have been approached by the contractors, and many of them have expressed their willingness to remove from present quarters, provided the new structure meets with their approval, in the matter of location, rental, etc.

One proposition said to be under advisement is the erection of a series of one-story buildings, each to be separated from the other by a narrow alley-way. It is proposed that these buildings would be erected in the Oakland section, out of the high rent district.

Though, apparently, nothing definite has been done, the film boys seem to have the "moving fever," and it is likely that before many months have passed, some of the exchanges will follow Paramount's example and desert the Forbes Street Film Row.

A change in office personnel has been announced in the Pathe exchange, whereby Robert Mochrie has been named branch manager, while B. M. Moran is the new sales manager of the company.

Both men are old timers in point of service here, and both have a wide acquaintance among the local exhibitors.

Charles Raymond, well known publicity expert, was added to the Pittsburgh staff of the Stanley-Davis-Clark Theatres, it was announced this week. The company operates thirteen theatres locally, and are also building a de luxe house seating 4,000, which is expected to open around February first.

Raymond has had a world of experience in all branches of the business. He has been with Publix in Kansas City and other towns for three years, with Balaban & Katz (before combined with Publix) for five years, taking care of all de luxe houses in Chicago and also with Loew in Boston. Before that time he was also connected with the outdoor shows, also writing vaudeville sketches and acting in them. The rumor is around that Charlie's nickname is "headline" as he breaks the front page so often with his original stunts.

George Holm, from New Jersey, is a recent addition to our locale. He is with W. B. Jones Co. The recent gas-tank explosion in Pittsburgh afforded him his "baptism of fire" in Pathe News work, from which he emerged unscathed to receive kind words from the "boss." Incidentally, it is interesting to note that W. B. Jones has represented the Pathe News in the local territory continuously since May, 1914.

George Collins, Pathe city salesman, has returned from his home in Brooklyn, where he attended the funeral of his sister. Our sympathies are extended.

Harry Michalson, manager of the Cincinnati branch of FBO, visited the Pittsburgh office of the company on Wednesday. Harry is a former Pittsburgher and for several years was city salesman at the local FBO branch.

William Grey, popular theatre owner of Monongahela, was recently in town.

Pat Campbell, general sales manager for Pathe's western productions, was a visitor at the local branch last Tuesday.

A. H. Schnitzer, manager of the FBO office in Pittsburgh, spent Saturday and Sunday on a business trip to the New York home office. He is well known here, having until a few months ago been assistant manager of the Standard-Federated exchange in Pittsburgh.

Harry K. Smythe, owner of Harry's Ad Show, paid a brief visit to Pittsburgh over the week end, and then hurried back East, where his attraction is playing the several cities throughout New York and New Jersey.

Milton Miller is the new salesman in charge of accessories at the Columbia Film Service. "Milt" has his department fitted out in tip-top manner and can furnish any type of accessories on Columbia releases on a short notice.

Nat Barach, former Goldwyn manager in Pittsburgh, and more recently division manager for Warners (the local branch having been part of his territory), has resigned and as yet has made no announcement regarding his future activities.

H. M. Herdel, former manager of the Pittsburgh Universal branch, is now officiating in a similar capacity for Universal at the company's branch in Chicago.

Edward Johnson is the new owner of the Exhibitors' Sign and Supply Company, having purchased the business from Joseph Janicks last week.

Lou Geiger, home office representative for FBO, and chief assistant to Cleve Adams, division manager, whose territory embraces the local office, is spending a few weeks at the Pittsburgh branch. Lou is well known here, having at one time been manager of the local First National exchange.

The Manos Enterprises in Greensburgh are contemplating the erection of a new theatre at Clay Street and South Fifth Street, Jeanette. Sketches of the building call for a seating capacity of approximately 1200 persons.

Exhibitor visitors to Film Row the past few days included: Lois Stein, Natrona; Harry Petz, Youngwood; James Velas, Wheeling; and Mary Salowich, Johnstown.

The engagement of Herman Fineberg, manager of the Rialto Theatre, 1600 Fifth Avenue, has just been announced, and the wedding will probably take place next Spring. Though we haven't as yet learned the name of the young lady in the case, we hasten to offer our congratulations to the happy young pair.

Gordon Ferguson, manager of the Educational Films department of the Pathe exchange, is spending a few days at the local branch of the company.

"Bill" Horne, now a home office representative of the Universal Pictures Corporation, is spending a few days in the local territory. "Bill's" duties take him throughout the entire country, and he has his hands full.

San Francisco

A GROUP of the leading motion picture magnets of the country arrived in San Francisco December 7th and met in what is believed an important conference. The party included Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Sam Katz, president of the Publix Theatres; Nichloas M. Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn, and Harold B. Franklin, president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc. They were joined by several other producers and theatre heads the following day.

The producers and theatre men are making a national inspection tour, which includes motion picture studios, studios, exchanges, and theatre holdings. While in San San Francisco they visited all the West Coast houses which were showing the pictures of its various Hollywood studies which the visitors represented. It is understood that their conference here chiefly concerned the presentation in San Francisco of the 1928 product, which is ready for release in the local West Coast theatres.

A. M. Bowles, divisional manager for the western chain, escorted the guests over the local field, after which they left for the Northwest.

E. C. RAY SMITH, a well known salesman for Universal, was quite badly burned about the hand one day last week.

Nate Robbins, of Utica, will open his theatre in that city on January 15, according to the latest report. The house is of a stadium effect and is described as one of the most beautiful in the Mohawk Valley. The organ is being installed this week. First runs will prevail with an occasional second run.

Fred Freschette resigned this past week as manager of the Barcli in Schenectady. His successor has not yet been appointed. It is quite possible that Guy Graves, the newly appointed general manager of the Farley chain, will not name a manager of the Barcli, but will include it under his personal supervision.

Milton Caplon, Pathe salesman, returned last Saturday from his first trip through Vermont since the days when he was marooned by flood conditions in one of the Vermont towns. Upon his return home he stated that the Vermont exhibitors were optimistic, and while the flood had cost many of them large sums in lost patronage, that they were looking for a fairly good winter's business.

Alec Herman, who recently resigned as joint manager of the Pathe-Pro-Dis-Co office in Albany, may hook up with the Schine organization as buyer, succeeding Max Milder. Mr. Herman also received a very attractive offer from Minneapolis, and there is a report also that he may become part owner of Chase Productions.

Julius Berinstein played his own Santa Claus last week and presented himself with a brand new Packard sedan. Mr. Berinstein owns and manages the Colonial in Albany.

Moe Streimer and William Mahoney, both connected with United Artists, spent the past week working in Albany and nearby points, calling on exhibitors.

Manager Talbott of the Playhouse in Hudson stole a little march on the boys last week, when he slipped out of town one day, went to New York, and married an actress in that city who has her own show on the road and who is well known over the vaudeville circuits.

The recent death of William Gray in California was received with regret in Albany, for Mr. Gray's theatres in Pittsfield, Rutland and Burlington are covered by Albany's film salesmen.

Mrs. Belle M. Taylor, owner of the Richmond theatre in North Adams, is planning to leave shortly after the New Year for Europe, where she will spend several months.

Harry Lazarus of Kingston was in town during the week arranging his bookings for the weeks to come. Henry Frieder of Hudson was in New York city during the week. John B. Harte, of Bennington, plans to leave for Florida in the near future, where he will remain for a part of the winter.

C. H. Hummer, who has been buying pictures for Masonic Hall in Ravena for several years and giving much satisfaction, will probably be retained for another year by the board of trustees of the Masonic Hall, when it meets the latter part of the month.

S. E. Feld, of the Pathe forces, is looking forward to spending his Christmas holidays in New York city. Miss Edna Pfister, secretary of the Albany Film Board of Trade, will probably spend the holidays at her home in Cleveland.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. A. deWolf Veiller are again looking forward to receiving what will undoubtedly be the most unique and attractive Christmas greeting cards of any along Film Row. For two years, the Veillers have set the pace with original hand colored conceptions which have been retained throughout the year by their friends.

Morris Silverman of Schenectady, heard many complaints about the music at his Rivoli theatre. He admits such. Then, according to his own story, he went and spent $6,000 on an organ and business proceeded to slump. No wonder Mr. Silverman was down in the mouth when he hit Albany's Film Row last week.

Jammed to its capacity, yet the traveling bag owned by Amos Leonard, sales manager for the Pathe forces in Albany, managed to carry last week a photograph of Mr. Leonard's year-old daughter. It was a proud daddy who walked into the office a few days ago and displayed the photograph to his associates.

Charles Derry of Port Henry will continue in the exhibitor ranks for at least another four years, having taken that term lease of his present house.

M. R. Howe of Syracuse, head of a truck film service, operating from Albany to Buffalo, died last week at his home.

Kansas City

AT a special meeting of the city council of Clinton, Mo., a town of about 12,000 population, an old ordinance prohibiting Sunday motion pciture shows was repealed and a new ordinance was passed allowing Sunday matinees. At Ash Grove, Mo., however, where a Sunday closing fight also is in progress, the theatre interests were not so fortunate. A. D. Metcalf, exhibitor, pleaded guilty to operating his theatre on Sunday and was fined $5 and costs. It was the first victory for the Sunday closing advocates. Immediately after paying his fine Metcalf filed complaints against some of the most prominent business men in town for violating the same blue law, which permits only household duties on Sunday.

At Kansas City a large Bible class adopted a resolution and forwarded it to City Manager H. F. McElroy, asking that a ban be placed on all indecent shows, but, like hundreds of other similar resolutions adopted in Kansas City, theatre owners exvect to hear no more of the matter.

L. C. Wingham, manager of the local branch for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, just left here for a trip of a few days into Idaho.

Traveling Auditor W. F. Reiley arrived at the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office last week from San Francisco. He will be here for an indefinite stay.

The Paramount Traveling Auditor, A. R. Young, arrived at the Salt Lake office to remain for some time.

Jack Curry, who is in charge of the Ad Sales for the Western territory, came into the local Paramount - Famous - Lasky exchange last week, and will remain for several weeks before leaving for Los Angeles. The Paramount sales staff in this district are all out in their respective territories.

A moving picture company, to be known as The Pioneer Film Company, has just been formed in this city, and is being sponsored by Ed S. Diamond, formerly of the Pantages and American theatres, here.

Miss Greta Bretain, head organist at the American Theatre, has just returned to her duties here after an absence of three weeks, due to having been called to Iowa because of the illness of her father-in-law, it is reported.

Pickens and Bartlett, lessees and managers of the American Theatre Dansante, a ballroom operated in connection with the American Theatre, have completed the decorating of this hall for the holidays, injecting considerable of the holiday spirit into the atmosphere. Ed Stoker and his orchestra are gaining considerable popularity at the Dansante as well as over the radio station KSI. Stoker is also connected with the National Theatre Supply Company.

Christmas Week will also be the Victory Theatre's fourth anniversary week, commencing December 24th.

Dave Farquhar, branch manager for Warner Brothers in this city, is in Idaho territory.

All of the Fox sales representatives are busy in their respective territories this week.

Atlanta

THE Howard Theatre in Atlanta, Publix de luxe house, celebrated its seventh anniversary last week, Manager Ernest Morrison having arranged a special program of entertainment for the occasion.

Universal's Atlanta branch, announces Ben Y. Cammack, manager, is enthusiastically at work on the company's annual week, called "Universal Joy Week."

The M-G-M Club entertained at an informal dance on the roof garden of the Cecil Hotel last Saturday evening from 9 to 12 o'clock. This club is composed of the personnel of M-G-M's Atlanta branch and famous for its social functions.

F. F. Ricksecker, Southern sales manager for the Robert Morton Organ Company, passed through Atlanta the other day on his way to New Orleans and other points in the territory.

Among exhibitor visitors to Atlanta last week were:

G. L. Wynn, of the Ritz Theatre, Newnan, Ga.; Bill Woods, of the Belle Theatre, Gadsden, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Odom, of the Pastime Theatre, Sandersville, Ga.; J. W. English, of the Seminole Theatre, Homestead, Fla.; C. B. Ellis, manager of F B O's Jacksonville branch; Charlie Oswald, Publix booker, Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Clements, of the Star Theatre, Perry, Ga.; C. S. Smith, of the Alamo Theatre, from the Big U office, New York, spent the week in Universal's Atlanta branch.

Frank Hudson became a member of Fox's Atlanta branch sales force this week.

Every case scheduled for consideration was disposed of by the Atlanta Joint Board of Arbitration at a session this week, which consumed all of Tuesday and part of Wednesday. Thirty cases were arbitrated.

Major John W. Quillan, president of Enterprise Film Corporation, with headquarters in Atlanta, returned the latter part of last week from Charlotte, N. C.

O. L. Freeman, ad sales manager of the Atlanta office of Paramount, made a trip through the Carolinas last week.

Harry G. Ballance, Southern district manager of Paramount, with headquarters in Atlanta, left early last week for Dallas, Tex.

Mrs. Anna Aiken Patterson, editor of Weekly Film Review, left last Thursday night for Florida, where she will remain for a week.

Willard C. Patterson, Southern district manager of Universal theatres, left Thursday night for Florida for a visit to several of the company's houses in that state.

It is reported that Alexander Pantages, multi-millionaire owner Newnan, Ga., and O. C. Lam, of the Rome Enterprises, Rome, Ga., visited Film Row this week.

P. C. Bryan, Fox's Atlanta branch manager, made a tripe through South Georgia this week.

W. G. Minder, Tiffany's Southern division manager, spent last week in New Orleans and adjacent towns.

H. Frust, booking representative of the Pantages theatre circuit and pioneer west coast vaudeville magnate, will visit Birmingham within the next two weeks to acquaint himself with conditions in this city and the South generally. Locally, he will confer with Walter Fenney, manager of the Pantages Theatre, and officials of the Pan-Ala Amusement Company.

One of the most important innovations to reach Birmingham is the installation of the Fox-Case Movietone in the Ritz Theatre. Vernon Reaver is manager of the Ritz.

C. R. Beachamn, manager Atlanta branch of First National, spent two days in Birmingham the past week and visited his many friends along the local rialto.

John W. Mangham, Jr., Atlanta manager of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, also visited the Magic City and made several important sales.

The Norwood Theatre, local suburban house, has been sold by John W. Peck, Sr., to Ben Jaffe, who also operates the Palace, Ensley and Dixie theatres, uptown.

Seattle

SEATTLE this week played host to several visitors of more than average importance in the film world—Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation; Sam Katz, president of Publix Theatres; Nicholas Schenck, president of Metro-Glodwyn-Mayer, and Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres. The officials were here inspecting the new Publix-Seattle theatre, now being rushed to completion for the opening about January 27, and were the guests of Hershel Stuart, Northwest division manager for West Coast. The Seattle theatre will be a Publix house, operated by Wesco, and will seat 3,000 persons.

A. F. Hickox, special representative from the New York office of Warner Bros., arrived in this city last week and is at Manager Carl Stern's exchange, talking over sales matters with the local men.

Announcement was made last week by Bob Bender, retiring president of the M. P. T. O. W., of the winners in the recent ticket sales contest held in this city for the Motion Picture Theatrical Pot Pourri. First prize of $40 went to Miss Dorothy Potts of the Capitol theatre, second prize of $20 to Mrs. Peggy Bradt of the Roycroft theatre, third prize of $20 to Harry Fox of the President theatre and $20 to Miss Vesta Waddell of the Paramount exchange, and other cash prizes of $10 to Al Rosenberg of De Luxe Theatres, Inc., and Jack Bower of the First National exchange.

Eddie Peabody, dynamic master of ceremonies, who played sixteen weeks in Seattle this summer, and has just closed six weeks at the Broadway theatre in Portland, opened a four weeks' engagement at West Coast's Broadway theatre in Tacoma last week. He succeeds Ollie Wallace, "clown prince of rhythm," and Wallace, in turn, goes back to Portland, where he first made his debut as a stage entertainer.

Jimmy Beale, popular Northwest film salesman, resigned from the sales staff of the local Universal exchange last week, and has accepted the position of Portland branch manager for Tiffany Productions. He leaves for the Oregon city this week to line up his location and sales staff, prior to the opening of his offices next month.

Rolla Duncan, well known exhibitor of this territory, spent a short time on film row last week and announced that his new Avalon theatre in Olympia, Washington, will be ready for opening early next spring. It will be a 600-seat house, located on Fourth avenue, directly across the street from the old Rex theatre, and will run on a 15c. admission policy.

Spirits are high around the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange this week, following the announcement by Manager Ben Fish to the effect that A. J. Sullivan, local sales representative, landed "Third in the U. S." in the M-G-M national sales standings last week, only one-half of one per cent behind the two leaders from the East. Max Rubenfeld, Morris Saffle and J. A. Becker, also connected with the Seattle sales staff, are ranking sixth, seventh and eighth. Manager Fish considers that he has a right to smile, with four men among the highest ten.

William B. McCurdy, Northwest representative for Henry Duffy, Pacific Coast stock producer operating the President theatre here, announced last week that the Music Box theatre, which houses the Duffy Players in Portland, will be razed next May to make room for a store and office building. The Duffys, consequently, are planning a house at Broadway and Salmon streets, directly opposite West Coast's Broadway theatre.

A. H. Huot, district manager of Portland and Seattle territories for F. B. O., returned last week from Oregon, after an extended sales trip around his entire territory with J. Frank Shea, F. B. O.'s Western division manager. They were accompanied on the trip by "Tillie" Withers, head of the Portland branch offiec.

"Red" Corcoran, Seattle college boy who has been associated with West Coast for the last two seasons as a novelty entertainer, opened an engagement with Hermie King's orchestra at the Fifth Avenue theatre this week, following a long run at the Broadway in Portland. With Oscar Taylor, he gives Hermie's group two of the best musical specialists on the West Coast eircuit.

And still they move to the new Film Row—this time it's Columbia Film Exchange. This week Manager Bill Kelly's crew are busy getting located at 2404 First Avenue, having moved from the old quarters at 2018 Third Avenue last week-end. Their new office is directly adjoining that of the National Theatre Supply Company.

A. B. Shankland, former exhibitor of Yacolt, Washington, last week announced that he has taken over the operation of the Una theatre in Portland, formerly the Powell Valley theatre.

J. A. Charlesworth, who recently the new Publix theatre in Portland, Ore., to that group, has decided upon leased the downtown location for another theatre venture, and is at present planning a 1750 seat house at Fiftieth avenue and Foster road in Portland. It is an ideal neighborhood site that was given up by the Saxe theatre interests of Oregon last season.

The John Danz Circuit of theatres in downtown Seattle, which has been growing constantly larger during recent months, will be known in the future as the Sterling Chain Theatres, Inc., according to announcement made by Mr. Danz last week. The Sterling Chain Theatres is the name of the circuit's holding company, also.

Y. Darrell, special exploitation specialist, is at present located at the Cooperative Film Exchange in this city, assisting Manager J. W. Davis in selling and exploitation on some of the new state right features being distributed in this territory.

Frank Leon, former head organist at the Coliseum theatre here, is now presiding at the console of the Wurlitzer in the Liberty theatre, West Coast's First avenue house.

Following the success of the first short subject Movietone reel at his Blue Mouse theatre in this city last week, John Hamrick has announced that the new Movietone News Reel distributed by Fox will be a regular weekly feature at his house. It is probable that the same situation will hold good in the Portland and Tacoma Blue Mouse theatres also.

The entire sales staff of Manager L. A. Samuelson's local Pathe exchange gathered in this city last week to meet W. W. Black, representative of the educational branch of Pathe from the New York home office. Mr. Black came here from Portland, and spent some time discussing the sales possibilities of the company's educational reels.

St. Louis

THE old Hippodrome Theatre, 17 South Sixth street, St. Louis, Mo., has been condemned by Building Commissioner E. E. Christopher. The old structure is in very bad shape. The Hippodrome was closed several years ago. At one time it was the most popular amusement place in St. Louis and actually played to overflow crowds at every performance.

It is reported that W. D. Trout has purchased the Lyric Theatre, Houston, Mo., from W. W. Paulding.

The Star, Grand Tower, Ill., closed on December 17.

Max Weiner has taken over the Liberty Theatre, Bernie, Mo., formerly operated by Herman Ferguson.

F. E. Schmidt has sold the Strand Theatre, Pocahontas, Ill., to John Delaurenti.

The Princess Theatre, Blackwater, Mo., was destroyed by fire recently.

Raymond & Garrett have transferred to H. A. Garrett the New Lyric Theatre, Kennett, Mo.

The Fairland Theatre, Alsey, Ill., has been closed.

Maurice Stahl, manager of the Wellston Theatre, 6228 Easton avenue, Wellston, Mo., was held up at Easton and Evergreen avenues, at 10:45 p.m. December 11 and robbed of $470, the Sunday receipts of the show house. The robbers also took Stahl's automobile but abandoned it two blocks away.

W. T. Warford, Eldorado, Ill., is advertising a theatre for sale. He states the sale is necessary to settle an estate.

Out of town exhibitors seen along Picture Row during the past week were: Bob Clarke, Effingham, Ill.; J. H. Schuckert, Chester, Ill.; Messrs. Paul and Overton, Winchester, Ill.; Oscar Wesley, Gillespie, Ill.; Elvin Weeks, Staunton, Ill.; Barney Dubinsky, Jefferson City; H. A. Garrett, Kennett, Mo.; "Doc" C. A. Tetley and C. Karsch, of Flat River and Farmington, Mo.

Max Roth, who has been acting manager of the local Fox exchange since Claude W. McKean resigned to become itnerested in Premier Pictures Corporation, has gone to New York City to spend the Christmas holidays.

L. W. Lau plans to open his new theatre on the Lemay Ferry Road in Luxemburg, Mo., shortly after New Year's.

Joe Green is now managing the Yale Theatre in South St. Louis.

C. Densmore Hill, district manager for Pathe, has had added to his district Oklahoma City and Memphis. He also looks after St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines and Omaha.

John E. O'Toole, manager of the local Pathe branch, now has charge of all of Pathe business in St. Louis. Andy R. Deietz has been made salesmanager, while Arthur La Plant is head booker.

Paul A. Schmuck, formerly short subjects manager for Pathe in St. Louis, has been transferred to Philadelphia as sales manager for that branch. The Pathe sales organization presented him with a beautiful traveling bag, while the members of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade gave him a handsome brief case.

During his brief stay in St. Louis, Schmuck won himself many friends and it was with considerable regret they lost him. However, they are confident he will more than make good in the responsible post he will hold down in the Quaker City.

Jack Hellman, brother of the famous Sam, who formerly was Paramount exploiteer in Minneapolis, Minn., is now publicity director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in St. Louis.

New Theatre Projects Continue; Others Ready to Open

CONSTRUCTION of new theatres is still going ahead at a rapid rate despite past rumors that some of the circuit and independent theatre operators would curtail building. Most houses under way at the present time are of the de luxe type, supplanting the smaller and out of date theatres which have been doomed for some time.

A new million dollar theatre for Oakland, Cal., was announced December 17 by Henry Duffy, prominent Pacific Coast producer. The seventh playhouse in the Duffy chain, it will be called the Duffwin.

The theatre will be on 17th Street, between San Pablo and Telegraph, with a 105-foot frontage. The Income Properties Company of California, of which Fred Proctor is president, are to build the structure. This is the concern that built the new Elks' Club and the Orpheum Theatre in Oakland. The deal was concluded through Charles Rosenthal, Jr., of Milton Meyer & Co., of San Francisco.

The new theatre will be ready for opening September 1, 1928, Duffy has announced. It will embody the latest improvements, and will be the most modern temple of amusement in the West, and will be even more beautiful than his palatial El Capitan at Hollywood.

Contracts for construction of a 1,500-seat house at the southwest corner of Chestnut and Steiner streets, San Francisco, Cal., have been let and construction will start at once. The property has been leased for 99 years from Louis Lurie by Edward B. Baron, formerly general manager of the Herbert L. Rothchild interests, and Carol A. Nathan, for eight years in charge of Carl Laemmle's Universal Northern California motion picture buildings. Their house will be a Class A structure, carrying out many innovations conceived by the two veteran theatre managers during their service as executives of the two large companies.

Once the new Marina house is completed work will be started on others in various parts of the city, announced Baron and Nathan. They plan an elaborate chain of neighborhood houses for the bay cities and Northern California.

Contract for the construction of the new Tennessee Theatre by the Publix Theatre Corporation at Knoxville, Tenn., at a cost of approximately $1,000,000, has been awarded to the George A. Fuller Co., New York City, and work will start within a week.

The theatre, capable of seating at least 2,000 people, will be one of the largest and finest in the South. The project has been "hanging fire" for over a year, causing rumors to become current that the corporation had abandoned plans for the structure. The exterior will be of brick, with an expensive interior, details of which are not yet known.

Advice received from Portland last week indicates that Harry Poole, Oregon exhibitor, who now has the Pelican Theatre about ready for formal opening in Klamath Falls, has already signed leases and made arrangements for the construction of another house in the same city. The second theatre will be a smaller venture, seating about 600, located on one of the main business intersections.

I. M. Halperin, of the Publix Theatre department, is now in Birmingham, Ala., superintending the work attendant to the opening of the new Alabama on December 26. He is accompanied by Rodney Bush, now connected with the Publix publicity department and formerly manager of the local Galax. They are co-operating with Manager Sidney Dannenberg.

The Empress Theatre, Milwaukee, will be closed after January 1st for considerable remodeling, enlarged to 1,400 seats and redecorated, while Earl Rice's new Egyptian Theatre on Teutonia Avenue, Milwaukee, will be opened on December 23, thereby adding 1,800 seats to the northwest side.

M. Marks, who operates the Venange Theatre, Oil City, Pa., has started construction on the new Colonial-Drake, to cost in the neighborhood of $800,000. It will take in a whole square, and consist of 13 stores, offices, billiard hall and bowling alleys. The theatre will seat 2,254, 350 of which will be on the mezzanine balcony. It will open in the Fall of 1928.

A. Manant, who operates the Dixie Theatre, Carnegie, Pa., has recently opened the new Grand Theatre seating 800.

The new Fischer-Paramount Theatre, a 1,400-seat atmospheric theatre of the most modern type, recently threw open its doors in Oshkosh, Wis.

The Fischer-Paramount is of the Spanish atmospheric type. It is a moving picture and vaudeville house, moving pictures to be shown during the week with vaudeville added over the week-end. It has a $50,000 organ and a twelve-man orchestra. Chas. Keller & Son, of Milwaukee, designed it. Frank W. Fischer, managing director of the Fischer-Paramount theatres, and builder of that circuit, conceived the theatre and promoted it.

COLORTONES

SILVERSHEET

Expertly developed colortones, meeting the needs of any type of projection lamp, regular arc, reflector arc, high intensity arc or incandescent Mazda equipment are built into every Silversheet surface.

The secret of these bronzes is in the scientific mixing and application. The resulting colortones, adapted perfectly to your individual projection lamps produce sharp, clear pictures of unusually good depth. They are of unsurpassed value in interpreting the colored pictures now coming into such wide use.

Just as the Silversheet is the ONLY screen with the genuine Knobel-Built Specification Surface, it is also the ONLY screen offering Colortones, the latest advance in the screen maker's art. To be sure of getting a colortone Surface, be sure to specify a Silversheet.

When an especially durable screen is desired, we recommend the installation of a Tear-Proof Silversheet. This is a screen with the Silversheet Specification Colortone surface built on a non-tearable, abuse-resisting puncture-proof canvas base that successfully resists damage that would ruin a lighter base screen.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Uncle Tom's Cabin"—Universal, Lafayette Theatre, Detroit

News: "Registers as one of the most effective thrill stunts in movie catalog. 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' downright, frank melodrama, a tear-wringer if there ever was one, but beautifully produced. For sentimental reasons alone this current Uncle Tom should live as long as play."

Evening Times: "Picture a humdinger for action. Liza's escape across ice and rescue at brink of falls is gem for thrills. Simon Legree's brutality provides climaxtic punch which sends shivers through collective bones of spectators. Sunday's first night audience laughed, cried and applauded spontaneously all through story. Their reception indicated that picture will have long and prosperous run."

Free Press: "The screen version leaves all of old-time 'stupendous, mammoth, gigantic'—this has ever been accepted way of advertising an 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' show—production quite in discard. Nothing that most loyal Uncle Tom theatregoer has ever seen will again be able to stand up under its superlative adjectives. Ultimate in reality has been attained by the director in filming of story. It was ambitious undertaking, carefully, prodigally, sincerely carried to accomplishment. Undoubtedly one of very finest cinema achievements to date. To everyone who had part in its making should bring increased fame, for it gives new life to classic story and reveals period in history of America with which every American should be familiar."

"The Drop Kick"—First National, Grand Theatre, Pittsburgh

Sun-Telegraph: "Interesting picture throughout. Football sequences realistic in the extreme and story has the merit of plausibility. Seasonable offering."

Post-Gazette: "Exciting and appealing."

"The Gorilla"—First National, Madison Theatre, Detroit

Times: Thrills galore. Goes limit in exploiting eerie and spooky circumstances. Besides a car load of laughs is provided through presence of Murray and Kelsey. Santell's impeccable direction of a finely woven plot plus the unlimited resources of camera in creating weird effects further classify 'The Gorilla' as the peer of its field. Murray's work once more stamps him as a farceur of the first water."

Free Press: "Will probably be just as popular and successful as play. Just chockful of thrills and shiv-v-ery with unexpected. And while everybody in theatre sits on edge wondering-what-will-happen next there is an accompaniment of comedy that makes for hilarious laughter. Murray his very funny self as Garrity. Cast of superior merit."

News: "Enough suspense. . . . Strange things begin to happen immediately after opening title. . . . and screams and laughs speed up until human perpetrator of crimes is run down. Thrills and fun."

"My Best Girl"—United Artists, Rialto Theatre, New York City

Morning Telegraph: "'America's Sweetheart' more than ever' My Best Girl." Is worthy of name of its sponsors, and worthy of Mary Pickford. Is best thing Mary or United Artists has had for long time. Picture just loaded with sort of instances that leave you with tears in your eyes and a smile on your lips. With catch in your throat, but heart that is happy. I don't know any finer accomplishment in any art than renew faith of people in youth and life and love. Mary Pickford and 'My Best Girl' do just that. Mary herself is marvel. Crown rests securely on her curly locks. She is truly 'America's Sweetheart,' and little daughter of whole wide world. Is sweet and clean and wholesome, credit to screen, pride of industry, and last word in rebuttal to evil, hypocritical enemies who slander cinema. Is a sweetheart of a picture."

"The Gaucho"—United Artists, Liberty Theatre, New York City

News: "'The Gaucho' rode the hills and plains of South American screen effects furiously, daringly, thrillingly. A good—great—glorious time was had by all present. Or so one would have judged by applause. Lupe Valez, decidedly possessing, gives a spirited performance. She was 'made' last night. Tomorrow she'll be heralded as another discovery in way of cinema stars. All of Doug's famous acrobatic tricks are in this one, and a brand new one, called throwing the bola."

Times: "Magnificent settings. Fairbanks is no less agile than he has been in other productions. He not only vaults into saddle with amazing speed, but when he escapes from a prison cell he performs antics that even simians might envy. He clambers up trees as no South Sea Islander could, and then swings from branch to branch, finally counting on a young tree to bend over and let him drop quietly to ground."

World: "Brisk, colorful, romantic story through which star moves with all gay caperings which have attached themselves to him through years. A good, obvious, robust, high geared show. Ought to be a success. Hero is found early in the story slashing his way to hearts of all those around him, eventually rising in his fury to a hazardous situation. He is as agile, as graceful and as impervious to danger as ever. Acts magnificently."

Telegraph: "Douglas Fairbanks has scored once again! Enthusiasm and whole-hearted applause marked production's instantaneous success. Brief synopsis does not begin to register the full value of the picture. A hundred little episodes each skilfully calculated to win tribute of laugh, or gasp, or tear. A hundred other sequences amazing in their beauty, or their originality—or both. Pictorial composition is superb, and direction is all that can be desired. Lupe Valez a 'find.' Doug simply wonderful. Handsome, graceful, agile as ever, his histrionic ability defies description or competition. All in all, a mighty picture! One of the few it is actually imperative that you see. 'The Gaucho' is the spirit of romantic adventure."

Mirror: "Doug a charmingly audacious bandit whose will is law and whose law is wild. He is the epitome of grace, is this 'Gaucho' Fairbanks. Spectacular climax. Races to hair-raising typically Fairbanks finale. Is packed with the zip, the go, the romance of the Doug so popular with picture-goers."

Evening World: "Breath-taking beauty and thrills. Lupe Valez superb as flashing-eyed little vixen who captured 'The Gaucho' for her very own. A picture about which Fairbanks may feel proud. Great entertainment and will draw throngs wherever it shows."

Tribune: "'How do you pronounce 'The Gaucho?' 'I pronounce it excellent.' Nothing but perfect performances are found in this picture."

Journal: "Thrills first nighters. The usual Douglas Fairbanks effervescence. Doug again picturesque adventurer, daring everything with a confident grin and a romantic deviltry. Valez is a sensation. There are plenty of thrills. He leaps up and down balconies and roofs, climbs up trees, swings himself about on branches, takes on all comers, and performs all of his agile and picturesquely heroic stunts. Fairbanks magnificent."

Telegram: "Falls neatly into best Fairbanks traditions. Which means that it is a gay, swashbuckling, quite improbable and generally enjoyable entertainment. A speedy and glamorous drama which you cannot afford to miss."

In America's finest theatres

The supremacy of Wurlitzer music is best manifested in the impressive list of theatres equipped with Wurlitzer Organs. Many of America's finest theatres are included in this list. The box office value of the Wurlitzer has proved to be of such great consequence that owners have given them the most enthusiastic endorsement ever accorded any musical instrument. Theatre owners seeking a musical attraction can do no better than following the example of the leaders in their field by installing a Wurlitzer. They are built in various sizes and styles to comply with the requirements of all types of theatres.

York Air Cooling for Theatres

The York Carbon Dioxide Compressor

Have the World's largest organization of refrigerating engineers give you the facts and figures!

The York carbon dioxide system of theatre air cooling and conditioning has been installed in some of the finest houses in the country—houses operating under Loew, Fox, Keith, Stanley and other prominent managements.

It is significant that such operators have specified "York" cooling systems for their theatres—a fact which, in itself, is a most convincing evidence of York engineering competence.

The York organization is the largest and most far flung organization of refrigerating engineers in the world. Put your problems up to them.

Link Company,

Gentlemen:-

The fact that you are now installing in my new Astor Theatre my third LINK organ (a large three manual) speaks louder than anything I can write as to my enthusiasm for your organs.

You may also be interested to know that since installing my first LINK I have been offered several organs at a much cheaper price than yours. But, as an old exhibitor, my experience with other organs has proved to me that in spite of higher first cost the LINK is the cheapest organ I ever bought and this without taking into consideration that just from a musical and tonal stand point, the LINK Organ is in a class by itself.

If I were to write volumes of superlatives, I don't believe, gentlemen, I could say any more.

Sincerely,
M B Horwitz

WHEN a successful circuit owner has proved our claims of being the makers of the finest theatre organs—when hundreds of other exhibitors are constantly adding their words of praise—can there be room for questioning which organ you will finally select for installation in your new theatre.

The Link Organ is the last word in perfection of details— the most costly yet cheapest organ to buy. Let us tell you about the distinctive characteristics that have pushed Link Orchestral Unit Organs to the front place among America's finest instruments.

If your theatre is not included in this list of Carrier Conditioned houses, you are not giving your patrons all they have a right to expect in the way of health and comfort. Proper air conditioning in the modern theatre draws patrons just as surely as does its beauty and the excellence of its entertainment. And the average patron of the better houses today is no longer satisfied with the ordinary ventilating system.

You cannot afford to ignore this public demand for theatre comfort—not if you are a progressive showman. And the answer to this public demand—if you would have complete air conditioning—is Carrier Equipment. Complete in every respect: operating to produce cool, non-humid comfort in the summer; creating a tempered, healthfully humidified atmosphere within the theatre during the winter; diffusing Manufactured Weather* to every part of the house without the slightest draught; automatically controlling the conditions of temperature and humidity found most pleasing to the patrons. These are the accomplishments of the Carrier acceptance of complete responsibility for all of the details of design and installation of air conditioning, refrigeration, and control equipment.

Operator of Theatre Chains, Owners of Individual Theatres, and Theatre Architects are invited to investigate the new adaptation of the Carrier Patented System to the Conditioning of Small Theatres. Write for the book "Theatre Cooling and Conditioning." Now is the time for us to prepare your theatres for next summer. Ask for a visit from one of our engineers.

Ward Leonard—Vitrohm Dimmers

Vitrohm Dimmers mounted over projection room control all house lighting effects. [Upper illustration]

Handles providing control by operator of dimmers mounted over projection room. [Lower illustration]

WHEN the owners and designers of theatres discuss lighting control apparatus they are interested entirely in results which necessitate a "control" system that will be dependable and accurate.

Apparatus employing Ward Leonard Vitrohm Dimmers is most frequently specified for these important installations. Here are some of the reasons.

Vitreous Enamel Insulation.

110-step control, all steps equally effective in even, flickerless light reduction.

Greater lamp "watt" capacity for space occupied.

Unit space engineering, each plate in the dimmer bank immediately replaceable by one of a different capacity to compensate for load changes.

Continuous duty operation at full rated load on any step without excessive heating.

Dimmer units enabling banking to any desired capacity.

All moving parts, including contact buttons, ground or machined, thus insuring smooth action.

Resistive element of plates permanently and completely protected from disintegration.

Cost of systems employing Vitrohm Dimmers the same or less than that of other equivalent lamp "watt" capacity systems.

Only in vitreous enamelled Ward Leonard Vitrohm Theatre Dimmers are all of these essential features found. Send your dimmer specifications to us for estimate. 25 years of manufacturing and research experience is fully at your disposal.

for Atmospheric Theatres

The Appeal of Light in Motion

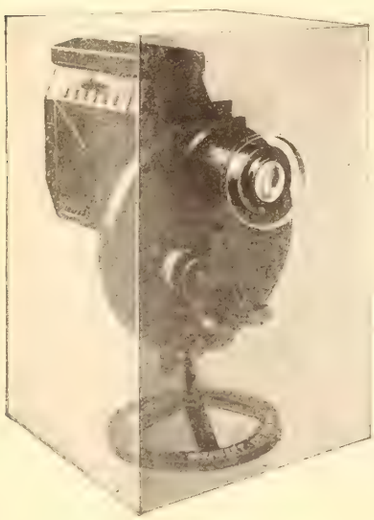
A canopy of clouds, moving majestically across a field of twinkling stars! Atmosphere! Illusion! The romance of pictures viewed beneath nocturnal skies! The atmospheric theatre, combining light and motion, produces these effects that carry an almost irresistible appeal.

Brenograph Junior creates this—and more. Animated scenic effects, projected back stage from the wings, from overhead or, in small theatres from the projection room, are now available, at a minimum cost—through Brenograph Junior.

Its interchangeable discs, projected at any desired speed, give you, easily and realistically, moving clouds, flying birds and swiftly passing country panoramas. Or, at a moment's notice, you may have a driving rain, falling flowers or ocean waves.

Let us send you an illustrated folder describing Brenograph Junior in full and listing moving scenic and color effects now available. Free on request.



BRENKERT LIGHT PROJECTION CO.

BRENOGRAPH Junior

Reliable and built to remain so

Like every unit in the complete line of Brenkert projectors and lighting devices, Brenograph Junior was designed to produce certain results, effectively and well. It is absolutely reliable.

It may be operated over a wide range of speeds and is automatic and reliable over the entire speed range. Brenograph Junior is especially well adapted to short range work for covering large areas, and its automatic operation and compactness make it ideal for remote control, with the origin of the effects hidden from the patrons of the theatre. It is decidedly to your advantage to write for full details.

For concealed work. Brenograph Junior with its motor driven effects and automatic operation requires a space but 24" wide 30" high and 30" deep. No matter where located it may easily be controlled from the main switchboard.

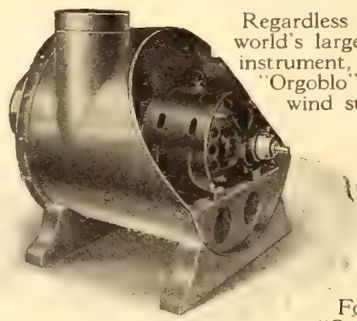
Avalon Theatre, Chicago — John Eberson, Architect

Spencer Cleaning System and Orgoblo installed in this fine theatre, the Avalon, Chicago.

Spencer Cleaning Systems and "Orgoblo" Installed in America's Finest Theatres

The choice of America's finest theatres endorsed by leading theatre architects. That is the enviable standing enjoyed by Spencer equipment in the motion picture field. ¶The tremendous task of keeping the luxurious carpets, draperies, floors, upholstery, etc., immaculately clean in our modern show palaces is thoroughly accomplished by the Spencer Central Cleaning System. ¶ Equally efficiently suitable Spencer Central Cleaning units are fulfilling the requirements of the smaller theatres. ¶ And in the same classes of fine theatres in which Spencer Central Cleaning Systems are installed, Orgoblos furnish wind for America's finest organs. ¶ To have Spencer installations in your theatre is to know that you have the best in efficiency of operation, durability and dependability.



SPENCER VACUUM CLEANERS

Spencer Vacuum Cleaning Systems are flexible, which enables the operator to clean aisles, underneath seats, the stage, wall furnishings, and the most inaccessible places with equal ease.

This dustless cleaning materially helps the ventilating problem and prolongs the life of the fabrics.

THE SPENCER STEEL "ORGOBLO" FOR ORGANS

Regardless of size—whether the world's largest organ or a small instrument, there is a Spencer "Orgoblo" to furnish the proper wind supply.

"Orgoblos" range in size from small 1–6 H. P. units suitable for student reed organs to mammoth 75 H. P. multi-stage, multi-pressure machines.

For years the Spencer "Orgoblo" has proved the most popular installation of its kind.

The Best Guide Is Experience

In every important particular—design, construction, cost of operation, accessibility, sturdiness, quality of presentation, etc., Simplex Projectors are of outstanding merit.

Built to meet the exacting requirements of the best theatres in the world, they guarantee every theatre the most economical and finest projection possible. And the highest quality of projection is positively one of the most valuable assests of any theatre large or small.

Every successful exhibitor will testify to the value of first class projection and to the importance of keeping projectors in working condition at all imes.

If your projection is below standard, make the necessary changes in your equipment now, whether it means installing new projectors or replacing worn parts.

Profit from the experience of others. Buy the tried and proven Simplex. There is a size and style to meet your requirements—for arc light or incandescent lamp projection. And buy only replacement parts made and guaranteed by the manufacturers of your projectors.

The Roxy Theater, New York City. Architects, Walter W. Ahlschlager, Gaetano Cret and Corbett, Harrison & MacMurray, New York. Plumbing Contractor, P. S. Henderson, Inc., New York. Heating Contractors, B. F. Welch & Co., New York. Crane plumbing and heating materials specified.

In the Roxy—world's largest theater

To give movie audiences the ultimate in beautiful and luxurious playhouses, the Roxy Theater of New York was planned.

It is the world's largest motion picture theater; richly ornamented in every detail of proscenium, foyer, and retiring rooms; possessing throughout a palatial magnificence. Its immediate popularity proves the soundness of the theory upon which it was built—that the motion picture public wants the finest in playhouses.

The quick appreciation of movie-goers, when builders go to great lengths to increase their pleasure and comfort, is evidenced by their attendance at this and hundreds of other beautiful new theaters.

For the Roxy, as for so many of the leading theaters, Crane plumbing and heating fixtures, valves, and fittings were chosen.

More than a Catalog---Now Ready

To the astute showman, the Major Catalog—now ready—will be an exposition of ways and means to improve his theater facilities to bring more money in at the box office.

All the energies of the ever-growing Major organization have been fused into this group of products presented herewith. Each unit has gone through many times the perfecting process that begins with sound engineering, and is carried along by gruelling wear afforded by exacting experience.

Vision to see the need earlier; ability to meet it better; coupled with the managing expertness that brings the result to you at the lowest cost, maintenance and life considered; is a brief summary of the reasons for Major success.

As time goes on, and new and different lighting equipment is produced, the Major banner will lead the field, in the future as in the past.

THERE should be at least one in every city and community of this new and still very ancient style of theatre interior. It is no more than the Greek and Roman amphitheatre of ancient days redesigned for a modern indoor theatre with the whole range of beautiful decoration, and modern conveniences and comfort made possible.

Replacing the hard stone seats of the ancient amphitheatres are comfortable and beautiful upholstered chairs such as American Seating Company has furnished the Universal Theatre of Brooklyn, here illustrated. This latest triumph of John Eberson is decorated with CRAFTEX

Read what he says:

"Herewith beg to transmit to you a few very interesting photographs of our Avalon Theatre. This, our latest 'brain child'—a Persian Atmospheric Theatre, seems to have met with great favor on the part of all those who have seen this really wonderful Oriental interior. I know you will be interested if I tell you that the unusual Persian plaster texture effects on the walls of our auditorium and foyer, executed in Craftex, have aroused keen interest. My decorator especially is elated with the results obtained. Considering that we have had to apply Craftex pretty heavily to work it finger and palm fashion, these textures when finished stand up wonderfully well, took the tinting remarkably and have given us a play of light and shadows in a manner never before achieved with any other decorative compo."

"I use HOCKADAY in all my theatres."

—JOHN EBERSON

Wherever polychrome, gold leaf, and other costly decorative treatment enters lavishly into the plans of the better class showhouse, Hockaday is usually specified as the undercoat. Between plaster and final embellishment Hockaday acts as a "coast defense." It stops limeburn, air-checking and suction, saving the delicate decorations. In this field, especially, Hockaday has established a reputation as the paint that brings down up-keep.

The following theatres representing the accommodations for over half of Chicago's Theatre goers, are Hockadayed:

AMERICAN Terra Cotta

CHICAGO AND INDIANAPOLIS

THE rapid and altogether astonishing growth of the so-called Atmospheric Theatre, as a popular attraction as well as a distinctive architectural form, is responsible for many new developments of paramount interest to theatre owners. And the reflection of this situation is to be found here in this new presentation of recent examples manifesting advances which have been made under the expanding art of the originator of a new phase in the evolution of art allied with showmanship.

The pages which follow furnish reproductions in full color of the architectural and decorative features revealing the underlying principle as well as the method of execution of the idea embodied in the Atmospheric style. Since color is a leading, if not the leading factor in the atmospheric effects it is only through a use of color in reproduction that an accurate conception of the style can be conveyed.

Comparison of these new examples of the Atmospheric Theatre with those presented in a previous issue, published June 12, 1926, emphasizes the many interesting advancements and refinements developed in an availing effort to extend the scope of original models and pictorial conceptions.

Equally interesting is such a comparison from the standpoint of its stimulation to thoughts of what the future may hold for the artist who has found in this style a medium richly endowed with opportunity for unfettered expression of imagination directed toward the development of new fancies and that most coveted showmanship ideal, Novelty.

NEW THEATRES FOR OLD

Originator of the Atmospheric Style Discusses the Formula in Which Art and Showmanship Meet

Illustrated with Sketches from the Author's Sketch Book

TO give the "old" theatre new interest—to make the new theatre draw new crowds and attract a larger patronage! That idea—more briefly expressed in the headline, "new theatres for old"—is the crux of the problem facing the theatre architect who is ambitious to take his rightful place in the scheme of modern showmanship.

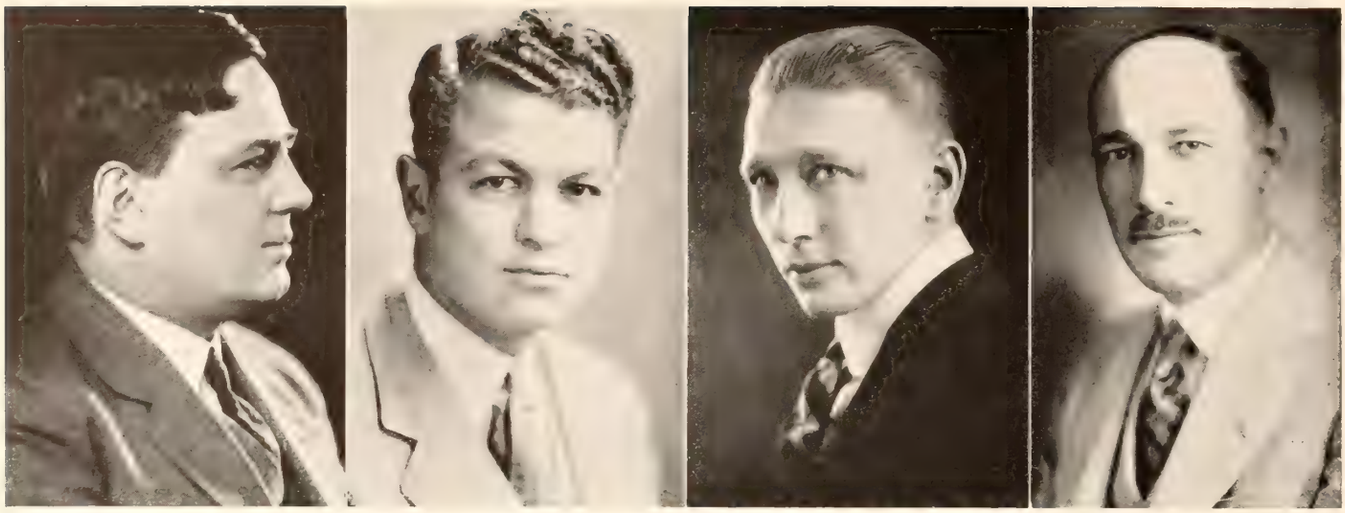
I believe that Wm. A. Johnston gave me the inspiration and the thought which prompted me to deviate from the typical formal theatres and thus lay the foundation for the original conception upon which the so-called Atmospheric Theatre has been developed.

I once read in one of Mr. Johnston's editorials in MOTION PICTURE NEWS that it is a climax of showmanship to be able to make your audience feel at home, to make them feel that they have a most important role to play in the entertainment which they are attending, and that it is most necessary to create a warm and friendly atmosphere in the theatre.

To be a successful theatre architect, one must be a showman—of this I was convinced. So, struck by the idea expressed in that editorial, I turned my mind to analysing that thought and finally decided I knew just what Mr. Johnston meant by "warm" and "friendly."

It was only natural, therefore, for me to direct my efforts towards and development of a different conception of atmosphere carried out in architectural treatment. A form and style that represented somesomething new, but which was imbued with character and individuality. In accordance with the specifications thus formulated, we designed our first "atmospheric" theatre—an Italian Garden. Then we went on and designed a Spanish Patio, and further we went and designed a Persian Courtyard.

The atmospheric theatre, I believe, has solved the problem stated in the headline to this discourse. And my belief rests upon an eminent authority—the actua records of theatres designed and built in accordance with the "atmospheric" principle.



Façade of a Neighborhood Theatre in Spanish Style with Floodlighted Tower

Naturally it has been a great pleasure to me that there have been opportunities in which my own enthusiasm was shared by owners whose capital went behind some of my plans, resulting in the creation of several unusual theatre edifices executed in the Atmospheric style.

However, I do believe the benefits derived from the development of the Atmospheric Theatre have been mutual. How true it is that "a man is only worth as much as he can do for others." I pride myself that I was able to take the pulse of the amusement loving public, and I believe that I have written an architectural recipe which pleases the patron and gratifies the exhibitor.

The wonderful development of the motion picture industry during less than a decade brought about the creation of a great number of palatial theatrical edifices. These mainly have been copies, in a more or less faithful fashion, of historical buildings, opera houses or palatial houses in great metropolitan centers abroad.

Ambition and competition among owners and architects in these enterprises had resulted in the elaboration of ornamentation and architectural effort, until I felt the saturation point—if I may use the term in this connection—had been reached, and that an appreciative amusement loving public could expect no more development in this direction. Under such conditions it was not unnatural that the elaboration of ornament should go to extremes and in some outbursts of the competitive spirit result in many cases where the ornament became oppressive and overshadowed the stage and screen presentations.

Another condition of vital importance—cost—arose in the wake of this trend. Huge investments involving sums sometimes far out of proportion to the potential earning power, are quickly reflected in the very policy of the theatre and create added problems for the showman, often resulting in top-heavy programs which in turn demand an increased admission. So that finally the theatre frequently finds itself wide of the mark as a resort for the masses—and particularly that element of the mass which is admittedly the backbone of the motion picture following—the "family trade."

Our first "atmospheric" design, the Majestic Theatre in Houston, Texas, has been the forerunner of over a hundred playhouses of this type in a comparatively short period of time. This rather quickly-won popularity may be attributed to the fact that these auditoriums are successfully different and are merely dignified imitations of nature glorifying classic architecture. Few innovations in the theatrical business have taken root as quickly as the Atmospheric Theatre.

Provides Indoor Entertainment with a Correct Outdoor Setting

There is a general reason for this—not only a specific one. The modern tendency in theatre construction covering the cinema field as well as that of the opera and vaudeville field, is to break up stock theatrical conventions and to introduce variety in the theatre building as well as in its program. It provides indoor entertainment with a correct outdoor setting.

We find it more difficult to design and execute a genuine "atmospheric" theatre than what we term a "formal" theatre. The necessary amount of detail work and study to create a consistent atmospheric theatre is endless. It is true—we are glorifying classic architecture, and are copying Mediterranean art in color, sculpture and form, but to make the illusion perfect requires not only a thorough understanding and knowledge of old world architecture, but we must also know how to transform and create these antique soft textured and interestingly polychromed buildings with modern tools and artcraft.

Unfortunately, misinterpretations of the idea behind the "atmospheric" theatre, have appeared in different sections of the country; on the other hand I saw some very beautiful examples of the atmospheric theatre designed by reputable architects, most cleverly executed and pleasingly decorated.

It must be very apparent to all those who have seen some of our genuine "atmospheric" theatres, that the real success of these auditoriums lies in the fact that we have spared no effort to be consistent in the execution of our work, and we have given all details both as to shape and color, the minutest attention and study.

To be really successful, and not just an imitator copying the work of others, we must historically, graphically and architecturally study the periods and old world localities which are furnishing the theme for our outdoor garden auditoriums.

Appeal of Color Important Factor in Success of Theatre

If our theatres are interesting and impressive it is because the very nature of the pastel coloring executed in hundreds of desired shades and colors, lends itself so well to the imagination of the average person, and as we linger and look about, our fancy is free to conjure endless tales of romance.

And thus, we are called "Colorists." And that is the reason we believe that our own creations of the "atmospheric" theatre have been so successful. By the "we" I mean my trained associates and friends of many years standing, such as A. C. Liska, A. O. Budina, Raymond Mork, A. Mercil, B. H. Armiger, and my son, Drew—we all work together.

Our designers and decorators are taught the art of appealing to the imagination of the public, and whenever you leave something to your imagination, you automatically and instantaneously create interest. Thus we furnish plans and designs, color schemes and plans for furnishings, all with the object point to appeal to the imagination of our patrons.

Our latest and most successful theatre is the new Avalon in Chicago. Chicago moviegoers are already inured to delights and luxuries in the temples in which they consume their cinemas, and it was a real problem to create in the City of Chicago,a playhouse which would be outstanding, but we believe we have succeeded.

I believe that in the new Avalon Theatre my boys have helped me to create the finest Oriental room ever built. The lighting effects especially are unusual. We often talk about the moonlit sky of the Mediterranean but at the Avalon our lighting effects have been designed to give us a sweet twilight effect. The two sides of the auditorium are unsymmetrically treated, showing in true architectural design the jeweled minarets of the Persian sacred shrine and temple towering towards heaven amid drooping palms and majestic shrubbery.

The ante-rooms and lobbies of the Avalon are brilliantly lighted and luxuriously furnished in genuine Persian furniture, specially imported from the Orient. Blue and yellow are the predominating colors and the Persian motif has been carried out to the most minute detail, achieving elaborate effects without the banal result of gaudiness.

Original Mosaics Executed to Fit Scheme of Oriental Atmosphere

Outstanding among the decorative features of the Avalon are the original mosiacs executed by Charles Morgan. As individual attractions as well as harmonizing elements importantly contributing to the atmospheric scheme of the Oriental architecture and decoration, these works of a rare and exquisite art deserve high rank among contemporary productions.

We conceive the scene, and the artist makes his own materials and portrays in his own way the murals which accent and at the same time enhance the "theatre picture."

Using a secret process, he makes his own materials in the form of small thin stone pellets. These at broken into small shapes and then cemented on surfaces to create the pastel mosaics. To me these mosaics represent the finest art of painting with broken stone. The charm of ante-rooms and foyers of the Avalon must in all respects be entirely credited to the unusual work of Charles Morgan, who found in this atmosphere the opportunity to excel in his art.

Being thoroughly familiar with Mr. Morgan's efforts in this line, I thought that the pastel mosiacs would lend themselves most effectively to the color treatment and the embellishment of an Oriental room I had in mind for the Avalon Theatre. When you visit this wonderful place I am sure that in viewing these mosiacs you will gain an impression of having really visited the mysterious East. There we were opportuned to picture Persia,—Persia, the rose-colored country of the Eastern hemisphere,—the land of sunshine and cobalt skies, and to us this western world is a land of enchantment and "Dreams come true."

In another sketch you see the street and market places busy at dawn like menageries with huge elephants bedecked with the luxurous red velvet cushioned houdahs and their georgeous gold bejeweled embroidered trappings. See how with their trunks swung low they amble with slow magnificence through the crowd of dancers and musicians. And the giraffes with heads held high following close upon the heels of this less stately friend The camel, the principal beast of burden of this land of sunshine is usually ragged but supercilious, glaring at all like sour old women. The saris of the women, the turbans and waistbands of the men, the flouting veils of our street dancers,—vermillion, magenta, orange, green, purple and turquoise,—a veritable rainbow of opalescence,—the necklaces, dozens of bracelets and anklet of the dancers catch the sunlight like myraids of tiny mirrors,—these mosaics recessed and incased in Persian tracery,—the skilful work of specially trained modelers artistically and colorfully polychromed in myriads of hues of color by the hand of artists which I had the pleasure to meet and train in works of my liking.

Behold the quietness and shade of this small pool where the numerous birds of brilliant plumage fly for refuge from the midday sun to plunge unmolested in the cool clear water. Behold the water carriers pause for a short siesta in the heat of the day to gaze in the pool and dream perhaps of more mysterious moonlight. The beholding of such scenes inspired the work which lead to the creation of the sweet and mysterious interior of our Avalon theatre.

Revealing Quaint Legends of an Ancient Civilization

Consider still another note the strong young slave has no time for siesta,—his master commands the fruit and vegetables shall be taken to the busy market place, and what slave dare disobey his master! Here, the market place!—how quaint and old worldish it sounds to us of the skyscraper cities,—but Persia,—that is different. Persia at the Avalon is different! It is there that the royal nabobs and lords gather to barter and exchange everything from fruit to human souls. The musicians beating on the tom-toms,—(you see one of these tom-toms in one of the niches in the men's smoking room) and strumming the stringed guitar-like instrument, and the dancers keeping up their almost continuous twisting and training with hands outstretched for a coin from all who pass, compel us to pause for a longer view.

An Italian Garden. Flowers and foliage surmounting a trellised garden wall with [illegible]

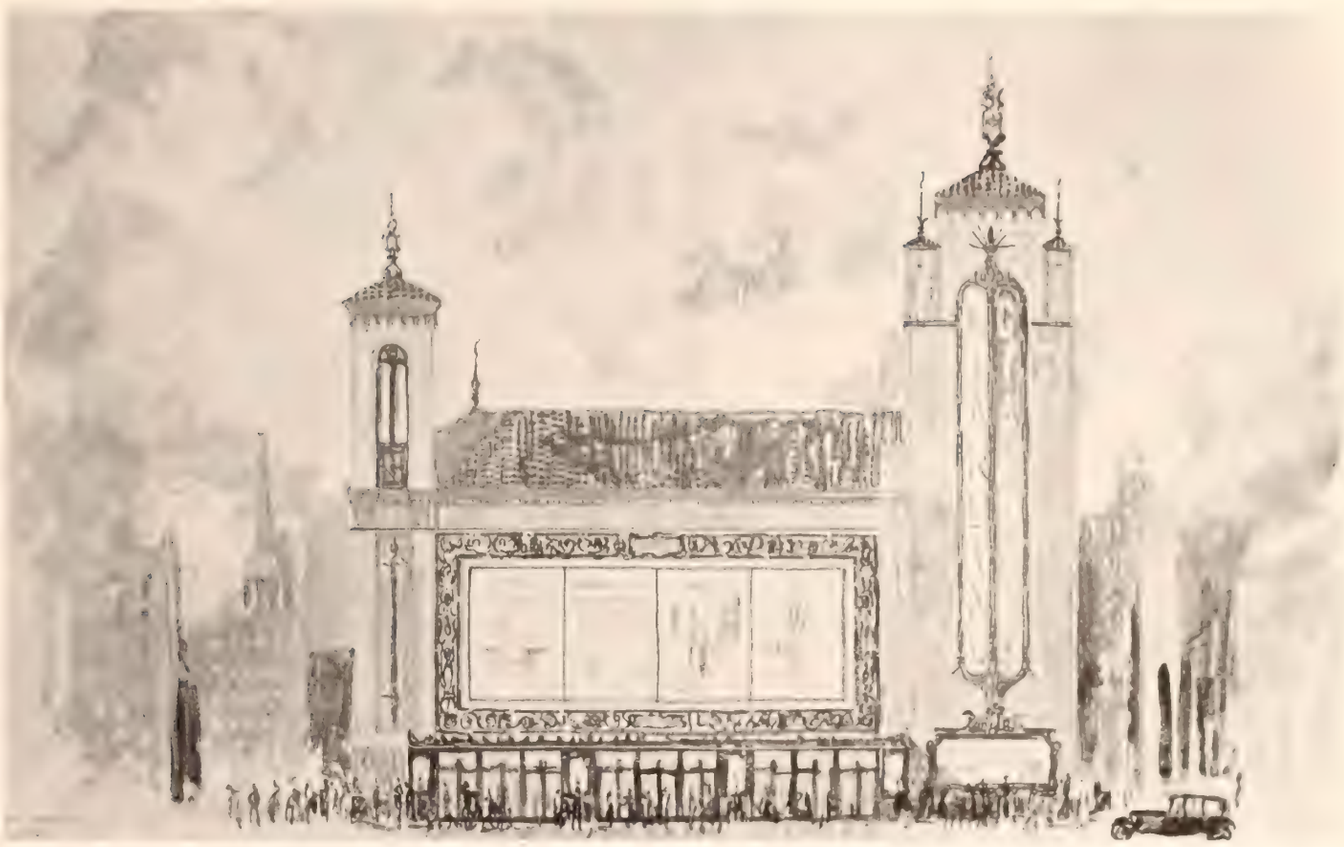
A French Phantasy—a neighborhood theatre expressing joy, hilarity and happiness

While it might not be possible for either Charles Morgan or myself to stand there in the lobby and preach the Oriental mysteries of these mosaics and their subjects, I fully believe that the character of their execution,—their surroundings,—the lighting, and the consistency of it all, have a wonderful influence and wonderful understanding of what we were driving at in almost all and everybody who enters the Avalon Theatre.

Entrance Gateway of a theatre with a foreground

The large mosaic which you see here in the center indicates in the distance those signs of Oriental worship,—the mosques, minarets and towers, some of which we have reproduced in actual relief in the auditorium. The rose colored buildings decorated with elaborate filagree and painted with patterns of floral design. The pyramidal temples and glistening domes against the colorful sky, dazzle us. In little cubicles the master craftsmen follow their trades in full view and almost on the sidewalks; the enamelers; the dyers of silk and cotton; the brass workers, each a colony in itself. There is more in these mosaics and sketches than you see at the first glance.

We are charmed and intoxicated with the color of it all,—its brilliancy follows us everywhere. How well our interior decorators have caught on to the spirit of these mosaics and how faithfully they have worked in the execution of the tinting and laying-in with color of ornament and texture of walls and ceilings in these beautiful Oriental rooms!



It is the inspiration, companionship and good friendship of such a man as Charles Morgan that give us the vision to create perfect illusions with brush, paint and electric ray.

Another remarkable work of handicraft is the wall texturing in the foyer. There is a stretch of hand-scratched plaster exactly reproducing the work of Persian masons.

The entire ceiling treatment as far as ornament is concerned, resolves itself into a special finish smooth surface, eliminating complicated furring, framing and ornamental plaster.

The proper furnishings for an "atmospheric" theatre can be found in the market where true antiques and correct reproductions are sold, at prices much below the gaudy and elaborate furnishings and bric-a-brac required by a formal theatre.

The construction of the garden walls and the reproduction of exterior facades in the theatre auditorium, permit the locating of ventilating ducts and other mechanical apparatus, to good advantage, resulting in lower costs.

While talking about ventilation and atmospheric conditioning, I want to call your attention to the principle of direct fuel to air, delivering properly balanced, warm treated air with ventilating. This in itself represents a most economical method which can be advantageously installed in the "atmospheric" theatre. The flexible method of air treatment in conjunction with the architectural setting of the "atmospheric" theatre has much in giving continuity to producing that comfortable "warm" and "friendly" feeling.

The warmth is obtained by means of direct fuel to air systems conducting the heat directly and quickly to the volume of cold fresh air necessary to properly ventilate the "atmospheric" theatre without any intermediate or usual heat losses. This air is drawn in through the fresh air shaft into the fan room passing through the air washers being thoroughly washed and properly dehumidified. From this point it is properly and scientifically distributed to the portions of the building to be heated and ventilated. The principal feature of the system direct fuel to air is its flexibility, economy of installation, simplicity of operation and maintenance.

Compare the necessary up-keep and the proper representation of a smooth, highly polished minutely detailed surface with that required by correct representation of an antiqued interior, antiqued wall surfaces, rustic fixtures and dull finished ornamental metal work, and there alone a great saving in the operation of a theatre can be accomplished without in the least detracting from its appearance.

We have come in contact with the Construction Departments of several of our large theatre circuits, and we are grateful indeed of having met men who have acquired through actual observation and practice and in the course of gigantic theatre operations of their respective circuits, knowledge, which translated into architectural form, is of untold importance and interest.

We believe that through the intense activities of our large theatre circuits, and by the enterprise of independent individuals, large moving picture theatres have been built in great number, well meeting the demand, thus considerably curtailing the anticipated building activities as far as super-movie theatres are concerned in large Metropolitan centers.

Main stairway of a formal theatre

Oriental Minarets and Tile Work for an Elevation of a Modern Neighborhood Theatre

However, there comes a great demand for small theatres in small towns, and we have developed several plans for atmospheric theatres which can be interestingly built in small communities at a cost in keeping with the practical and financial set-ups visualized by the exhibitors.

We also have given the question of remodeling considerable thought, having devoted a special department in our organization to the remodeling and rejuvenating of old theatres.

Restful and Beautiful Surroundings Proper Atmosphere for Shows

I am not so carried away by enthusiasm for my work as to insist that proper architecture or proper decorating is all you need to have a successful theatre, but I do believe that an architect can be very, very helpful to an exhibitor in creating success and in pleasing the public. The show after all is the principal thing in the business—a good show I mean. The best and finest theatres—the most artistic theatres, and the most costly theatres cannot succeed without a good show.

And here I believe is the most important thing that I would like to impress—cost.

I want to create theatres where pictures can be enjoyed in restful and beautiful surroundings rather than one that would be a mere flaunt of lavishness. I want my theatres to create the feeling that one wants to come back and enjoy the restfulness of its surroundings. I don't want my theatres, lobbies and ornament to look at you and say "Look what I cost."

Represents Effort to Use More Art and Less Tedious Methods

It has been proved by the successful conclusion of many building operations in different sections of the country, that an "atmospheric" theatre on the same ground and with the same seating capacity, can be built for less money than a formal theatre, and the reason for this lies not only in the fact that the general character of material required to create these outdoor illusions is of different character—we use less marble—less bronze—less hangings—than a formal theatre.

We strive to use more art and less tedious methods of decorating to get our effects. Our appropriation for lighting fixtures which are usually either imported originals or true copies of foreign characteristic work, is smaller than required for palatial formal interiors.

Defying and dodging if you please so-called "Professional Ethics," and desirous of injecting myself into the actual execution of sculpture and decorative painting, I have been prompted to eliminate competitive commercialism from the finishing trades in the pursuance of my profession. But I feel that my conduct in this respect and the services rendered, have been eminently satisfactory to my clients.

If people like the work we are doing and want the results we can obtain for them, I must be allowed "To use my own tools," so to speak. Our plan is to work on a fixed appropriation covering the ornamental plaster and decorative work, and we like to have owners entrust to us without any handicap, the execution of this work with the aid of such men as we know are familiar with our ideas and dreams, and possess that very necessary understanding and skill of sculpture and paint requisite for our effects and finishes.

Sculpture and paint in our case must go hand in hand, because you will note the decorations such as carving and sculpture in collected masses must be executed in color, reflecting the customs of the artists during the period and times which we are reviving. I am talking about the art of fresco paintings and the application of color on the outside of buildings.

I like, as I said before—"To use my own tools," in the creation of our "atmospheric" theatres. Did you ever notice the peculiar blue we are using in our "atmospheric" theatres? It releases the nerve tension of the audience; refreshes the eye; makes one feel that one can breathe, and it has one hundred and one beneficial effects on the mind and nerves.

Blue is always described as the color of Hope. This is not a fanciful and trivial sentiment, but a fact which can be scientifically proved, but it must be a certain, defined and distinct blue on a certain defined and distinct textured surface. We know how to do this, but cannot write specifications to cover the execution of this "Color Health Recipe."

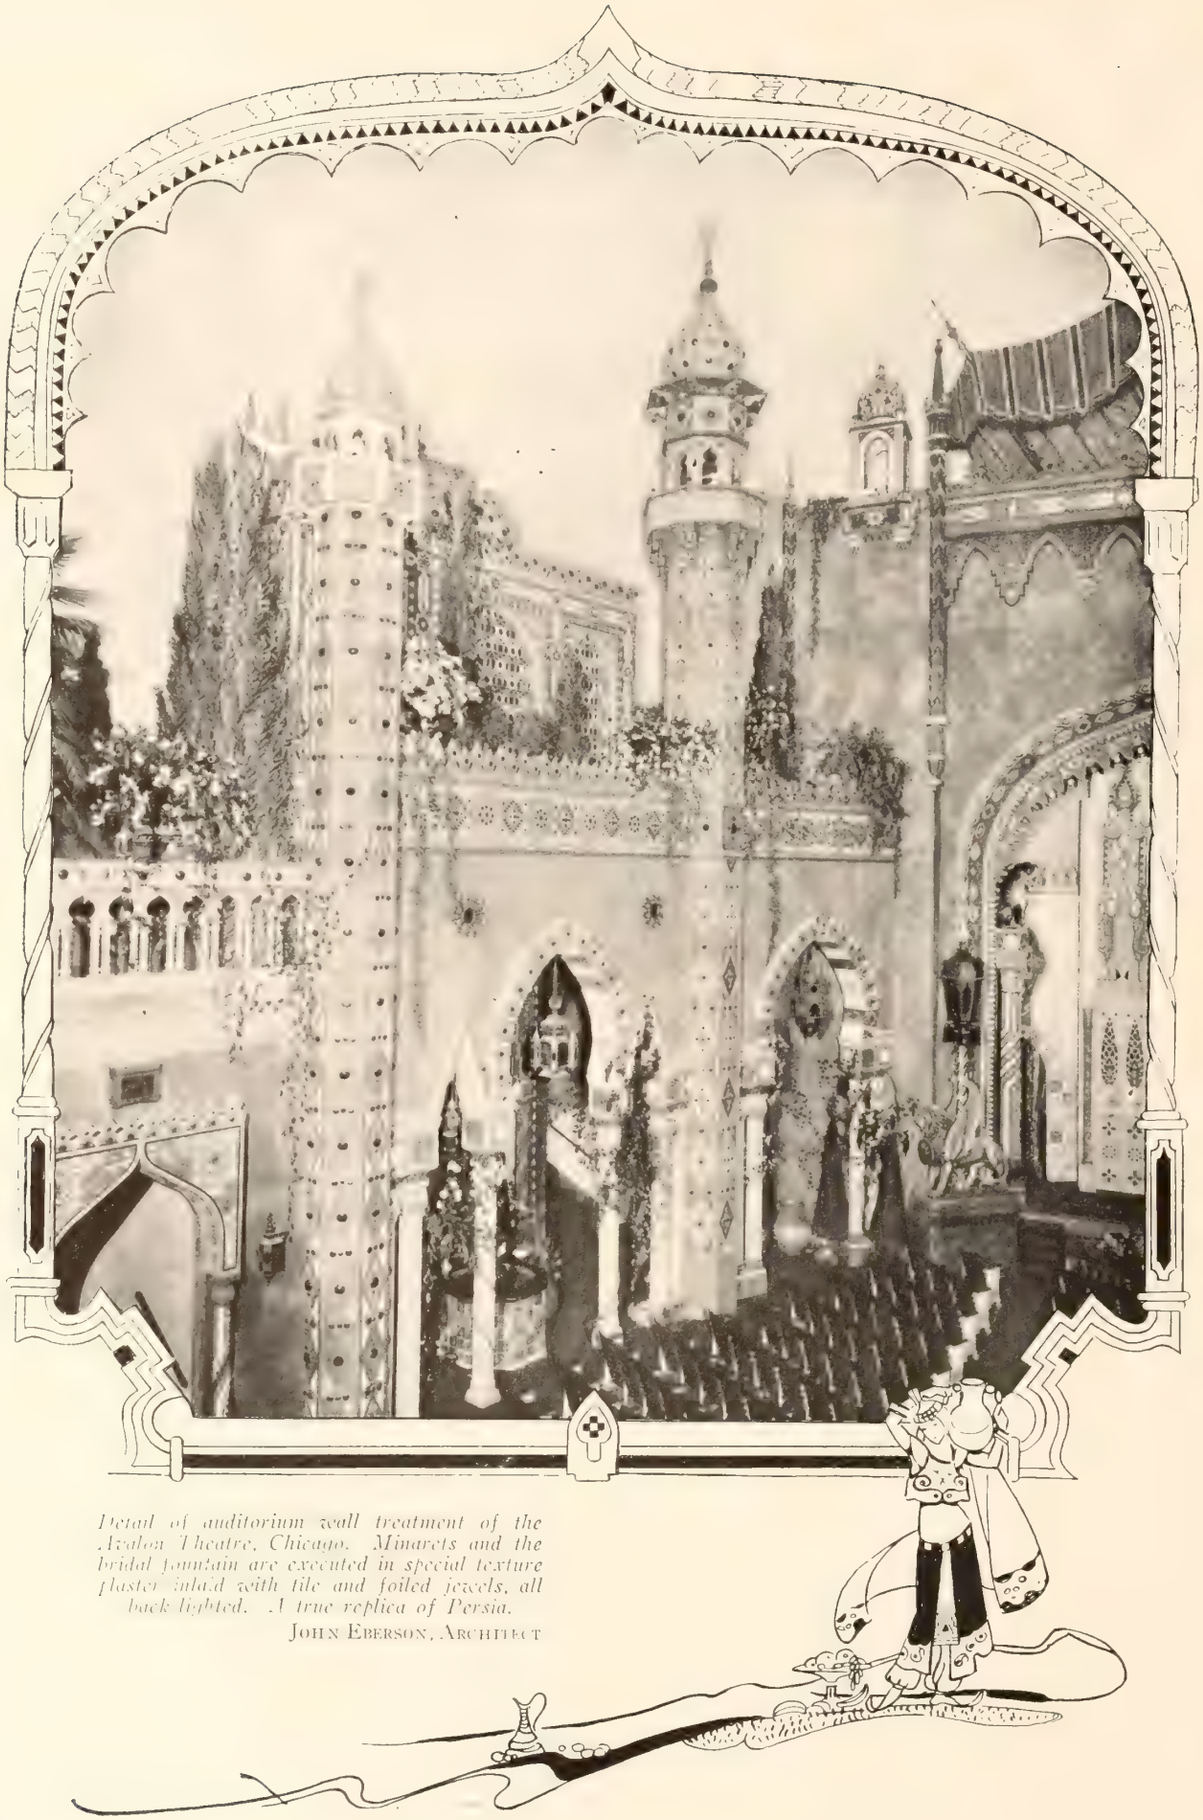
And what is true of my principal color schemes is also true of my relief colors and high-lights. The cultured people of all nations have ever enthused over art and everything in the world is either Nature or Art. Nature puts everything into the world, but man puts together what nature has put there—where did I hear this before?

We have to be sculptors—we have to be designers,—detailers, decorators, lighting engineers and connoisseurs of fine furniture, soft fabrics and correct bric-a-brac.

I don't claim that all theatres that want to be successful must be "Atmospheric" theatres, or must be necessarily designed by John Eberson, but I do know that before long every important amusement center will have at least one genuine "Atmospheric" theatre.

I have always claimed that in an out-of-door atmosphere, in addition to the "warm" and "friendly" foreign picturesqueness, the spectator enjoys the natural beauty of skies and flowers he has been brought up to love. He does not feel himself in entirely strange surroundings; he relaxes; he is interested; we appeal to his imagination and there you are—in most modest assumption—a perfect and ideal theatre auditorium.

Cold Grandeur of Formal Styles "Unfriendly" to Play



And yet we see many of the finest modern playhouses are copied after great palaces, and the cold grandeur of these marvelous examples of architecture may inspire awe in the average theatregoer, but it defeats the purpose of the play and playhouse, as it does not put at ease and does not readily frame our mind to readily and cordially receive the performance.

The first "atmospheric" theatre which I had the pleasure to design was a vaudeville theatre. This happened some years ago. That theatre is still the most popular playhouse in the town. It excels by reason of its intimacy, its atmosphere, its sight lines and its remarkable acoustic properties.

The record of that theatre and those which followed it in the spread of the atmospheric design throughout the country has fired me with the ambition to see a further extension of the atmospheric idea, and particularly has it inspired me with an ambition to see an "atmospheric" theatre take its place in the scheme of that most glamorous theatrical center—Broadway.

CHOSEN FOR THE "AVALON"!

Peerless

"The Super Reflector Arc Lamp"

THE selection and installation of PEERLESS Reflectors Arc Lamps by the National Theatres Corporation for their new "Avalon" Theatre costing well into $2,000,000 is a great tribute to the superiority of PEERLESS lamps over the entire field of competitive lamps.

This installation fully bears out our contention that to have all of the advantages reflector arcs afford, PEERLESS must be your choice when making a selection.

PEERLESS Reflector Arc Lamps are built by the largest manufacturer of reflector arc lamps in the world; in actual numbers of lamps in service they outnumber all others two to one; they are used in the majority of the nation's finest theatres and are standard factory equipment on Simplex Projectors.

No other reflector arc lamp is so well recommended; no other lamp can approach it in actual dollar for dollar value, and most certainly no other equipment has its ability to perform for years with no upkeep cost. PEERLESS will never become an orphan on your hands, its intrenchment in the field has been too firmly established.

WHY HAVE LESS?

DISTRIBUTED BY THE NATIONAL THEATRE SUPPLY CO.

EXHIBITORS, ATTENTION !

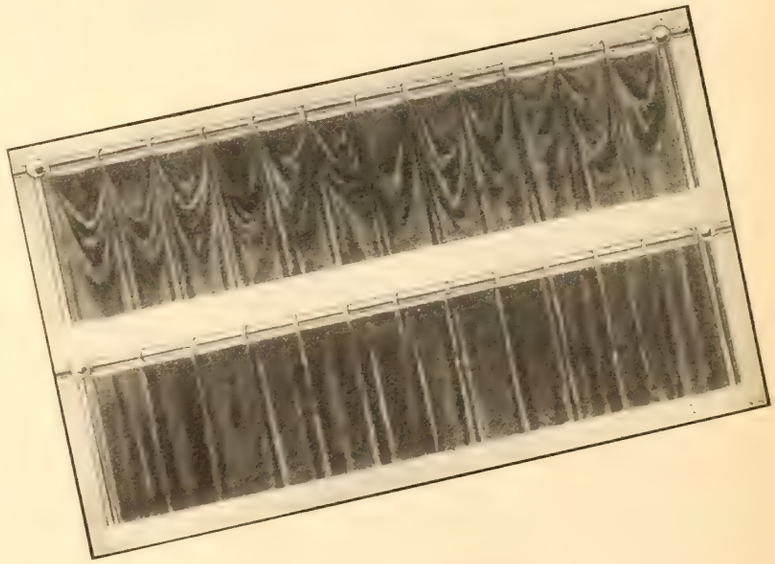
Designed and created by Lee Lash Studios, 1818-1838 Amsterdam Ave., N. Y., using "Sol" Fabrics.

Beautiful Under Spotlight, Floodlight, Concealed Lighting or Crystal Chandeliers

HAVE you ever noticed the effect the changing of the colored lights has on the hangings under the proscenium arch and the drops?

Do you appreciate how differently the same fabric appears, when seen in the brilliant auditorium and the softly illuminated mezzanine and lounges.



The lovely, lustrous sheen of the famous imported reflects an inimitable charm in any environment. Loomed and dyed by England's ablest weavers, in 40 guaranteed fast colors, their range of usefulness is practically unlimited.

"SOL" Fabrics

Other Hexter fabrics, especially suited to the peculiar requirements of the theatre trade, include Satines, Mohairs, Velvets, Glazed Chintzes, French Marquisettes, Silk Taffetas, and many others. All amply stocked in every color, pattern and width, for prompt shipment.

SELSI
HEAT RESISTING
Condensers

The well deserved popularity of ★SELSI★ HEAT RESISTING CONDENSING LENSES rests on the unique combination of two important factors. These lenses contain the best heat resisting properties known to modern glass-makers combined with surfaces that are optically ground and polished.

They are preferred by many operators to all other condensers on account of their many superior qualities and their moderate prices. Pamphlet on request.

Those superb lighting effects

HOW best to produce them is one of the uppermost thoughts in the minds of architects and others interested in theater designing. The multitude of scenes must be changed quickly and accurately.

Westinghouse, with years of switchboard design experience, has produced various types of theater switchboards which, through their reliability, ease of operation, beauty and perfection of design have established Westinghouse as one of the leading manufacturers of this type of equipment.

The many successful installations that have been made stamp Westinghouse as among the foremost in advanced design and manufacture of theater switchboards.

Do you have a copy of Circular 1702-A? It contains a complete description and fully illustrates our various types of theater switchboards.

When it's 90° in the shade you need HELP.

You need something to keep your house cool and comfortable—something to hold business up to the mark.

Only one thing will do it—fresh AIR. And lots of it—cool, refreshing breezes that will bring them back night after night. That's the only way you can be sure of good profits the whole summer through. Typhoons prove it in 2,000 other theatres.

Let's show you how easily it's done.

Lakeside
Quiet Electric VENTILATOR

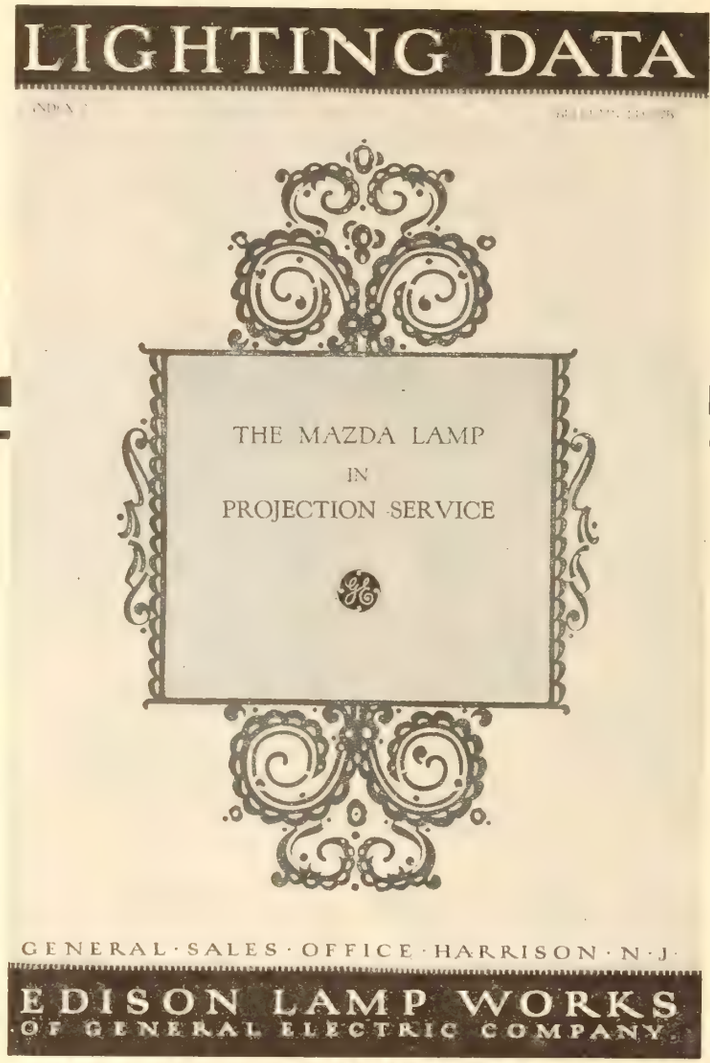
Draws Capacity Houses Even During the Hot Summer Months

Good Ventilation Makes Good Business—It Pays to Keep Your Patrons Cool and Comfortable

You can fill your empty seats—increase your box office receipts—and draw crowds of steady patrons by equipping your theatre with a Lakeside Quiet Electric Ventilator. Its low price—easy installation—simplicity and low cost of operation make it a profitable investment that pays big dividends in increased receipts.

The Lakeside is equipped with a specially designed Four-Way Air Deflector and sends a powerful current of draftless, deflected air to every corner of the theatre that forces out the stale, devitalized air and completely changes all the air in the theatre every few minutes. so that it is always flooded with fresh, pure, healthful, outdoor air. This cooling current of fresh outside air—powerful but absolutely draftless—will please your audiences and bring their steady patronage.



The Lakeside comes ready for installation. It requires no tearing down of walls or ripping up of floors. It is so compact that it fits into a very small space. It can be disassembled to move through small door openings, and installed satisfactorily in many places where it is impossible to install any other type of ventilating system. Lakeside Ventilators are easy to operate—and trouble free.

The Lakeside costs much less than many of the complicated cooling and ventilating systems on the market, yet is remarkably efficient and is guaranteed to give satisfactory results. It is very inexpensive to operate and must "make good" in actual service because it is backed by a reliable guarantee. Lakeside Ventilators are made in different sizes to meet every requirement.

Write Today for Catalog—Read What Users Say

and let us give you complete information with suggestions of an installation for your theatre. Don't delay. Write now and investigate before the summer rush season comes. Tell us the width, length, height, seating capacity of your theatre [also whether it has a balcony or not] and our service department will submit suggestions and quotation without obligation on your part. Do it NOW—before you forget.

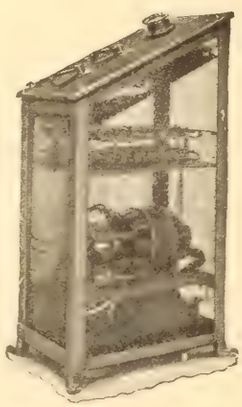
Why the Syncrovertor Is a Better Method of Rectification



The Liberty Syncrovertor is a synchronous rectifier. It represents a new and more efficient means of converting alternating current to direct current, simply and economically.

The no-load requirements of the Syncrovertor are very low, less than 100 watts, as the only power required is to turn the commutator, the actual rectification being done at the commutator, not within the motor.

The watt imput is 25% less for equal amperage at the lamp than on any motor generator. This means a saving of at least 25% in power costs.
The Syncrovertor is a single phase multiple machine. Where alternating current has been used by a theatre and the booth is wired for single phase, as it is in most cases, the Syncrovertor can be installed without any change in wiring—a big saving in installation.

The Syncrovertor enables the projector to give a steady light on the screen and is designed to automatically furnish the additional current required by second arc so that there is no flicker on change-over.

The transformer of the Syncrovertor, with the motor element idle, acts as a compensarc and will furnish current to the lamps. This feature dispenses with the necessity of the customary extra emergency unit.

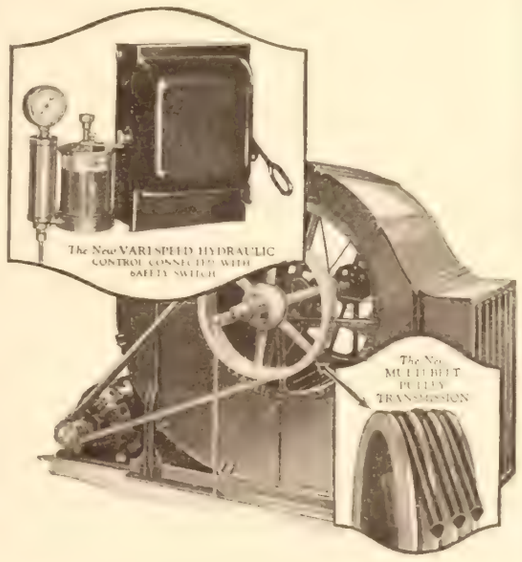
This ASTOUNDING OFFER Brings You the MOST SENSATIONAL IMPROVEMENT In VENTILATING EFFICIENCY!

ARCTIC NU-AIR VARI-SPEED HYDRAULIC CONTROL

ARCTIC NU-AIR presents its latest and greatest achievement in ventilating efficiency—the Hydraulically Controlled Vari-Speed Pulley. Many months of ceaseless experimentation and exhaustive testing behind closed doors have finally brought their reward.

Positive regulation of blower speed and air volume—is now a reality. Now your Arctic Nu-Air System can be tuned to every degree of temperature. Summer cooling, winter air-conditioning and heat distribution, year 'round ventilating efficiency—every variation in air volume that comfort and climate dictate are at your command.

Simple, Sure, Safe



In operation, like in construction, the Hydraulic Vari-Speed Control is simplicity itself. A push or two of the plunger increases the pulley speed. A touch on the other plunger decreases it.

Because it is hydraulically operated, it is positive, smooth and quiet in its action. It never varies in pressure. Once it is set you can depend upon the pulley to maintain its exact relative speed until you change the pressure. The hydraulically operated Vari-Speed Pulley responds instantly, smoothly, evenly, to every degree of the pressure gauge.

It is safe and trouble-proof. An automatic safety valve prevents operation of the blower beyond its maximum capacity. Damaging shocks, strains and stretching of belting due to peak load starting, are prevented by an automatic device which releases the pressure when the electric switch is thrown.

Remote Control

The control unit can be placed at any distance from the blower desired. Thus complete control of the system is always at your finger tips.

REMEMBER

That the Vari-Speed Hydraulic Pulley Is an Exclusive Arctic Nu-Air Feature and Is Entirely Different in Principle and Operation from the Ordinary Mechanical Pulleys on the Market—a Difference Entirely in Your Favor.

SAVE FUEL DOLLARS
If your problem is how to get more efficient and economical heating service, Arctic Nu-Air Heating Engineers can solve it. Write us—there is no obligation.

Needs No Attention

After Vari-Speed Hydraulic Control and Pulley are installed no further adjustments are required. There are no complicated parts to get out of order, no costly replacements to make.

New Multi-Belt

The Vari-Speed Pulley is equipped with either flat belt or the new Multi-Belt Transmission which insures quiet, smooth running and reduces slipping and stretching to a minimum. More efficient and economical operation is the result.

Guaranteed Results

Positive, constant variable speed regulation and greatly reduced current consumption is guaranteed with every Arctic Nu-Air System equipped with the Vari-Speed Hydraulic Pulley and Hydraulic Remote Control.

CINEPHORS are BALANCED LENSES

NO one characteristic stands out at the expense of others, but each quality is carefully considered on its merits and given its just due in the design of these lenses.

No claims are made for stereoscopic effect or depth of focus in the picture. These qualities are beyond the power of any projection lens to produce on the screen. Cinephors will, however, reproduce on the screen every desirable quality that is found in the film picture.

There is no projection lens on the market that equals Cinephors in respect to a careful balancing of the following qualities:

Flatness of field
Critical definition
Illumination
Contrast between black and white

The DeWitt Theater, Bayonne, N. J., is one of the medium sized houses which maintain their reputation for good entertainment with the help of C-H "Simplicity" Lighting Dimmers.

"Just average" no longer pulls

NOW-A-DAYS the public demands something better—more beautiful, more distinctive, bigger. Producers respond with super-productions—using thousands of characters, costly "props", color photography—beauty and distinction at any price.

But no producer can guarantee your profits from a "super". Too much depends upon your methods of showing—upon the atmosphere created by you to supplement the picture.

C-H Lighting Dimmers create this atmosphere which the producer can't supply—lighting effects which fit the spirit of the picture—which make any film better, more profitable.

"Simplicity" Dimmers are so easy to install and operate, so economical in operation that they are the next logical improvement for your theater—regardless of the size, age or decorative scheme.

Talk it over with your architect or electrical contractor and write for the booklet "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater", which lists over 800 leading theaters using C-H Dimmers to help boost box office receipts.

Superiorities of C-H Dimmers

Solid soapstone bases have high heat dispersion and insulating qualities—great continuous load capacity—and they won't burn out.

Contacts on both sides of plates allow twice as many circuits in the same space. Plates can be taken out by removing one screw. Plates of any capacity can be substituted allowing easy adaptation to all theaters or any remodeling plan.

Low ratio rack and pinion drive eliminates play and backlash. 110 distinct steps with no overlapping of contacts assure flickerless dimming from full brilliancy to black out. Brushes of Cophite—a non-oxidizing, self-lubricating material.

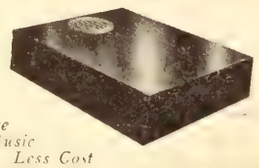
GALLAGHER

The new Junior Leader Stand —like its big brother, built for medium size houses.

The Vaude-Leader Stand —fastens against the apron rail or on a pedestal.



NEW LEADER STANDS

The two new leader stands serve to indicate the completeness of the Gallagher line.

With a beautiful and correct music stand for every requirement no theater large or small need look further for pit equipment.

★ FIRE ★

Whose Theatre Is Next

The penalty often paid by Exhibitors who operate neglected prints, prints that are brittle and lifeless.

Ninety per cent. of fires that break out in projectors are caused by this type of films, the kind that has deteriorated beyond the safety point.

Unquestionably film sprockets become much weakened after films deteriorate, they easily rip, tear and break in the projector. This makes projection dangerous and causes fire hazards. Distributors carry a heavy responsibility in this matter.

Exhibitors, use showmanship and precaution, for your own protection. Specify your prints, new or old, processed with Liquified Film Wax. They will be pliable, tough, free from oil and grease. This greatly lessens fire hazards and gives consistently high screen quality, sharp projection, no blurs, haze, or cloudy effect.

Safety—good pictures and clear projection is what your audience pays for. Give it to them by demanding

Liquified Film Waxing Processed Prints

(From Your Film Distributors)

Properly waxes new prints to prevent prints sticking, lessens print scratching and film sprocket checking when new. Keeps them pliable, tough for safer projection. Easily removes oil and grease for clear and bright pictures.

For better projection and greater fire protection—tell your Exchange about it.

The New Minusa Screen On Real Fabric

Minusa De Luxe Special Screens are now constructed on a specially woven fabric which is imported. The quality and Durability of this canvas is positively unequalled. It is free from raised or broken threads, withstands any ordinary abuse to which a screen is subjected, and is absolutely Puncture-Proof.

With this fabric and our new finishing process the De Luxe surface is so perfectly built that accurate projection is always assured.

Each Spring And Fall—

An issue of Theatre Building and Equipment Buyers Guide is distributed to the entire motion picture field.

Theatre owners, architecets and builders—in fact everyone interested in theatres—finds Buyers Guide invaluable in designing theatres and selecting equipment.

It is through Buyers Guide that manufacturers tell these buyers about new and improved equipment—for Buyers Guide is the common meeting place for all—owners, builders, architects and manufacturers—serving a useful purpose in promoting better theatres.

One of the thousands of great York vaults that safeguard money and valuables. This picture shows the entrance of the vault of the First National Bank, Jersey City, N. J.

Below: The York Burglary Chest used by hundreds of theatres to protect their cash.

Protection--- in small doses

Write today for booklet "York Safes for Theatres." It tells what you should know about the York Burglary Chest.

THE money you have deposited in your bank is protected by giant vaults against burglars and other forms of attack. But the money you cannot deposit—that you take in Saturday nights and Sundays—needs protection just as much.

Probably this total of cash receipts is more than that which you take in all the rest of the week. It needs protection before you put it into the bank, and the York Burglary Chest will give it real protection.

Made by the makers of the world's most respected bank vaults, the York Burglary Chest is a small edition of their finest vaults. Send for the interesting booklet describing these chests. It's free and there is no obligation.

1 Switch Controls all changes

FA

There was never a theatre lighting control as simple

The great theatres of modern times put a tremendous demand upon the stage switchboard and the multiplicity of control switches would seriously slow down the performance if it were not for FA Major System that simplified as well as standardized the work.

Every scene is set up by tumbler switches in advance of use—ten more scenes may be left set up permanently—and the changes made by the action of one switch. Hundreds of circuits—thousands of lights may be operated as one. The FA Major System is the simplest control ever perfected.

Send for estimates, full details and catalog —all free, now. If you are not thoroughly familiar with the FA Major System now is the time.

Another Fitting Testimonial

of

Marr and Colton Supremacy!

This new $3,000,000 Theatre "The Rochester" seating 4,000 people is ranked among the great motion picture houses of America.

Matched with its beauty of construction is an organ of equal beauty in tone and workmanship. The Marr and Colton Organ lends that added charm necessary to the realization of maximum appeal to eye and ear—appeal that has box office value.

This five manual organ is one of the largest theatre organs ever built. It is capable of expressing the tone of any musical instrument or a whole orchestra in a manner so expressive that the casual listener wonders at times whether he really is listening to an organ, so matchless is its tone quality—so marvelous its volume—so perfect the rendition.

HELEN OF TROY

First National release and production featuring Maria Corda, Lewis Stone and Ricardo Cortez. Based and the John Erskine novel, adapted by Carey Wilson, with Alexander Korda directing. Photographers, Lee Garmes and Sid Hickox. At the Globe, N. Y., for three weeks commencing Dec. 9. Running time, 87 mins.

Helen	Maria Corda
Menelaus	Lewis Stone
Paris	Ricardo Cortez
Eteoneus	George Fawcett
Adraste	Alice White
Telemachus	Gordon Elliott
Ulysses	Tom O'Brien
Achilles	Bert Sprotte
Ajax	Mario Carillo

A corking .... release that figures to particularly delight what is currently smart in picturegoers. De luxe house loge clientele should enjoy it thoroughly and others will signify hearty acceptance, but pot and pan Annie may have her doubts because there are no custard pies bombarding the walls of Troy.

At that there's nothing subtle about this original satire as screened. Situations, bits and titles are broad, and those situations, with the titles, make the picture. First National has given it a splendid production, including some trick camera work that commands admiration. . . . .

The picture is nothing like the book. Robert E. Sherwood adapted "Road to Rome" on the Erskine plan and Carey Wilson, making the "Helen" film adaptation, evidently had vivid memories of the play. More so than the novel. So "Helen" on the screen is more like Sherwood than Erskine, although the latter will collect, and rightly, inasmuch as he's the instigator of the whole thing. Erskine was on the stage at the opening, before the picture, offering what was probably the best verbal introduction any New York film has ever had. It was funny and it was short. It also served to introduce Maria Corda in person.

Those who saw this girl in "Moon of Israel" are going to be surprised. The difference between the German and American idea of makeup. Miss Corda looks good here and in certain spots the camera makes her look great. For "Helen" she's "the type," and plays it nicely if a little blank at times. In future pictures this will have to be overcome. On performance no one touches Lewis Stone, even if he is still reaching for his coat lapel despite wearing armor. Few will know that Cortez is in the picture.

"'Helen" is all comedy, including the score, and the big houses can do no better than to use the Edouarde orchestration. Satirizing ancient myth in general and Helen's affairs particularly, the titles are topical, while the music is mainly based on the pop dance tunes. Wheeling the giant wooden horse inside the gates of Troy is accomplished to the strains of "Horses, Horses, Horses," etc. The film kids the husband-wife complex throughout, the king, following the conquest of Troy, making a beeline for Helen's dressmaker to destroy the shop. Meanwhile he has been trying to go fishing since 9 o'clock. When it looks as if Helen is about to take another vacation with her second prince, the king is convinced he's going to get in his trip, and that finishes the picture.

No battles and no slow spots. The action is lively all the way, with Miss Corda in various stages of slight clothing. . . . .

"Helen" . . . . is well made, lively and funny. The smart set will dote on it, and it's broad enough not to be over the heads of the John Held, Jr., models here or abroad.

We Break a Precedent

And Talk, for a Moment, About Motion Picture News

By William A. Johnston

IT is just fifteen years ago that the writer laid his plans for the establishment in this trade of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

And it seems fitting, therefore, that for the first time in all these years this page, devoted so often to all the factors and causes of the industry, might, for once, speak of the paper itself.

It would appear more graceful, perhaps, to have such an editorial written by the industry we have served. That could easily be done. I am presumptuous enough to believe, however, that I can speak literally here for the many who over the space of years have spoken or written to me about Motion Picture News.

I know that the paper is a welcome arrival each week in the theatres of this country and in the offices of the leading newspapers, theatres and film agents of this and sixty foreign countries.

And, while it is a great deal to say, I know also that in every single instance the paper is received with the respect that finally dignifies a solid institution.

That is a good deal to have accomplished —to build an institution. It is a good deal to claim. But it is a fact.

The credit that is due for these years of building goes not to any one individual. Far from it. Facing me as I write are nearly sixty heavy bound volumes of the publication; and into these thousands of pages, advertising as well as editorial, have gone the best efforts of many able men. I speak particularly for the staff of Motion Picture News, of every member of which, past and present, anyone can be justly proud.

All this effort may be summed up in one word—Service. A vast deal of it, certainly. I can say this, that no other trade paper in any other field ever gave such a volume of service or near it; nor of better quality.

So the structure of this institution, laid on block by block, is one of service. But the foundation of it has been still a rarer thing, and a more precious one.

I speak now of fairness. This publication over all its years has been fair to all it has concerned.

It was conceived in this belief, that a paper of any industry should be fair to all the branches of that industry—impartial, truthful, and wise unto its lights.

So I believe this, that fairness may be found as the motive of every editorial written upon this page for fifteen years; and fairness may be found in the contents of each of them. That is a record worth recording.

And believing this, I know that this paper today stands high in those theatres, film offices and newspapers, here and abroad, which must and do look to some source for a constantly fair appraisal of this industry, its product, its market and its personnel.

There is another thing we are positive about in this office. We know our theatres, each one of them. And knowing them we know that this paper is a buying guide with more than ninety percent of the buying trade. This is not a mere boast. It is a practical proportion capable of practical proof.

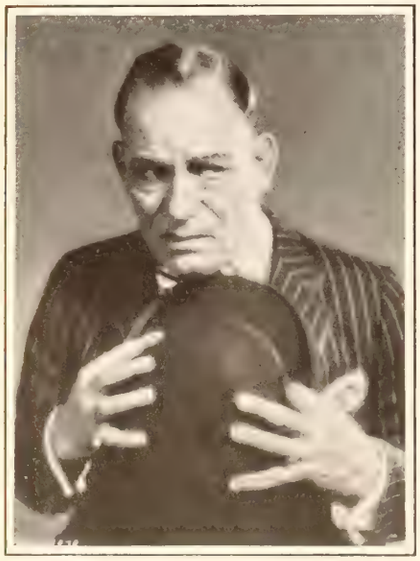
Dainty little Jane La Verne, recently signed by Universal, welcomes the new year.



Lois Moran, Fox player, derives much amusement on the set from the antics of the monkey perched on her arm. She is now acting the leading role in "Love Hungry."

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

A VIGOROUS preachment against war is "The Enemy," which brings Lillian Gish to the Astor Theatre in the premiere of the week. On the stage, Channing Pollock's play attained marked success as an argument for the brotherhood of man.

Transferred to the screen, it becomes somewhat heavy-handed in spots, but, considered as a "propaganda" pictur, it is very impressive. Miss Gish, forsaking her earlier mannerisms, gives a natural and satisfying performance, in some of the sequences rising to the genuine heights of tragedy. Ralph Forbes, leading man, is excellent, while George Fawcett and Frank Currier shine in character roles.

As a whole, "The Enemy" is too long and can easily be relieved of some of its repetition, such as the shots of marching feet, which rather lose their effect when the dramatic point they convey is hammered incessantly at the spectator. In the main, Director Fred Niblo has done a good job. It's a good box-office picture.

A NEW worry has been created to puzzle exhibitors in Kansas. With a censor board which held that the Dempsey-Tunney fight pictures were "too brutal to be shown," and refused to approve the film for distribution in Kansas, many movie fans of Kansas appear to have taken the matter entirely out of the hands of the censor board, but, in so doing, have created what may be a dangerous competitor for exhibitors.

Motion pictures in private homes are not subjected to the state censor board, even though the films are purchased from commercial organizations, William A. Smith, attorney general of Kansas, ruled last week. As long as pictures are not shown commercially, but are shown in homes, the films do not have to go before the censor board of approval. A large number of persons in Kansas have purchased cheaper projection machines and equipment that enable them to use the films in their homes. The Dempsey-Tunney fight film has been purchased by many Kansans, who have invited scores of their friends to their homes to witness pictures which the state censor board would not allow to be shown in theatres.

The question exhibitors are asking is this: What is to prevent fifty or sixty persons from contributing privately in buying uncensored films to be shown in private homes—pictures which receive wide exploitation in Kansas City, Mo., and which would be real box office attractions at a theatre? Another question is: What will happen at the box offices of theatres if such a practice increases?

NOW that the French Government is considering the imposition of a quota, it is interesting to learn the attitude, in conservative and influential circles, toward the American industry. It is well-expressed in a recent article in Le Temps by Emile Vuillermoz, as follows:

"WE wonder why Senator Borah is making such a fuss in calling the attention of the world to the lack of eagerness which French people show in giving up their savings to Uncle Sam. French poor payers? What nonsense! At this very moment they are lined up in front of all the box-offices installed in their country by those gallant indirect tax collectors, the American motion picture business men. Every day His Majesty Dollar opens a new collecting office towards which move long lines of humble owners of paper francs. The most recent and the most magnificent of them all was opened yesterday. It was a magnificent corner situation on the Boulevards, in keeping with the classic tradition of powerful banks, and from today the Parisians will begin to pay their part of the war debt.

"The opening of the 'Paramount' marks the beginning of a new era in the methodical colonization of our screens by opulent America. This time the conquered bastion is important and will strongly consolidate the position of the assailant. Why try to conceal facts with words? Economic war is no less brutal than military war and while we admire the clever way in which the encircling is done, we have at least the right, after the match, while loyally shaking hands with the victor, to say what we think.

"Americans, let us be just to them, do not act hypocritically. They don't try to work their way in sneakingly, by flattering our tastes or our prejudices; they firmly impose their own. They do not even consider French mentality and are satisfied to apply systematically to our compatriots the industrial and commercial methods which have proved successful in their country. They found in France a field well prepared, thanks to the increasing Americanization of our screens. Our exhibitors who are complaining of being strangled, make a mistake by shouting too loudly; they have been the quartermasters of the invader.

"But what is the use of complaining? The harm is done. Approximately fifty films are produced annually in France, clearly insufficient to supply the needs of our cinemas. If these fifty films were chefs-d'oeuvres, with the mark of genius of our race, they would constitute in spite of everything, the taste of an elite, which would, little by little, drive out the Americanization of our studios and displace American productions, even in Yankee cinemas. But it is not the case, as you know. Don't be astonished, then, to see the most amiable of American exhibitors, smiling cordially, invite us to come to listen to his 'elevator orchestra' bathed alternatively in infra-yellow and ultra-violet rays, his electric organ adorned with sheep-bells, musical triangles, small bells and an automatic drum, and what he calls a French film, viz., the most insipid, affected production dabbed all over with color in which we saw a galaxy of beautiful marchionesses of the 18th century adapting the hoop-skirt to the free and easy attitudes, frisky and ostentatious, of the Hoffman Girls.

"Completely resigned to their fate, the Parisians accept all that cheerfully. They will be rewarded, however, by the magnificent film which concludes the program and which commands international interest. Under the title "Chang," a director, whose resourcefulness and temerity abash, has written with moving pictures a new "Jungle Book." We find in it all the familiar characters of Kipling. A slight story similar to those of 'Nanouk' and 'Moana,' connects all the splendid pictures of wild beasts at liberty, and gives us really new impressions. It is the very sympathetic formula of the super-documentary film perfected.

"We are happy to note that Americans understand at last the interest of these tragedies of nature, much more interesting than their scenarios produced in series in their factories. There are in "Chang" outstanding pictures of tigers, leopards, monkeys and other 'stars' no less photogenic, which are veritable masterpieces of documentation and expression.

"Here is magnificent work of art obtained by the sincerity and honesty in the profession. It has met with considerable and well deserved success. Will the great producers decide, in view of the great increasing success of this type of film, to devote their immense resources, which they have wasted so carelessly up to the present time, in the construction of card-board sets and doubtful reproductions of past civilizations, to the production of beautiful films of this kind? Doesn't a film like 'Chang' prove to them that there is enough living beauty on earth to make it unnecessary to attempt to galvanize the phantoms in the dust of the necropolises?"

TO those who are familiar with Harold B. Franklin's background and accomplishments as a theatre executive there will be little surprise that a book on theatre operation of which he is the author encompasses such authentic and comprehensive treatment of the subject as does "Motion Picture Theatre Management," recently published by the George H. Doran Company.

On the other hand, the average layman, unprepared by experience or contact with the business operations and mechanics, deliberately screened from his view on his frequent or desultory visitations to the theatre, may well be expected to express wonder that the craft has become so specialized and business-like as it is accurately revealed to be in this well-considered discusion of its structure and admnistration.

MR. FRANKLIN'S work represents, first, an ambitious effort to lay before the reader a blueprint of the structure and methods of motion picture theatre operation and conduct—before the student a text upon which he may pursue his duties and with the aid of actual experience perfect himself in his knowledge of the craft—and before the experienced showman a discussion and analysis of experiences and conclusions developing from a career which amounts to a life work in all branches of the theatre.

That he has succeeded to such a degree in all these departments is quite remarkable, for it must be borne in mind that he embarks upon an uncharted sea. Those works which have preceded his have made no such attempt, being content rather to concentrate with greater detail upon specific features of theatre management.

The division of the subject is finely handled. Mr. Franklin has laid out his book in seven parts. These are headed, Introductory, containing an explanation of the purpose of the book and a brief sketch of the picture industry; Management and Organization, in which the departments, personnel, house management, safety devices and fire drills, etc., are treated; Plant and Structure, dealing with building, equipment, etc; Personnel, a description of the various duties of the several staffs; Finance, a discussion of methods of financing projects, accounting control, purchasing, insurance, etc.; Auxiliary and Contributive Elements, describing advertising, stage production, music, stage acts, refrigeration of the future of the motion picture theatre.

The work is illustrated with exhibits ranging from reproductions of advertisements to inspection and box office reports. In its detailed description of such practical and every-day requisite of theatre operation as fire drills, safety methods and the handling of "lost and found" departments, the book will serve a highly utilitarian purpose for the average theatre manager. Equally important as a reference work for the men and women now engaged in departments of the theatre are its outlines of the formation and maintenance of service staffs, duties of the various members of the staff, projection room reports, organization and routine of the auditing department, color in lighting and advertising, etc.

IT is a book written from the standpoint of actual experience and the greatest familiarity with the subject, and will take its place among the better efforts of its kind. As such "Motion Picture Theatre Management" no doubt will find its place among the text books of courses at commercial schools and the training courses conducted by circuit organizations.

AT the premiere of "The Enemy" was Louis B. Mayer, who arrived unheralded from Hollywood via Washington. Usually, when executives go to and come from the Coast, their arrivals and departures are duly publicized, so an arrival, without publicity, is generally taken to indicate that an important news story may be just in the offing.

"CHICAGO" in its celluloid form, after amusing metropolitan audiences over a considerable period as a play, opened Friday night at the Gaiety theatre, New York.

Opinion will vary greatly as to the relative merits of this latest Broadway long run attraction, which purports to be satire but turns out to be melodrama in its beginning and ending with a fine assortment of burlesque in between.

To explain this curious mixture, it seems best to recall to mind what Mark Twain had to say about his story "Puddin' Head Wilson" in the foreword relative to "The Siamese Twins" published under the same cover. It seems that Mr. Clemens started out to write a burlesque story concerning the world famous Siamese twins and ended with a melodrama in which the twins were largely incidental. So Mr. Clemens extracted his twins burlesque from its more important brother yarn and printed it as a second book.

But Mr. De Mille has not profited by Mr. Clemens' example and in consequence, in the picture, we have what is practically what might have been two stories that clash in mood and which do not fit together any more than Mark Twain's two stories did.

The melodrama is effective, well done and interest compelling. The acting and production values are there. The characters are well defined and the story well told. The burlesque is fairly humorous and equally as well done, conforming more nearly to the idea of the original play which poked fun at our modern murder trials with its attendant newspaper publicity and sob sister stuff.

Take the burlesque out of the melodrama of "Chicago" and you have left a corking good picture with which no exhibitor will find fault. Add to the farce comedy of "Chicago," giving it a beginning and a finis, and you will have another attraction that will hold a fair box office value and provide sufficient entertainment to justify its existence.

But in its present form we fail to see "Chicago" as a New York long-run attraction.

And this is another demonstration of institutional strength.

We have said our little say about ouselves, breaking a precedent of fifteen years. And now we will go on speaking of others. In this closing week of 1927 we extend to all these others the best of sincere good wishes for the better future and the fair name of the whole industry.

W. M. Shirley to Manage Farash Theatres

William M. Shirley, who after helping in the reorganization of the Farash Theatre Corporation in Schenectady, New York, sold out his interest two and one-half years ago, has again become associated with the Farash company, having been last week elected president and general manager by Farash Theatre Corporation officials. Miss Jennett Farley was elected vice-president, Guy Graves was named secretary and W. W. Farley was elected treasurer.

By the terms of a recently completed negotiation, the Van Curler theatre becomes part of the Farash chain and Vitaphone and Movietone go into the Strand Theatre in Schenectady. Shirley and Graves, now managing the State Theatre, become half owners of the corporation, Farley retaining control of the remaining 50 per cent. Shirley becomes general manager of all the Farash theatres in Schenectady. He will assume complete control over the State, Strand, Wedgeway, Van Curler, Albany and Barch theatres with Graves as associate manager.

Manfred Lee Leaving Sterling Pictures

Manfred Lee, publicity and advertising director of Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, is resigning from his position with that company on January 1. He anticipates employing his talents eventually in writing for the screen. He held his present position with Sterling for a year, before which time he was in the publicity and advertising department of F B O. He is the author of several screen stories, one of them being "Closed Gates," which Sterling made into a picture.

Managers Institute Names Instructors

The Moving Pictures Theatres Managers Institute, which will open for regular session on January 16, has announced the names of its staff of instructors. D. M. Baltimore has been selected as director of the institute and will also act as instructor in theatre technics. Mark Weisberg is instructor of theatre management and service. J. Raymond LeStrange is instructor of advertising, publicity and exploitation.

Registration at the institute is expected to close at an early date.

First National Month Dedicated to Rowland

THE First National month for the new year will be dedicated to Richard A. Rowland, vice-president general and producing manager of First National Pictures. In the words of Ned E. Depinet, vice-president and general manager of distribution, the month is dedicated as a tribute to Mr. Rowland, "whose broad vision and masterful direction have given and is still giving the company the best product in its history."

The First National month occurs every January, when the sales department puts forth its best efforts. Strictly speaking, the "month" is really six weeks. The starting day was Christmas.

Five Leading Atlanta Theatres Are Rumored for Pool

REPORTS from Atlanta are to the effect that five of the city's foremost picture houses are to be merged in their operation. They are the Howard (Publix), Grand (Loew's), Capitol (Universal), Metropolitan (Independent) and Georgia (Keith). The rumor of the merger is denied in New York.

The rumor is that it is not entirely a matter of overseating that suggests the merger, but the pyramiding of entertainment costs for stage numbers. Competition has been keen for these stage acts, and they will be reduced materially if the suggested plan goes through.

The elimination of many of these costly acts would cut the overhead and at the same time would have little effect on the patronage if all these leading houses decided at the same time to shorten up on stage acts.

Exhibitor Units Oppose Percentage Pictures

Nine Associations Support Maryland Body in Declaring Method Unfair to Exhibitors

NINE exhibitor associations of the United States or their leading executives have emphatically declared their approval of the stand taken by the Maryland association with regard to percentage bookings. The Maryland body has gone on record as refusing to book percentage pictures other than in first runs, and has asked other associations to protest against this style of booking. Practically all of those who have responded to the suggestion have declared against the percentage bookings.

The organizations that have approved the Maryland stand are: Michigan, Connecticut, Cleveland, Ohio, Eastern Missouri, and Southern Illinois, the T. O. C. C. of New York City, Oklahoma, Montana and Indiana. They have all declared against the percentage and guarantee or the percentage and overage system.

Arthur H. Lockwood, president of the Connecticut association, says that the exhibitors of his state have never taken up the question of percentage bookings as an organization matter, but that they are decidedly opposed to such bookings, largely because of the terms that usually prevail under the system.

Lockwood is not personally opposed to percentage pictures under proper conditions. In fact he thinks they would be desirable on a sliding scale of percentages under which the rate is increased as the picture's gross increases. He says there may be a little difficulty in working out such a scheme at first, but eventually the method would be fairest for both parties.

James Matthews, secretary of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, says that his organization always has been opposed to percentage bookings, and has been on record to that effect for a number of years, and that there is no chance of them changing their attitude.

According to the stand taken by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois at their November convention, that body is unalterably opposed to percentage at any and all times. They coincided entirely with the stand taken by Maryland.

H. M. Richey, business manager of the Michigan exhibitors association, had considerable to say with regard to percentages. In part, he said:

"It seems to me there is about as much sense in attempting to formulate rules that will prevent percentage bookings as there would be to attempt to make a rule that all films should be sold for $15.00 a picture. It is purely a situation between the exhibitor and the film company.

"That percentage booking is wrong from the exhibitor's viewpoint is admitted. The theory of percentage may be all right, but the idea of a guarantee that is more than the price the exhibitor would normally pay plus an overage in case the picture might accidentally exceed a given amount is a joke, and any exhibitor who buys pictures on that basis is deserving of the cleansing he usually gets.

"Time and again exhibitors know that when they wanted to play a whole group of pictures percentage they were turned down or if not turned down on the first group the producers never came back the second time and were willing to play percentage."

National Theatre Supply Appoints New Manager

Following the resignation of B. F. Shearer and A. M. Larsen as managers in the Pacific Northwest territory for National Theatre Supply Company, which resignations took effect December 31, Roy C. Peacock has been appointed manager of the Seattle and Portland branches of National Theatre Supply Company. Mr. Peacock is well known throughout the Northwest.

In charge of the Interior Decorating Department of National Theatre Supply has been placed D. D. Brown, formerly of the wholesale and upholstery department of Marshall Field and Co. of Chicago.

An engineering department has been established by National Theatre Supply to aid exhibitors in solving any problems of an engineering nature.

Standard Contract Conferences Are Due Late in January

THE conferences growing out of the recent Trade Practices Conference in New York with regard to a better form of standard exhibition contract between exhibitors and producers and distributors, are likely to be held in Chicago the latter part of January or early in February, according to present indications.

At the Trade Practices Conference it was agreed to hold contract arbitration meetings early in January at a place to be agreed upon. Communication has been going on steadily for the past few weeks, but it is not likely there will be meetings before the latter part of January at the earliest.

It is the general impression if any changes are made in the existing contract it will be only after a hard struggle. The producers and distributors insist that the present contract is the fairest that could possibly be drawn to meet the conditions in the trade.

The independent exhibitors were given the few weeks elapsing between the Trade Practices Conference and the coming sessions to gather facts in support of their arguments for changes in the present form and to suggest changes which they thought would be more equitable.

Blue Laws Again Menace

Western Missouri, Kansas Theatened With Renewed Sunday Closing Propaganda

NEVER before has such a black and menacing cloud of Sunday closing propaganda hovered over Western Missouri and Kansas. A genuine blue law war in Pittsburg, Kans., a town of 25,000 population, is causing widespread interest in that the exhibitors have sworn out complaints and caused the arrest of more than 250 business men of the town on charges of operating their business on Sunday.

The arrests included druggists, garage owners and men in all walks of industry. As a result the police courts in Pittsburg did a standing room business. Prior to last spring Pittsburg's motion picture theatres had been closed on Sundays for about twelve years. Last spring, however, they opened, and there at first was no opposition forthcoming. Then the ministers and many laymen got busy and the city council passed an ordinance prohibiting Sunday shows. Several exhibitors were arrested. Glenn H. Taylor, lawyer, was retained as attorney for the exhibitors, who contended that the city ordinance did not repeal the ancient Sunday labor law of Kansas, which is a state, and not a city, law. It was under the latter law that the exhibitors had business men arrested. "We hope to arouse the citizens of Pittsburg to see that it is not fair to close motion picture theatres on Sunday and permit everybody else to operate their businesses," Mr. Taylor said. "The results of all these arrests should arouse people to a point where they will demand a calling of an election on Sunday shows."

The advance announcement of the exhibitors that they would file complaints against business houses which operated on Sunday caused about fifty places of business to close, but hundreds remained open. Joplin, Mo., a city of 60,000 population, which has Sunday shows, and which is only a few miles from Pittsburg on a concrete highway, has been a mecca for Pittsburgh movie fans on Sundays in past years.

At Warrensburg, Mo., a town of 8,000, Nick Bradley, prosecuting attorney, announced he would close motion picture theatres on Sundays under the ancient Missouri labor law. R. M. Shelton, manager of the Star theatre in that city, came back with the announcement that if his theatre was closed he would file complaints against all business houses which remained open on Sunday and make it impossible for a person to buy a box of matches or obtain change for a church collection.

Three Canadian Towns Against Daylight Saving

The rate-payers of a number of Canadian cities voted decisively against Daylight Saving proposals when they went to the polls for the 1928 civic elections. In two particular instances, Daylight Saving bylaws were smothered by large majorities in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and in London, Ontario. In Hamilton, Ontario, another large city, the voters are also opposed to summer time in 1928.

In Winnipeg, the exhibitors, headed by the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Manitoba, and the Winnipeg Film Board of Trade, worked actively against the measure. They also helped to bring about the defeat of a proposal for the erection of a civic auditorium, the cost of which would have been $800,000.

Toronto, Ontario, will again have Daylight Saving in 1928, the property owners there having supported a measure one year ago which provided for daylight saving for the following three years.

Alhambra in Toronto Robbed of Over $1,000

A daring robbery occurred at the Alhambra Theatre, a large Famous Players suburban house in Toronto, Canada, over the week-end when thieves broke into the building, entered the manager's office after smashing the door and carted away the safe in an automobile. This was done in spite of the fact that a police station is located only a short distance away.

The shattered safe was found under a railway trestle in another part of the city several days later. Upwards of $1,000 and a quantity of tickets were secured by the robbers. The robbery was not discovered until Monday morning. W. T. McKnight, formerly a well-known newspaper man of Toronto, is manager of the Alhambra.

Sterling Closes Deals for Foreign Distribution

A deal with the etablissement Roger Weil, negotiated through M. Jean Vanderhyden, Sterling representative in Paris, was concluded a short time ago by Sterling Pictures. The agreement calls for the distribution of ten of Sterling's productions in France and in the northern French colonies. Another deal, also concluded by M. Vanderhyden, calls for the distribution in Switzerland of six Sterling releases.

Sterling has severed all business connections with the Helios Film Company of Berlin, which formerly handled its product through Central Europe. It has turned, instead, to A. Fried, representative of the company with headquarters in London, and to M. Vanderhyden of Paris; these two, it is said, have practically 100 per cent operation in the continent.

What Sterling regards as one of its most important recent deals is the closing of a contract with the A. L. A. Film Trading Corporation through Henry Arius, president of the distributing company. The deal makes the company sole agents of Sterling for all Continental Europe on the 1927-28 product. This latter deal does not conflict with those with Messrs. Fried and Vanderhyden, says Sterling, as they are taking care of the Sterling product up to but not including 1927-28.

Skouras Will Assume Charge of Saxe Chain

Spyrous Skouras becomes general manager of the Saxe theatre circuit, which is thought to be a step in the direction of the proposed pooling of four Middle West circuits as planned in the expansion program of West Coast. It is rumored that Skouras Bros., St. Louis, one of the four firms sought for the pool, has already joined or is about to become part of the deal.

Harold B. Franklin has gone to New York to discuss, it is said, the reported pooling of the four theatre circuits. He is scheduled to meet M. L. Finkelstein of Northwest Theatres or Finkelstein and Ruben, Minneapolis, for conferences which will have to do, probably, with the bringing into the pool of the F. and R. circuit.

H. Gibbs Joins Tiffany-Stahl Organization

Harry Gibbs, associated with Fox Films for six years as special representative over the United States and later as manager of the Fox New Haven office, has joined Tiffany-Stahl as a special representative. After leaving Fox, Gibbs became connected with Metro where he was their special representative covering the eastern territory.

As an agent of Tiffany-Stahl he will cover New York, Albany, Buffalo and Philadelphia.

Exhibitors Herald and M. P. World Merge

"THE Exhibitors Herald" and "Moving Picture World" were merged this week under the terms of an agreement between Martin J. Quigley, publisher and editor of the "Herald," and John F. Chalmers, president of the Chalmers Publishing Company.

The merged paper will be published under the joint title, "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World." The first issue of the combined publications will be that of Jan. 7, 1928.

Mr. Quigley will be the publisher and editor of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World." The "World" was established in 1907 and the "Herald" in 1915.

Few Companies Granted Albany Charters

Motion picture companies chartered in Albany to begin business in New York state during the past week included the following: Thomas Dixon, Inc., capitalization not stated, Thomas Dixon, Irving D. Lipkowitz, Janice R. Engel, New York City; Riskin Productions Incorporated, $100,000, A. Everett Riskin, Ethel Friedman, Harriet Heitman, New York City; Franklin Theatre Corporation, capitalization not stated, Herman Bogdish, Emanuel Dominitz, Max N. Ginsberg, New York City; Doris Niles Company, Inc., capitalization not stated, Florence P. Cornelia and Doris Niles, New York City.

Newman Rockett's Aide in Berlin Studio

E. de B. Newman has been appointed assistant to Ray Rockett in the First National studios in Berlin, Germany. Newman has been working at First National's studio on the West Coast as an assistant to Watterson R. Rothacker, managing director, in different capacities. He will sail for Germany on the SS Deutschland on January 5.

Newman's business career extends over more than 20 years. He spent 12 of these years as assistant to the president of the Cadillac organization, also acting as plant manager of one of the Cadillac airplane factories. He became associated several years ago with First National in the home office and later came to California, subsequently becoming manager of the Thomas H. Ince interests and more recently general manager of the Mary Pickford Company.

Christie Finishes "Tillie's Punctured Romance"

Al Christie's modern screen version of the oldtime comedy, "Tillie's Punctured Romance," had its last scene shot this week, and the film is now in the hands of the cutters for titling and assembling. The production, scheduled for February 18th release, has a large cast of featured players including W. C. Fields, Mack Swain, Chester Conklin, Louise Fazenda, Doris Hill, Grant Withers, Tom Kennedy, Babe London and Kalla Pahsa.

$100,000,000 Production Plan for Fox

Arrangements Being Made for Expenditure of That Sum Within Next Five Years

FOX FILM CORPORATION is completing definite production plans that call for an expenditure of approximately $100,000,000 within the next five years. That sum includes the cost of plays, novels, short stories and original screen material, talent, directorial salaries and all other production expenditures. It also includes costs of some of the larger productions already completed.

It is the plan of the Fox company to produce annually twelve special attractions of the calibre of "Sunrise," "What Price Glory" and "7th Heaven" of the current year, for release one each month for the five year period. At the present time preliminary plans for the 1928-29 season are practically complete and work on the 1929-30 season is getting under way.

Among the finished attractions, all of which will be shown in legitimate theatres in New York City in the near future, and which will have pre-release presentations in the larger theatres throughout the country this winter and spring are: "The Street Angel," with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell; "Four Sons," to be directed by John Ford with James Hall, Earle Foxe, Margaret Mann, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., George Meeker, Charles Morton and June Collyer, and "Mother Machree," in which Belle Bennett will have the title role, with Victor McLaglen, Neil Hamilton, Ted McNamara, Ethel Clayton and Constance Howard.

"Sunrise," the F. W. Murnau production, is now playing at the Times Square Theatre in New York, the Carthay Circle in Hollywood and the Capitol in Berlin. It will be seen in the near future in a number of the larger cities throughout the United States, and will be released generally at the beginning of the 1928-29 season next August or September.

Other pictures of the standard of "Sunrise" now in production include "The 4 Devils," also directed by Murnau; "The Red Dancer of Moscow," which Raoul Walsh is directing with Dolores Del Rio in the title role, and "Hangman's House," with John Ford directing a cast which includes William Farnum as the Citizen, and June Collyer.

Other pictures either in work or completed that will not be shown generally before the beginning of the 1928-29 season are, "Fagil," featuring Charles Farrell and Greta Nissen; "Mother Knows Best," which Frank Borzage will direct; "Speakeasy," from the stage melodrama; "White Silence," a drama of the Northland; "Pigskin," a football story by James Hopper; "Plastered in Paris," a comedy co-starring Ted McNamara and Sammy Cohen; "Lipstick," which will feature Madge Bellamy; "Don't Marry," which J. G. Blystone will direct, and "The Dollar Princess."

The Fox company is making plans to complete a number of feature length pictures with Movietone, among the first of which will be "The Dollar Princess." Construction of special sound proof studios and other necessities for the production of talking pictures on a big scale already have been completed.

Three pictures that will be made on an elaborate scale for distribution to theatres during the 1929-30 season are "The Cock-eyed World," a sequel to "What Price Glory," which will again co-feature Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe; "Blossom Time," which will probably be made in Movietone, and "The Mud Turtle," which F. W. Murnau will direct.

The internationalization of Fox attractions is being given much consideration. One of the big steps in this direction will be the production of a special picture on an elaborate scale in Hungary, with the cooperation of the Hungarian government, and another in Spain, where full government cooperation has been promised.

"Man Who Laughs" Nearly Completed

PAUL LENI, German director under contract to Universal, expects to shoot the last scene of "The Man Who Laughs" on Monday, January 9. The print is expected in New York by January 16. Leaving two weeks for the composition of the musical score, Universal will be in a position to open the New York engagement on or before January 30. Wayne Pierson of the Universal road show department is carrying on negotiations for the leasing of a Broadway legitimate house for the presentation of the screen version of the Victor Hugo novel on which cutting, titling and editing have been in progress for the past three weeks.

Actual shooting of the picture began the first of September, preceded by six months of research work.

Will Test Baltimore Blue Ordinance

Although he would not disclose the name of the playhouse to be used, John Callan, president of the Liberty Defense League in Baltimore, has declared that a motion picture theatre would be opened on Sunday before the end of January in the Northeast section of the city for public entertainment and that a charge for admission will be made.

Mr. Callan says he expects to be arrested but that he is going ahead anyway and that the people can bank on it that the present laws under which the opening of motion picture houses on Sunday is forbidden are going to be made ineffective.

Mr. Callan then went on to say: "You can't conduct a concert of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra or a benefit at some big moving picture house and make a little family movie stay closed. I am a member of the next legislature and I am going to bring it up there."

"Miracle" Injunction is Vacated by Failure to Post Bond

THE failure of the plaintiff to post a bond of $100,000 has resulted in the injunction on the "Miracle" rights being vacated. The injunction was secured against Joseph Menchen and M.-G. to restrain production, exhibition or advertising of "The Miracle" pending settlement over screen rights to the play.

The injunction was originally granted A. H. Woods, Ross B. Woods and First National in Special Term, Part I, of the Supreme Court. The proviso was that the plaintiff post the $100,000 bond within twenty days. The order vacating the injunction was signed last Thursday.

First National contracted with Woods for film rights to the Max Reinhardt production and M-G-M contracted with Menchen for the same rights. Menchen claims exclusive rights were granted him when he produced a picture based on the play in 1912. At the same time he assigned distribution rights to A. H. Woods on condition that he pay $25,000. Menchen claims Woods defaulted on the contract and the rights therefor reverted to him. Woods denies defaulting and insists he controls the screen rights to the play.

Quota Bill Becomes Law In England

King's Assent Makes Law Effective January 1, Curtails Market for U. S. Pictures

THE quota bill has become a law in England. Passed by the House of Commons some time ago as a Cinematograph Films Act, 1927, it needed only the King's assent to become a law, and this was given during the week. It goes into effect January 1, 1928 and will continue in force until September 30, 1938.

The quota affects the number of British pictures to be distributed and exhibited in England and naturally puts a curtailment on the number of American productions to be distributed and exhibited. The law makes it compulsory for distributors to include British pictures in their schedules and for exhibitors to show British pictures on their screens.

The quota is put on a scale which increases each year or each two years from 7½ per cent for distributors and 5 per cent for exhibitors, to 20 per cent for both for three years previous to the conclusion of the ten year period. For the year ending March 31, 1929 distributors must include 7½ per cent British pictures and exhibitors must show 5 per cent of British films.

Not only does the bill provide for quotas, but it also deals with blind booking and advance booking. It provides among other things, that the renter cannot sell nor the exhibitor buy sight unseen. Dating in of pictures is also prohibited, so that time can be allotted for British pictures.

According to the conditions, in pictures contracted for before October 1, 1928, the booking time limit must not exceed a year. In the case of contracts signed on or after October 1, 1928, and before October 1, 1929, advance booking is limited to nine months. After October 1, 1929, advance bookings are cut to six months.

But for these provisions made there would be no way in determining when quota pictures could reach the British theatres because of the fact that at the present time American companies have sewed up so much playing time.

The jumps in the percentage quotas from year to year or for each two years are made uniform for both distributor and exhibitor. The increase is 2½ per cent, except for those years when it remains unchanged.

The quotas are as follows:

Distributors' Quota		Exhibitors' Quota
March 31, 1929	7½%	Sept. 30, 1929	5%
" 1930	10 "	" 1930	7½"
" 1931	10 "	" 1931	7½"
" 1932	12½"	" 1932	10 "
" 1933	15 "	" 1933	12½"
" 1934	17½"	" 1934	15 "
" 1935	17½"	" 1935	15 "
" 1936	20 "	" 1936	20 "
" 1937	20 "	" 1937	20 "
" 1938	20 "	" 1938	20 "

Bill Against Fight Films Ban Introduced

A bill has been introduced into Congress by Representative Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, to repeal the act of July 31, 1912 prohibiting the importation and interstate transportation of films of prize fighting. It is thought that the bill will have an excellent chance of passing as it has been effectively proved how inadequate the present law is in prohibiting the exhibition of fight films.

Seven Features From M-G-M During January

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's group of feature releases for the first month of the new year consists of seven pictures, vehicles from Goulding, Lubitsch, Seastrom, Sedgwick, Leonard Wood and other directors which feature John Gilbert, Greta Garbo, Norma Shearer, Ramon Novarro, William Haines and other stars.

Scheduled for general release on January 2nd is "Love," the Gilbert-Garbo co-starring picture, now playing the Embassy in New York. Scheduled for release on January 30th is "The Student Prince," the Novarro-Shearer co-starring vehicle which has just completed a four-months' run at the Astor in New York.

"West Point," starring William Haines with Joan Crawford as the feminine lead, is another feature due from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer during January. Following it will be "The Divine Woman," in which Greta Garbo is featured and Lars Hanson plays the leading male role. "Rookies," co-featuring the comedy team of Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, will also arrive during the month ushering in the new year, which will also have "Pullman Porters," a new Shearer vehicle, and "The Law of the Range," featuring Tim McCoy. Ralph Forbes is the leading man in the Shearer opus, and Miss Crawford again appears as the feminine lead in the McCoy Western.

Thre New Fox Pictures Launched at Studio

Within the span of the two days preceding Christmas, three pictures—"The Red Dancer of Moscow," "The Escape" and "Dressed to Kill"—were placed into initial production stages at the studio of Fox Films in Hollywood. On Thursday the first picture was launched under the direction of Raoul Walsh. On Friday Richard Rosson began work on the second, a film version of the Paul Armstrong play. At the same time the third film was started by Irving Cummings.

Dolores Del Rio is playing the featured role in "The Red Dancer of Moscow;" opposite her will be Charles Farrell and in the cast Andre De Surgurola, Leila Hyams, and Ivan Linow. From a script by Paul Schofield, Director Rosson will produce "The Escape" with William Russell and Virginia Valli co-featured and Nancy Drexel, George Meeker and James Gordon in supporting parts. Director Cummings collaborated with William Conselman on "Dressed to Kill," a vehicle for Edmund Lowe and Mary Astor. Ben Bard, Robert E. O'Connor, R. O. Pennell, Robert Perry, Joe Brown, Tom Dugan and John Kelly are members of the supporting cast.

W. Pa. and W. Va. T. O. to Meet April 22-24

The Motion Picture Theatres Owners of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia will hold their eighth annual convention in Pittsburgh on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, April 22, 23 and 24. The meetings will take place in a prominent hotel, still to be selected.

As the first day of the convention will occur on a Sunday, arrangements are being made for a trade showing at a Pittsburgh theatre in the afternoon. Some social event, it is expected, will take place in the evening.

Sam Dembow, Jr., Elected Publix Vice-President

At a meeting held this week the directors of Publix Theatres Corporation elected Sam Dembow, Jr., vice-president.

Mr. Dembow has been with the theatre corporation for the past two years, working in the capacity of manager of the booking and buying department, and then as assistant to Sam Katz, president of Publix Theatres Corporation.

Movietone Subjects Ready for Release

SCREEN divertissements—vaudeville sketches, songs, jazz orchestrations, etc.,—will be ready for release by Fox Films the first week of January. They are Movietone subjects featuring Raquel Meller, Ben Bernie and orchestra, Gertrude Lawrence, Chic Sales and they will be followed in the future, promises Fox, by condensed screen versions of popular musical comedies.

In her Movietone appearance Raquel Meller renders four songs: "Flor de Mal," "Corpus Christi Day," "La Mujer del Rorero" and "Noi de la Mare." The Bernie number offers "A Lane in Spain," "Are You Going to Be Home?" and "Scheherazade." Chic Sales has a comedy sketch in "They're Coming to Get Me." Anatole Friedland's Ritz Revue appears in a sketch called "On the Beach in Atlantic City."

Gertrude Lawrence, J. Harold Murray and the Rio Rita Girls give "I Don't Know," "Ranger Song" and "The Doll Dance." Minnie Lightner offers two songs, "Nagasaki Butterfly" and "Everybody Loves My Girl." The Kentucky Jubilee Choir and Nina Tarasova render "Old Kentucky Home," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and "Them Were the Happy Days."

Dolores Costello Working on First Vitaphone Role

Dolores Costello, Warner Bros. star, is still at work at the Vitaphone plant making the special sound sequences to be incorporated in her latest vehicle, "Tenderloin." The Warner studio was shut down last week for a period of two months before beginning the new program of films for 1928-29. Under the direction of Michael Curtiz, Miss Costello is making her first scenes in which the Vitaphone is employed, her voice registering very well, according to studio executives. Other members of the cast, including Conrad Nagel, are appearing in these sound sequences, also.

Florence Vidor Signed by Paramount

Florence Vidor has signed a new contract with Paramount calling for her services with that company for the next 18 months. Her first assignment under the new agreement will be a role opposite Emil Jannings in the latter's next Paramount vehicle, "The Patriot." Under the contract the actress will be permitted to take a six-months' vacation in Europe beginning in May.

Evelyn Brent and Vera Veronina are also in the cast of the Jannings vehicle.

Al Jolson to Star in "Pagliacci, the Clown"

Al Jolson, musical comedy favorite, who, following his appearance in Warner Bros.' "The Jazz Singer," signed a contract with the Warners, will make his second screen appearance in "Pagliacci, the Clown," to be made with Vitaphone supplementing the action. The story, of course, is inspired by the opera by Leoncavallo.

Jolson is now vacationing, but as soon as he is rested he will return to California to continue his screen career.

French Quota Law Due

French Commission Will Submit 7 to 1 Plan to Government in January

THE French National Cinema Commission is contemplating the establishment of a quota law of 7 to 1, according to a cable from Paris this week. The commission, following a meeting, expressed their approval of the plan as a suitable method of re-establishing the French Film industry.

It is likely that the commission will present the plan to the Government in January and that a decree will be forthcoming creating the quota. The only possibility of forestalling such a law now, it is said, is for the American and French producers to get together on a last minute agreement, which would be more favorable to the French industry.

It is the general impression that the proposed quota law is a forerunner of an alliance among the British, French and German producers in an effort to get more co-operation from the American producers and distributors in the matter of their product in America.

If the present play of a 7 to 1 quota is carried out it will mean that a total of about 525 pictures could be imported into France yearly, as French producers now make about 75 pictures a year. The plan is for each French producer to receive seven import licenses for every picture he produces, under rules drawn up by the commission, and to be submitted to the government. Foreign producers will be required to buy the permits of transfer in order to import pictures into France. The price of the licenses would be fixed by the French producers.

While there is talk of establishing some sort of reciprocal arrangement as the basis for transfer of licenses, the French impression is that such a plan would not meet with the approval of the government.

Discontinue Home Films

Paramount Assures Ohio Exhibitors Rentals for Use in Homes Will Be Discontinued

PARAMOUNT is to discontinue the distribution of pictures for showing within homes, according to assurance given by S. R. Kent to P. J. Wood, business manager of the Ohio exhibitor organization. Present contracts to supply pictures for homes is for one year only, and will be discontinued at their expiration, according to Kent.

The statement was the result of a protest from the Ohio association to a campaign being carried on by Paul Goldman, of the Paramount special exhibition department, to supply an evening's entertainment within the home.

S. R. Kent, General Manager of Paramount Famous Lasky

In his assurance to Wood, Kent said:

"I heartily agree with your protest against my campaign for motion picture entertainment in homes. I was personally responsible for a contract made for twelve of our productions, but this was due to circumstances which had previously involved our word. We were supposed to make a three-year contract. This was afterwards compromised by me for one year only, and the contract will not be renewed. The campaign being carried on by Mr. Goldman was something I did not know of, and has been discontinued."

The circular sent out by Goldman was, in part, as follows:

"Let us provide a motion picture program to be selected from our many currently evening's entertainment in your home. We will arrange the services of an expert licensed projectionist and the necessary temporary equipment to present the pictures. You will be assured of an entirely satisfactory service at reasonable rental costs."

In his protest, Wood wrote:

"We urge that you give this matter the very serious consideration which it deserves, and that you publicly announce the discontinuance of your special exhibition department and confine your sales efforts to the field where they rightly belong and which will eventually result in giving the greatest profit, equally, among the thousands of exhibitors throughout the country."

Columbia Schedules "The Siren" for December

"The Siren," co-starring Dorothy Revier and Tom Moore, with Norman Trevor in a heavy delineation, is Columbia's second release for December. Byron Haskin directed.

Hudson Joins Columbia

Becomes Production Supervisor, with Elmer Harris New Scenario Department Chief

COLUMBIA PICTURES has made three valuable additions to its executive staff in the persons of Earl Hudson, Elmer Harris and LeRoy Johnston. The appointments were made last week. Hudson has been named supervisor of production, Harriss has been put in charge of the enlarged scenario department, and Johnston succeeds Mike Newman as director of studio publicity. Three prominent writers have also been added to the scenario staff. They are Will M. Ritchey, Rex Taylor and Hugh Cummings.

Hudson goes to Columbia after having had several years of service as production supervisor for First National both on the west coast and in the east. Among the successes he supervised were "Flaming Youth," "Black Oxen," and "Men of Steel." His first duty for Columbia will be the supervision of "Lady Raffles," which will mark Estelle Taylor's debut on the Columbia program.

Harris has had wide experience in the writing and production end of the industry. He has several stage successes and short stories to his credit. He entered pictures as scenario writer of Paramount, became production manager for Realart, and has been affiliated with De Mille since P. D. C. was organized. For the latter company he did adaptations and edited the La Rocque vehicles.

Le Roy Johnston, new studio publicity director, was formerly identified with Finkelstein & Ruben and later joined the First National studio publicity department, where he handled the national publicity campaign in search of the ten best college boy types.

Ritchey, Taylor and Cummings were added to the scenario department in order to take care of the increased production now going on at the studio. Ritchey specializes in drama, while Taylor and Cummings will confine themselves largely to the comedy field. All three have had wide experience in screen writing and they will work under the supervision of Elmer Harris. Their addition increases the staff to nine, which includes, in addition to Harris, Dorothy Howell, Norman Springer, Harold Shumate, Ernest Pagano and Baroness Elsie von Koezian.

South Best for Western

Leads Country in Demand for Outdoor Type of Film, According to Survey

PAT CAMPBELL, Western sales manager for Pathe, is just back from a tour of the field on which he made a survey of all parts of the country regarding the demand for Westerns. His figures show, among other things, that there is less demand for the Western in the extreme West than anywhere else in the country, and that this type of picture is most liked in the South.

The Pathe exchanges in the South that show a particular preference for the Westerns are: Memphis, Charlotte, Dallas, Atlanta and New Orleans. In the Mid-West the leading exchanges on the Westerns are: Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Oklahoma City, Cleveland and St. Louis. Westerns are popular in the West in the exchanges at Salt Lake City, Denver, Des Moines, and Seattle, and in the East in Boston, Albany and Washington.

It is a peculiar thing that this type of picture is less appreciated around Los Angeles and in the vicinity of San Francisco, where most of them are made, than in any other part of the country, unless it be New York City where they also seem to have comparatively little appeal.

The larger cities of the East, with the exception of Boston, where they are popular, are lukewarm with regard to the Western. Along the Atlantic seaboard, in such cities as Portland, New Haven and Philadelphia, they have little appeal.

The best city in the South for the Westerns is Memphis, and they are not particular who the star is so long as it is wild and wooly. Charlotte and Atlanta demand the outdoor type of picture. Oklahoma City and Dallas are the leading Southwestern cities for the Westerns.

Despite the lack of interest in this particular type of picture in some of the largest cities, Campbell declares that the Western is generally more popular than ever before and that its popularity is always on the increase. He is of the opinion that some of the cities now luke-warm on them will become more enthusiastic in the course of a comparatively short time.

"Films Only" Policy for United Artist House

IN accordance with his own line of presentation ideas and Joseph M. Schenck's announced opposition to vaudeville in film theatres, Hugo Riesenfeld, manager of United Artists Theatres, announced from Chicago last week that the United Artists Chicago house will have a policy of pictures only. The new theatre opens Monday evening December 26.

30 Paramount Films in Various Stages

Paramount now has 30 pictures being made ready for release. Nine of the group in the process of titling and cutting include "The Wedding March," "Wife Savers," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "The Last Command," "Love and Learn," "Sporting Goods," "Doomsday," "Under the Tonto Rim" and "The Legion of the Condemned."

Now actually before the camera at the Paramount studio are: "Abie's Irish Rose," "Feel My Pulse," "Red Hair," and George Bancroft's new starring vehicle not definitely titled. Also being made ready for Paramount release are: "Speedy," "The Pioneer Scout" and "Tillie's Punctured Romance."

Work is to start shortly up on "Partners in Crime" and on "The Patriot." In addition to these two, 12 stories are in the hands of the scenarists being prepared for early release.

F B O Will Release 12 During February

"Coney Island," "Legionnaires in Paris" and "Chicago After Midnight" are the three important feature offerings to be distributed by F B O during February.

Other February releases include "Fangs of the Wild," starring Ranger, the dog, to be issued on February 5; "Her Summer Hero," with a special cast made up of Sally Blane, James Pierce, Duane Thompson and others, to come on the 12th; "Wallflowers," with a special cast including Hugh Trevor, to be released on the 16th; "The Riding Renegade," featuring Bob Steele and "When the Law Rides," starring Tom Tyler, to be distributed on February 18th and 26th, respectively.

The four short subjects for the month of February include "Mickey in School," set for the 6th; "Oui, Oui, Heidelberg," set for the 13th; and two of Bill Nolan's Newslaffs, set for the 5th and 19th, respectively.

"We Americans" in Work At Universal City

"We Americans," the play by Max Siegel, is being transformed into a screen drama at Universal City under the direction of Edward Sloman. George Sidney and Beryl Mercer will have the roles of the parents of Patsy Ruth Miller and George Lewis and Eddie Phillips will be featured in the male leads. Others of importance in the cast are Jacob Bleifer, Albert Gran, Daisy Belmore, John Boles, Rosita Maristini, Michael Visaroff and Andy De Vine.

Universal expects to have the film version of the play complete before February 1.

Cadman Will Write Score for "Drums of Love"

David Wark Griffith has engaged Charles Wakefield Cadman to write the musical score of "Drums of Love," the newest Griffith picture for United Artists in which appear Mary Philbin, Don Alvarado, Lionel Barrymore and Tully Marshall.

Cadman, who has been making his home in Hollywood since 1910, is best known perhaps as the composer of the song, "The Land of the Sky Blue Water." His opera, "Shanewis" (The Robin Woman), has been given on numerous occasions at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

Renee Adoree Signs New M-G-M Contract

Renee Adoree has signed a new long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer whereby she will appear exclusively in film productions of that company. The French actress has the leading feminine role in the M-G-M special, "The Trail of '98."

Fox Films to Star Farrell Macdonald

FOX FILMS has re-signed Farrell Macdonald, character comedian to a five-year contract, whereby he will be starred in pictures by the Fox company.

Macdonald drops the initial "J" from his name with the signing of the contract. His first starring vehicle will follow "The Four Devils," the Murnau production in which, it is said, Macdonald has the most important role of his screen career. The new Fox star first attracted attention with his role of "Corporal Casey" in "The Iron Horse." He is now playing on the lots of other companies, having been loaned for featured parts in "Bringing Up Father," "Abie's Irish Rose" and "The Cohens and the Kellys in Paris."

Eight Shorts on Pathe's January 8 Program

A Mack Sennett comedy, "Smith's Holiday," heads Pathe's short subject program for the week of January 8th. The seven other offerings on the schedule include: "A Short Circuit," an Aesop fable by Paul Terry; Topics of the Day, No. 2; "Busy Bodies," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; Pathe Review, No. 2; "The Menace Unmasked," tenth chapter of the serial, "The Masked Menace,," and Nos. 6 and 7 of the Pathe News.

Alf Goulding directed the Sennett comedy under the supervision of J. A. Waldron. Mary Ann Jackson, Raymond McKee and Ruth Hiatt are, as usual, the Smith Family; another member of the cast is Irving Bacon. The Rice Sportlight demonstrates how the various muscles are brought into play, and form is achieved in sport. In the Review are: "An Oriental Venice," "Well Dressed Ears," and the second of the series on the Fiji Islanders, "The Land of the Firewalkers."

Tiffany-Stahl to Open New Orleans Office

Plans are rapidly nearing completion for the opening of a Tiffany-Stahl headquarters in New Orleans. Hank Hearn, southern film man, has been appointed manager.

Hearn first began his connection with the motion picture business in a Jacksonville theatre, afterwards transferring his energies to the distributing ends of the business. Soon he became manager of the Liberty Flm Distributing Corporation and established himself as a salesman, later becoming exchange manager. In 1926 he accepted the post of southern district manager for Associated Exhibitors, but resigned that position to return to Liberty.

Jerry Drew Signs New Educational Contract

Jerry Drew, Educational comedian, who formerly worked under the name of Clem Beauchamp, has been signed to a new three-year contract with Educational which specifies that he appear as starring player in the Mermaid comedies produced at the Educational studios.

Drew played his first co-featured part in a one-reeler less than two years ago after having directed several Cameo comedies.

Europe's Small Markets

Central and Eastern Countries Would Yield Much in Aggregate, Says Writer

By HEINRICH FRAENKEL

Berlin Correspondent, Motion Picture News

THINKING of Germany, Great Britain and other big markets in Europe, one should certainly not lose sight of the many small markets in Central and Eastern Europe which, negligible individually, still yield a rather substantial revenue, altogether.

Practically speaking, those markets are generally sold together with the Austrian rights, and, as a matter of fact, most of the dealers negotiating those markets have their headquarters in Vienna, some of them even in Berlin.

Austria, by the way, is not even the biggest of these markets, which comprise the huge area (so far little exploited and little exploitable) of the following countries: Czecho Slovakia, Austria, Hungary, Jugoslavia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey.

Of all those markets, Czecho Slovakia is the biggest, as far as the number of towns and theatres is concerned. There are 695 towns, 4 of which with more than 100,000 and seven of which with more than 50,000 inhabitants. The number of theatres in this very widely stretched country are 933, the majority of which, of course, are very small and playing once or twice a week only.

Austria, considerably reduced through the war, has 452 towns only, three of which have more than 100,000 and one more than 50,000 inhabitants. The number of theatres are 679, a small minority of which is worth the name and playing regularly.

Hungary has 427 towns, three of them with more than 100,000 and seven with more than 50,000 inhabitants. There are 644 theatres.

Jugoslavia has 208 towns only, three with more than 100,000 and two with more than 50,000 inhabitants. There are 302 theatres.

Roumania has 219 towns, five of which have more than 100,000 and nine more than 50,000 inhabitants. There are 366 theatres, most of them very small.

In the whole of Turkey, there are 66 towns only, two with more than 100,000 and four with more than 50,000 inhabitants. There are 145 theatres only. In Greece there are 94 towns, three of which have more than 100,000 and six of more than 50,000 inhabitants. The number of theatres is 189. In Bulgaria, with 68 towns, (two with more than 100,000 and one with more than 50,000 inhabitants), there are 132 theatres.

Each of these countries is still a very long way behind modern standards, as far as showmanship and general exploitation are concerned, although during the last two years considerable headway has been made, thanks to the enterprise of Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn and First National, which are well known to be just dissolving their joined organization, in order to operate individually again on these markets.

Most of the other big American Companies also have their own distributing organizations on the bigger ones of those markets, which are generally supplied from U. S. A. by more than 50 per cent, in some cases almost exclusively.

Glendon Allvine, recently appointed Director of Advertising and Publicity for Fox Film Corp.

Allvine Joins Fox Film Corporation

Glendon Allvine, well-known publicity, exploitation and advertising man, has been appointed director of publicity and advertising for Fox Film Corp., succeeding Vivian Moses, who retires after eight years' continuous service with Fox. Mr. Moses, also one of the most prominent of advertising and publicity men, will announce his plans shortly.

Mr. Allvine began his career as a Kansas City newspaperman, and soon found the show business as a publicity man. Entering the picture industry, he was with Paramount for eight years handling various types of advertising, publicity and exploitation. Last fall, he became publicity director of the Colony Theatre, New York City.

He has been with Fox for the past two months at the studios on the Coast, studying forthcoming productions.

Keith-Albee Circuits Adds New Theatre to Chain

Keith-Albee will be present by the name of the Montmartre Theatre, Bolton Street and Rockwell Place, Brooklyn, on January 2nd, at which time the management of the playhouse will be assumed by the big circuit. It will change a policy of attractive productions until the time of the Cameo on 42nd Street. The house was completed last summer and has a seating capacity of 600. "Wild Geese" will be the initial screen offering under the new management.

Chicago Owners Meet to Combat New Threat of Strike

CHICAGO exhibitors are again aroused by the possibility of new labor troubles which may bring about another strike such as closed the theatres of the city last Summer. A meeting was called for late this week to discuss ways and means of combating the new situation.

Demands of the operators presented to the exhibitors called for a 25 per cent increase in pay with seven days' pay for six days' work. The conditions are declared impossible by the exhibitors, who were thrown into a state of consternation.

It was thought with the termination of the strike late in the Summer that things would go on amicably for some time, but the new demands, if insisted upon by the operators, again threaten a serious state of affairs.

Schulberg Sees Changes

Predicts Next Year Will Bring About More Truth in Pictures and No "Gag" Comedies

A RADICAL change in pictures for the coming year is predicted by B. P. Schulberg, associate producer for Paramount, who foresees more truthful and human stories than have ever prevailed before, and who also sees them carefully and truthfully told.

As a result of these changes, which will bring more artistic accomplishment, Schulberg contends that ultimately the screen will positively dominate the entertainment field.

Gag comedies are a thing of the past, according to Schulberg's prophecy. They will no longer be weak in story and depend upon gags exclusively to get them over. The new comedies, he says, will have definite story value, they will be truthful and human, and at the same time will lose none of their lightness and humor.

In part, Schulberg says:

"The new year will also be a year of powerful historical drama; a year when the really great events and personalities of history will be made to live again. But spectacle, as such, will be subordinated to the human angle, the angle of truth.

"Last year the tremendous success of several of our pictures having endings on a logical note of tragedy, showed us that the public is eager to accept such vehicles, providing they speak the truth in showing life as it is. Paramount is therefore planning new pictures of the type. These will not be emphasized, however. We merely feel that now we can go ahead with such vehicles of heavy plot, knowing that they will be accepted as motion pictures depicting human existence as it is; truth again.

"There will never be a slackening in our production of light farce, smart sophistication, clever situations. Such stories will never lose their appeal. Producers will never lose sight of the fact that it is their business to entertain and not to instruct, unless the instruction can be given entertainingly, as in the case of historic spectacle."

Denny and "U" Settle Differences

REGINALD DENNY and Universal have settled their differences, and all is again serene between them, it is reported. Denny complained that suitable vehicles were not being supplied, and that not sufficient money was being expended upon them, according to report.

Universal reassured the star and he is starting work on "Be Yourself," under the direction of William Seiter. Dorothy Gulliver has been cast for a featured role in the production. Previously to the start of the picture Denny was said to have been in negotiation with British legitimate stage producers.

M-G-M Releasing Seven Shorts for January

Seven releases are scheduled by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as its short subject output for the month of January. A Technicolor short is among the numbers programmed.

On January 7th, Max Davidson in "Pass the Gravy," is scheduled. "Perfume and Nicotine," a Ufa "Oddities," and "Spook Spoofing," an "Our Gang" comedy, are set for January 14th. "The Lady of Victories," the third of the historical pictures produced in Technicolor, will be issued on January 21.

"All for Nothing," featuring Charley Chase, will be released also on the 21st. Another of the Ufa shorts, "The Jungle Round-Up," will be released on January 28th, on which date the final release of the month, "Leave 'Em Laughing," co-starring Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, will also come to exhibitors.

Universal Sets Five Stern Comedies for January

Five comedies produced by the Stern Bros. will be released by Universal during January.

A Snookums comedy, "The Newlyweds' Advice," adapted and directed by Francis Corby, is the first comedy release of the year. Sammy McKeen is featured, Jack Bartlett and Addie McPhaill appearing as the Newlyweds.

"Horse Play," a new "Keeping Up with the Joneses" comedy, is also scheduled for January. Harry Long, Stella Adams, Frances Hamilton and Gene Laymon have the principal roles, and were directed by Gus Meins. "Buster's Big Chance," is the Buster Brown comedy for the month. Also directed by Corby, is has Arthur Trimble, Doreen Turner and Tige, the dog, in the important parts. "Dates for Two" is the "Mike and Ike" comedy for the month, starring Charles King and Charles Dorety. Completing the comedies for January is "High Flyin' George," in which Sid Saylor and Jane Manners are co-featured.

Paramount to Release Seven in January

Seven feature productions, including two specials, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and "The Last Command," will be released by Paramount in January. Accompanying these features will be four two-reel subjects, four one-reel cartoons and the bi-weekly issues of Paramount News.

The first feature of the month, "Beau Sabreur," will come on January 7. "Wife Savers," another of the Beery-Hatton comedies, is another release for the same date. Also offered for the week are "Dad's Choice," an Edward Everett Horton two-reel comedy, and "Ko-Ko's Kinks," an Inkwell cartoon. "Love and Learn," featuring Esther Ralston, will be released on January 14. Accompanying this feature will be "Frenzy," a two-reel novelty, and "Pig Styles," a Krazy Kat cartoon.

"The Pioneer Scout," starring Fred Thomson, and "The Last Command," starring Emil Jannings, will be released on January 21. The short subjects set for this date are "Fighting Fanny," a Christie comedy, and "Ko-Ko's Kosy Korner," another Inkwell cartoon.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and "Peaks of Destiny" will be released on the same date, the 28th. The first is a special with an all-star cast and the latter is a Ufa production which Paramount is distributing in this country. The shorts for the last week of January are "Save the Pieces," a Bobby Vernon two-reeler, and "Shadow Theory," a Krazy Kat cartoon.

Gala Midnight Show of "The Circus" at Strand

"The Circus," Charlie Chaplin's comedy production for United Artists, will have its world premiere showing at the Mark Strand theatre in New York at a gala midnight performance on Friday, Jan. 6th. In honor of the star the performance will be attended by stage and screen celebrities as the occasion will mark the presentation of the comedian's first picture in two years. His last screen vehicle, "The Gold Rush," was shown at the Strand in August, 1925.

M-G-M Acquires Rights to Pinero's "Iris"

The motion picture rights to the Pinero play, "Iris," have been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, a company also filming "Trelawney of the Wells," another of the Pinero plays, under the title, "The Actress." No details regarding production of "Iris" have been announced.

11 Fox Units Working at Hollywood Studio

Eleven Fox Films companies are making pictures at the company's studio in Hollywood.

Frank Borzage has finished with 'The Street Angel,'' the former title of the Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell vehicle hitherto called ''Lady Cristilinda.'' Howard Hawks is working on ''A Girl in Every Port,'' whose cast has just been augmented by the addition of Caryl Lincoln.

Nearing completion also are ''Soft Living,'' starring Madge Bellamy, and ''Hello, Cheyenne!'', featuring Tom Mix. Work is progressing on ''Fleetwing,'' the story of an Arabian horse being made by Lambert Hillyer; ''Love Hungry,'' featuring Lois Moran and Lawrence Gray; ''The Red Dancer of Moscow;'' ''The Four Devils.''

Production has just been started on ''Honor Bound,'' in which Alfred E. Green is directing George O'Brien, Estelle Taylor, Tom Santachi and Sam De Grasse. Richard Rosson but recently launched ''The Escape'' into production, as did Irving Cummings with ''Dressed to Kill.'' ''Square Crooks'' is being cast by Lew Seiler, and John Ford is making an additional scene for ''Four Sons.''

In and Out of Town

JAMES R. GRAINGER, General Sales Manager for Fox Films, returned to New York last week, after a trip about the States, and to the West Coast studios, where he conferred with Winfield Sheehan, the Fox General Manager, on the productions now in work. He also interviewed F. W. Murnau, Raoul Walsh, Frank Borzage, John Ford and other big directors on their plans for future productions.

While in Los Angeles, Mr. Grainger witnessed the premiere of "Sunrise" at the Carthay Circle Theatre.

EDWARD T. CARR, general sales manager of Allied Artists Corporation, Ltd., in England, received as a Christmas present a round trip to the United States from United Artists Corporation through Arthur W. Kelly, the company's vice-president and general manager of foreign distribution. Mr. and Mrs. Carr are now in New York, having arrived on the S.S. Majestic, December 21.

HARRY D. BUCKLEY, vice-president of United Artists, left New York last Friday, December 23d, for St. Louis, the first stop on a tour of United Artists' exchanges, which will keep him away from the home office for about 10 days.

AL JOLSON, star of Warner Bros.' "The Jazz Singer," this week left New York for Los Angeles where he stayed for one day to attend the premiere there of his picture which opened the Criterion on December 28.

AL TUCHMAN, recently appointed by J. R. Grainger, general sales manager of Fox Films, to promote advertising accessories sales, is now on tour of the principal Fox exchanges to stimulate the more effective use of the poster. This week he is in St. Louis.

Shoolman Denies Leasing of Poli Chain to New Interests

MAX SHOOLMAN, guiding head of the circuit which recently purchased the Poli houses in New England, asserts that, contrary to rumor current, no deal has been made for transfer of the theatres to any other interests. When Shoolman and his associates negotiated the deal for a reported price of $22,500,000 it was agreed that they would take over the theatres on January 1st.

Keith-Albee decided it would not serve the Shoolman interests, but, instead, with the Stanley Company will invade the New England territory in the towns where the Poli houses are located. Meanwhile Shoolman is said to be negotiating for a new vaudeville hookup.

Among the reports is one that the recently acquired circuit would be leased to Fox, though there were various other reports of alleged leasings. Shoolman's denial says there is no foundation of fact in any of the rumors, though it is thought not unlikely that some kind of hookup is in the offing.

Publix-Loew Acts Pool

New Combine Is Effected to Cut Tremendous Overhead on "Presentation Evil"

NEW economies which will materially cut down the high cost of the presentation evil have brought about a definite arrangement whereby Publix and the Loew interests will co-operate in the matter of these stage presentations. It is said that the plan which has been perfected will be in operation within the next thirty days.

Deliberations between these large theatre owners have been under way for some time in an endeavor to do away with this so-called evil, which has run the overhead up to more extravagant figures that have ever prevailed before. The finding of the ''way out'' apparently was a difficult matter, for the conference was a lengthy one.

According to the new plan, Mort Harris, William Axt and David Mendosa, who arrange the stage acts for the Capitol Theatre in New York City, most important of the Loew houses, will also arrange the acts for Publix houses.

At the same time Frank Cambria, John Murray Anderson and other Publix theatre producers, will show their acts in Loew theatres, where they will not be in conflict with Publix houses.

Through this method the overhead of both organizations in arranging acts for their many theatres will be cut down, in accordance with the tendency of the presentation idea generally.

In Washington, D. C., however, big shows are being arranged for the Fox Theatre by Fox Stage Productions, a recently-created subsidiary of the William Fox Theatre Corporation.

M-G-M To Distribute "Casanova"

M-G-M has contracted for the distribution of "Casanova" in the United States. The deal was closed with Louis Nalpas, producing director of the Societe des Cineromans of France just prior to the latter's sailing on the Majestic last Saturday.

"Casavona" was made in Paris and was exhibited in England under the title of "The Prince of Lovers." It will be released in American and Canada probably some time next year.

The producing company is controlled by Jean Sapene, publisher of the Parisian newspaper, "Le Matin." He was appointed a member of the French National Cinema Commission in 1927 to develop ways and means of rehabilitating French production.

"The Wolf Song" First Cooper-Wray Vehicle

Paramount plans ''The Wolf Song'' as the first vehicle for its new team of players, Gary Cooper and Fay Wray. They will be featured together in a number of stories which will have love as the predominating theme.

Gary Cooper is known to fans and exhibitors as several of his westerns have already been released, but Miss Wray is not so well known, none of her pictures having been issued as yet. She is 19 years old and was discovered by Erich von Stroheim.

''The Wolf Song'' will be started just as soon as Cooper has finished his role in a First National production.

Pathe Issues 17,000 Ft. Newsreel

Pathe News is releasing this week a reel totaling 17,000 feet of film which covers the highlights of the news for the past year in pictorial form. Much of it has been [illegible] and each of the thirty-three exchanges of the company is receiving 500 feet, which applies to news highlights in the particular territory served by each of the exchanges.

The newsreel was assembled and retitled in New York, and accompanying it a miniature newspaper of twenty pages was issued to theatres as a contents sheet.

Key City Reports

New York City

WITH all the big stores filled to capacity with last minute shoppers, and a goodly portion of New York City's six million with plenty of other ideas under their bonnets (some very damp ones, they say), business along Broadway was nothing more than was expected except with a few attractions strong enough to outdraw the stores and the boys who evade the Coast Guard.

The Rivoli, with Gilda Gray appearing in person along with her picture, "The Devil Dancer" (U. A.), did a nice trade, Miss Gray helping things along considerably with several kinds of shimmies which fairly made the rafters of the Rivoli bend like a willow tree. Another picture which again has proven the drawing power in New York City for Gilbert and Garbo is "Love" (M-G-M) at the Embassy. This picture is still going strongly. The Capitol, with "Lovelorn" (M-G-M), felt the Xmas week slump quite a bit, and also the Roxy, where "The Girl from Chicago" (W. B.) failed to do what may be termed average business.

However, the Paramount, where the Adolphe Menjou picture "Serenade" (Par) showed, did a good week's business, and as mentioned before this house has undoubtedly struck a response in this town. Still another show to demonstrate its strength against St. Nick was "The Jazz Singer" (W. B.) at Warners, and the same can be said for "Wings" (Par) at the Criterion. Both strong attractions. The Strand had but a fair week with "Man Crazy" (F. N.) and "Now We're In the Air" (Par) at the Rialto also failed to get them away from their Xmas trees for anything more than a below average week. The Colony had "The Lone Eagle" (U), which was voted a picture with plenty of airplane thrills, but this house also felt the depression.

Among the more expensive shows, "Chicago" (Pathe-De Mille) at the Gaiety, and "Helen of Troy" (F. N.) at the Globe, both registered good receipts, but "Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) at the Central, "The Gaucho" (U. A.) at the Liberty and "Sunrise" (Fox) at the Times Square all bowed their heads to the seasonal slump.

"The Enemy" (M-G-M) has followed "The Student Prince at the Astor. Next day comment has this one classed as rather depressing amusement, if this term can be considered a proper classification. While possessing many fine points of production, it is voted by most as a preachment against war. It is a bit too early to predict the length of its run here.

Chicago

THE usual week before Christmas slump cut down attendance at all Chicago theatres this week, even the big loop houses being affected.

At the Chicago "Her Wild Oat" was the screen feature, "Aerial Ballet" and usual big musical features rounding out the bill; business, however, was below par. "Jesse James" in its last week at the Roosevelt held up fairly well considering general conditions, while "Lovelorn" did only a fair business at McVickers. "In Old Kentucky" on the screen and Mark Fisher leading Paul Ash's Gang for the last week in "Christmas Jinx," failed to call normal business to the Oriental.

Both the Uptown and Tivoli had as their feature pictures "Man, Woman & Sin," Frankie Masters and his orchestra being featured at the former theatre, and Benny Kreuger wielding the baton at the Tivoli. Business was only fair at these houses. "Very Confidential" was the screen feature, and Buddy Fisher and a large cast in "Garden Gaveties," plus Vitaphone, comprised the Avalon bill, and the Capitol offered "Irresistible Lover," with Husk O'Hare and Vitaphone completing its bill, both houses feeling the general depression.

"The Forbidden Woman" was the screen feature at the Sheridan, where Verne Buck and his band topped the stage bill, business being off.

Los Angeles

LARGE crowds favored the Metropolitan last week where "Spring Fever" was showing. California's idol, Morley Drury, and the U. S. C. Glee Club on the stage in a Fanchon and Marco "Idea," undoubtedly was the cause of the Metropolitan being the most popular theatre downtown.

"The Private Life of Helen of Troy," in its last week at the Million Dollar, ended with a box-office record a little below that of the preceding week. The picture was given an extra amount of publicity and advertising.

The Criterion, with "Old San Francisco" and the Vitaphone, did not do an unusual business, although the picture was well received.

Loew's State with "The Forbidden Woman" had a fairly good week. Kolb and Dill on the stage seemed to strike a popular chord with the theatre patrons.

"Sunrise" and "The Gaucho" are still doing good work at Carthay Circle and Grauman's Chinese Theatres.

Atlanta

CHRISTMAS shopping caused a slump in the Atlanta theatres last week.

Perhaps the outstanding box-office receipt belongs to the Howard, with the showing of First National's mystery special, "The Gorilla." Also, eight Victor artists on the stage aided the attendance materially. Keith's Georgia offered a good bill with "The High School Hero" featured, plus a good vaudeville. These drew an average house. The Capitol with Rin-Tin-Rin in "Tracked by the Police" boasts only of a fair week. Loew's Grand, showing the Duncan Sisters in "Topsy and Eva" fell below the average.

The Rialto enjoyed an unusually good first half week with "Motherhood," which was held over from last week, but had hardly fair houses the latter part, playing Jetta Goudal in "The Forbidden Woman." The Metropolitan claims an average house, as of the last few months, featuring "The Enchanted Island."

"Riding Rowdy," "Fangs of Justice" and "Fighting Courage" played at the Tudor to poor houses.

The New Alamo held up its usual mark with five second runs.

Minneapolis

THE week leading up to Christmas was certainly not a very good one in Minneapolis, theatrically speaking, but theatre men were inclined to agree that it might have been much worse. It was, in fact, nearly an average week, with no especially big attractions to pull in the crowds. But an average week around Christmas is something to talk about at that.

"Les Miserables" showed to good crowds at the Garrick, but was not strong enough to hold over for a second week. Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in "Now We're in the Air" proved popular at the State as they usually do, and there was a big stage band revue to help out. But the week was just a fair one. "The Last Waltz" at the Strand was not a particularly strong attraction. The Lyric found average business with "The 13th Hour."

The Pantages was fortunate in having Tom Mix in "The Arizona Wild Cat," as the Mix picture always draw the crowds. This week was no exception, either. The Hennepin-Orpheum showed "My Friend from India," and the Seventh Street theatre found Hoot Gibson's "Galloping Fury" a good program feature. The neighborhood houses felt the effects of Christmas week somewhat, although the children were on vacation all week, and naturally spent some of their free time in the theatres. Attractions at the Loring, Lagoon, Lyndale and Rialto included "Shanghai Bound," "Breakfast at Sunrise," and "The Road to Romance."

Pittsburgh

"T[illegible] not a soul in the house might have been the overture at any of the theatres last week, figuratively speaking, according to house managers. And to make matters worse Monday brought a blizzard, Tuesday helped with rain that later froze to ice on the streets and Friday saw more snow. Without a doubt the worst week in grosses this season in most houses.

Penn theatre played "Body and Soul," also having a large stage revue, but neither attractions were big or strong enough to buck old man St. Nick. The Beery & Hatton combine in "Now We're in the Air" at the Grand, supported by Whitey Kaufman's Victor Recording Orchestra, was a poor booking as although the men went to see it there was no lure for women who were shopping in the afternoon. "Underworld" brought down from the Grand to the Olympic after a terrific business held its own as the house experienced an average week and that showed strength this time of the year. Loew's Aldine playing "A Little Journey," which although a year old had never been released in this vicinity assisted by five acts of vaudeville, had one of the worst weeks the house has had since the vaudeville policy has been installed. At the Davis with "The Life of Riley" and Keith vaudeville the report was about the same as the Aldine. The Cameo, State, and other small houses in the business section could have closed this week and showed a smaller loss. But next week is the silver lining behind the clouds.

Des Moines

AT the DesMoines the show last week did [illegible] "The picture was "The Valley of the Giants."

The Capitol showed "Man Crazy" and also did a pretty fair week for this time of the season. Paul Spor, the new personality man [illegible] received by all audiences though he has [illegible] yet. At the Strand "Two Flaming Youths" with Chester Conklin and W. C. Fields did fairly well for the first half of the week while "Spring Fever" with Billy Haines did rather well.

Business in general over the state seems to have been good for just before the holiday [illegible] favorable though it is still cold.

Baltimore

BUSINESS dropped way down below normal in Baltimore during the week beginning Monday, December 19, which is about what was to be expected during the week preceding Christmas here. But there were two outstanding exceptions to the general run, including Loew's Century with "In Old Kentucky," and Paul Whiteman and his band on the same bill. Patronage there was very good throughout the week despite the pre-Christmas slump and one point to be noted about the picture was that the audience seemed to enjoy the novelty of comedy relief by colored comedians. This makes it appear that a series of short comedies with all colored casts might go over big now.

"Stark Love" at the Little theatre, with 250 seats, did good business and "French Dressing" at the 4,000 seated Stanley with Walter C. Kelly as the Virginia Judge on the same bill, went over fairly well also.

But the less said about the business done at the following theatres perhaps is the best said because they were hit badly. Keith's Hippodrome had "The Small Bachelor," with five acts of family vaudeville; Warner's Metropolitan has "A Sailor's Sweetheart," with Vitaphone attractions; the Rivoli had "Home-Made," starring Johnny Hines, with a piano act; Loew's Valencia had "My Best Girl," starring Mary Pickford for its second week, while "Women's Wares" held forth at Whitehurst's New theatre, with a stage prologue which was a fashion tie-up with a local department store. Those who saw "The Small Bachelor," the Hippodrome, seemed to enjoy the comedy, and Mary Pickford as usual appealed to those who saw "My Best Girl."

Portland, Ore.

BUSINESS at the local theatres was not up to regular standard. The Broadway presented a very entertaining performance, offering Richard Dix in "The Gay Deceiver," while the Fanchon and Marco presentation was headed by Walter Hiers, screen star, in person. Ollie Wallace, the new master of ceremonies, went over to popular results.

"The Columbia slipped on the week with "Madame Pompadour," Harry Linden's concert, featuring selections from "The Merry Widow," creating favorable word-of-mouth publicity. The Blue Mouse registered one of the best weeks of the year with the opening of the Movietone. Monte Blue in "One Round Hogan" was the cinema presentation, while Vitaphone acts were also offered.

Salvatore Santaella's Sunday noon concerts at the Rivoli, seem to bring big business to the house. The picture, at the theatre, last week was "Man Crazy," and went over to only a fair week. The Pantages slipped from their previous business, with "The Wizard," and an ordinary vaudeville program.

Salt Lake City

THE theatre business of downtown houses during the past week has been somewhat slackened as is always the case immediately preceding Christmas, but as a whole the box office receipts have averaged good considering the time of the year.

The Capitol theatre offered an unusually well liked bill this week and had fairly crowded houses. The feature picture was Esther Ralston in "The Spotlight," with Neil Hamilton. On the stage they presented a very splendid and artistic Fanchon and Marco act. During the week a special matinee was given for the benefit of the poor.

"Body and Soul" was the picture feature at the Pantages last week, in addition to the seven vaudeville acts. Large crowds were handled throughout the week with one reason for the good attendance being the personal appearance of Dorothy Carlson, who recently brought fame to herself and this city by winning the American oratorical championship. "Body and Soul" was very favorably received.

The Paramount Empress featured a very good drawing card in presenting "The Life of Jesse James," which drew good houses. An added attraction was also offered at the Victory theatre in the personal appearance of Miss Dorothy Gulliver, Salt Lake movie star, who is appearing in Universal's "Collegians" series, which is being shown at the Victory in this connection. The feature picture presented at the Victory last week is "Tell It to Sweeney," with Chester Conklin and George Bancroft.

Ben Lyon and George Sidney in the comedy drama "For the Love of Mike" did fairly well at the American. "A Harp in Hock" was shown at the Gem theatre as the feature presentation and fairly satisfactory crowds were the result. Milton Sills in "Hard-Boiled Haggerty" brought his share of attendance to the second showing of this production at the Rialto theatre.

Weather conditions have been favorable to theatre business with last week's cold spell continuing to exist.

San Francisco

WITH the exception of one exceptionally stormy day and night, every day this week proved a good one at the motion picture theatres in San Francisco. Both first and second run houses reported good business for the week.

Lon Chaney in "London After Midnight" shown at the Granada theatre proved very popular. The presentation act, "Hi-Hatters," also attracted. "Love-Lorn," shown at the St. Francis theatre and advertised as a play of honor and passion, did a fairly big business.

At Loew's Warfield theatre many crowded that house to see "The Love Mart"—for Miss Dove is popular—but not as many came as it was thought. The presentation act also pleased. "Sorrell and Son" continued to attract crowds at the California theatre the second week, according to General Manager Bowles of the local West Coast Theatres. "The Wreck of the Hesperus," the feature photoplay shown at the Golden Gate theatre, together with vaudeville acts, crowded that theatre.

The Union Square theatre reported very good business with the "Hour of Reckoning" and vaudeville acts. The Cameo theatre drew well with "Drifting Sands."

"Rose of the Golden West" grossed well at the Coliseum, a residential theatre, it being considered one of the best pictures ever shown at that theatre.

Seattle

LAST week was an average one at the local picture theatres, with business showing a tendency to decrease as is the custom at this time of year. It was the second week before Christmas, and theatre managers were prepared for a smaller-than-usual gross.

The Fifth Avenue theatre topped the list as usual with "London After Midnight," Walter Hiers appearing in person as a stage attraction, an elaborate and colorful Fanchon-Marco "Peacock Idea" stage revue, and several specialties by Hermie King and His Band, with Oscar Taylor, balladist, in his last week with "Red" Corcoran, banjo entertainer, in his first week. The magnitude of this bill and the excellence of every "turn" on stage and screen put the bill over to big business, with a gross of about $17,500.

At the United Artists theatre, "The Devil Dancer" was the screen attraction, and Gilda Gray's gyrations kept the house very well filled for the week. It was not a two-week picture, however, and could not be considered much more than an average good attraction. Business good, but not big.

The Blue Mouse theatre kept its seats very well filled at every performance with "One Round Hogan," Movietone shots of the Army-Navy football game, Vitaphone subjects featuring "The Lash" playlet, and a scattering of short subjects and music. Monte Blue is a box office magnet in this city, and added "talking" films were enough to put the house over for a week's big gross. Business above average.

Bob Bender's Columbia theatre did average good business with "A Man's Past," but could not claim any records. Good supporting musical and film features were partly instrumental in bringing in the patrons. Business good.

"Motherhood" at the Liberty theatre did a little better than average for this house, which is not saying any too much. It attracted the usual type of audience that are interested in that type of film, and was hooked up with one of the newspapers in a fairly successful baby contest. The picture was held over two extra days "by popular demand." Business fairly good.

Vaudeville houses took a turn toward the collegiate for the week, with "The Cheer Leader" at the Orpheum and "A High School Hero" at the Pantages. The latter picture had, probably, a shade or two the best of the bargain, but the Orpheum was decidedly ahead in box office receipts, due to a better supporting vaudeville program. Orpheum business was very good; Pantages business average.

At the Embassy theatre, "That's My Baby" and a few song novelties played to the usual average houses. "Painted Ponies" at the Winter Garden was just a fair attraction, and "Eyes of the Totem," playing first run at the Palace Hip theatre, was not much of a success.

Milwaukee

THE pre-Christmas week in Milwaukee brought in very moderate business to the theatres in the down town section. Matinee business was stronger than usual, no doubt due to the many shoppers down town. Programs were exceedingly good and varied. Weather conditions were ideal for good business.

The Wisconsin kept the house filled at all performances with "She's a Sheik" and a clever stage presentation act. "The Bugle Call" drew well at the Merrill. "Slightly Used" at the Garden did only fair business or less. "Honeymoon Hate" was well attended at the Alhambra. "A Gentleman of Paris" did not bring in the patronage at the Strand that it merited. The Davidson this week showed "Discord" in place of a theatrical production which was cancelled on very short notice. Because it came as a substitute and because it had no exploitation whatever, "Discord" was not an especially popular picture. "The Satin Woman" was featured on the Palace bill.

Neighborhood theatres felt the pre-Christmas slump in business slightly more than the down town theatres, for most of these had not the matinees to fall back on to bring up averages. The Venetian succeeded in bringing business up to average and slightly over with "The Chinese Parrot." "Becky" was well received at the Oriental. "The Garden of Allah" played at the Garfield, Uptown, Modjeska and Tower and at all houses drew fair patronage.

Cleveland

THIS was the week before Christmas. Years ago Cleveland theatres used to close during this period. Now they stay open and make a strong bid for Christmas business. As a result, local first-run houses report that, while no records were broken, they all had fair business. In fact, in comparison with last year, business was very good, for most of the downtown houses maintained their averages.

"Sorrell and Son" held the screen at the Stillman for the third week with sustained success. Not one voice was raised against the greatness of this picture. "Wild Geese" did exceptionally well at the Allen, where it was surrounded by an unusually attractive presentation bill. "The Forbidden Woman," interesting drama, did average pre-Christmas business at Keith's Palace. The State theatre had a good week with "The Thirteenth Hour," branded as a "great audience show." The Cameo did well with "The Last Waltz," German-made picture considerably above the average in charm and romantic deftness. "Pajamas" did just moderately well at Reade's Hippodrome, and "A Harp in Hock," with fine cast and fine direction, although weak in plot, was good through the week with average results. The Park played a first-run neighborhood engagement of "Two Arabian Knights," and did well with it, comparatively speaking. Neighborhood houses said that they had the worst pre-Christmas week in the history of local motion picture exhibition. No amount of added attraction was able to bring in any patronage worth mentioning. Legitimate theatre competition was not very strong.

Albany and Troy

BUSINESS at the motion picture theatres in Albany and Troy during the past week measured up to the usual week before Christmas receipts, but fell short of a normal week in midwinter. Business is always at its low ebb in these two cities during the holiday week. Owners and managers make no attempt to bolster up business, as past experience has shown that the great majority of people are hanging too close to their quarters and halves to spend them on other than Christmas gifts. A possible exception, last week, was the Mark Strand in Albany, where "The Better 'Ole," coupled with the Vitaphone presentations, managed to do a bit better than was generally expected, although at no time were there two capacity houses evenings. At the Leland, "Breakfast at Sunrise" failed to occasion much comment. At the Clinton Square, the same situation was manifest with "By Whose Hand?" At Proctor's Grand, the first three days featured Doris Kenyon, a favorite, and a former resident of northern New York, in "The Valley of the Giants," to good business.

In Troy "The Loves of Carmen," at the Troy theatre, running for four days, did little above ordinary business. During the last three days of the week "The High School Hero" ran only fair. At the Lincoln theatre, "For the Love of Mike" panned out rather well, running for the week and coupled with song presentations. Neighborhood houses in both cities reported business as being off during the week.

Kansas City

WITH down-town streets thronged with Christmas shoppers, first-run theatres in Kansas City did a good business last week, despite the fact that good business was not generally expected.

At Loew's Midland "The Gay Defender" played to good crowds all week, as did Reginald Denny in "That's My Daddy" at the Mainstreet theatre. "Ham and Eggs" did a fair business at the Globe, which also could be said of "High School Hero" at the Pantages. "The Last Waltz" at the Newman drew better attendance than any previous picture in several weeks. "Sally In Our Alley" at the Capitol drew a fair atendance, while "South Sea Love" did an exceptionally good business at the Liberty.

There was nothing out of the ordinary in exploitation at any of the theatres, aside from the usual Christmas decorating in the lobbies. Pantages doubled its newspaper advertising, principally on account of Coon-Sanders Orchestra, a stage attraction.

Ottawa

BUSINESS at a number of Ottawa, Ontario, theatres during the week before Christmas was much better than expected. At houses where there was an evident intention on the part of the manager to provide features at least equal to the usual standard of the theatre, there was a continuation of rather fair business. There were kicks about some of the others.

One of the outstanding shows of the week was Buster Keaton's "College" at the Imperial theatre. This was plenty good enough for any theatre any week. The crowds flocked to this house.

Still another big picture was "Vanity," starring Leatrice Joy, at the B. F. Keith's theatre. This gorgeous film was well-liked by both men and women but the juvenile did not care much about it, except as a spectacle.

"The College Widow" at the Regent theatre suffered by comparison with Buster Keaton's "College." Dolores Costello, William Collier and others were liked.

The Ontario censors must have thought that "Framed" was a Christmas turkey because they apparently took a big slice out of it. This one at the Century theatre for the first three days was hardly up to the mark, probably on this account. "No Place to Go," for the last half, was somewhat better but a facetious person might say that the title was an apt one.

Lon Chaney slipped a couple of cogs in "Mockery," which was one of the features at the Laurier theatre, Hull. The people just didn't like it. "Home-Made," the other half of the double bill, proved to be a good programe picture.

"The Taxi Dancer" at the Eden theatre, Hull, was a popular attraction, while "Mountains of Manhattan" at the same theatre was fair.

Birmingham

BUSINESS the past week was, generally, very poor. Bad weather continued to take its toll of the boxoffice, regardless of attractions offered. Friday night and Saturday the weather cleared somewhat and each house had good crowds on these two nights, which was all that prevented many theatres from going heavily into the red.

Loew's Temple featured Lon Chaney in "London After Midnight" and Loew vaudeville, the bright luminary of the latter being Leona LaMar, the Mystic, which would ordinarily be a wow of a b. o. show, but under conditions described above, business was off. The Strand featured "The College Widow," with Dolores Costello, but had only an indifferent week, as did also the Trianon with John Barrymore in "When a Man Loves." The Galax got by fairly well with a split week, the last half of which featured a personal appearance of Morning Star, an Indian princess, in collaboration with the picture, "The Demon Rider." Pantages had a very good show, with Francis Renault, "Slaves of Fashion," and four other Pan acts, coupled with Universal's "Back to God's Country." The Ritz featured Fox's "East Side, West Side," a good picture, with Miss Patricola and four other Keith acts, an all 'round good show, but the general depression registered here and held down the b. o.

Tampa

WINTER came—not just a touch of it, this time, but, for us in Florida, great gobs of it. Sunday and Monday were cold and rainy, with the cold continuing Tuesday and Wednesday and frosts each night. As a consequence business was "off" at all theatres.

The Tampa had a pretty good Sunday with "The Gay Defender" and Alla Axiom on the stage. Axiom did so well last week that they held him over for a second. Monday the business slumped and the first four days registered just fair. "Her Wild Oat" was the screen feature for the last half, and [illegible] better.

The Strand had a good Sunday also, in spite of the cold and rain, with "Jesse James" as the feature. Capt. Jim Moore, last surviving member of the James band, used in conjunction with a big lobby flash, helped get 'em. With good weather this picture would have probably established a record. "The Last Waltz" played to good returns for its three days' showing and was well liked. "Becky," used the last two days, did average.

The Victory changed their policy this week from two changes to three. The first two days "The Forbidden Woman" was featured, with an added attraction for Sunday only, of a quartette. A good show but business not up to average on account of the weather. "Wild Geese" used the next two days did just fair. "The High School Hero" and five acts of vaudeville used the last half pulled pretty near the usual good busine[illegible]

The Franklin gave "Motherhood" the full week at advanced prices and did well, considering the weather. Much of the draw can be attributed to the "Healthy Baby Contest," which was staged in connection and brought out nearly 200 contestants.

Central Pennsylvania

COMPETITION with Santa Claus in the week immediately preceding Christmas cut into the business of the Harrisburg picture theatres somewhat, but not any more than in corresponding weeks in other years. Two of the leading downtown houses showed John Gilbert pictures.

At Loew's Regent he starred with Gretta Garbo in "Love," which pleased those who saw it and received favorable newspaper comment. The other Gilbert film was "Cameo Kirby," at the Colonial, and this, too, made a very favorable impression. "Pajamas" provided satisfactory screen entertainment at the State, while the offering at the Victoria was Tom Meighan in "The City Gone Wild," which proved to be a thrilling melodrama of the underworld.

There was a strong run on Westerns in some of the smaller theatres. At the Broad Street the feature was Al. Hoxie in "The Road Agent," while Bob Custer in "The Dude Cowboy" was the center of attraction at the Grand, and Russell offered Buck Jones in "Hills of Perils." All three of these houses appeared to do a fair amount of business considering the counter attraction of Christmas preparations.

The play featured at the Royal was "Stranded in Paris," starring Bebe Daniels, while the National presented "Held By the Law," with Johnny Walker.

The New Rialto was closed during the week, to remain closed till the first of the year. This was to permit workmen to rush to completion the extensive improvements to the building which include putting [illegible] and the erection of a marquee over the sidewalk.

Indianapolis

BOX office receipts show a pick up in the last few weeks of cooler weather. With the novelty of the New Indiana, Publix house, worn away, business has dropped somewhat. The Circle is getting back some of the business which was lost to the Indiana the first few weeks.

Other downtown houses and neighbor[illegible] sponsible for the local slump.

Prepare Window Material for New Book of Screen Careers

CHARLES REED JONES, former motion picture advertising man and magazine editor, evidently was thinking of theatre-book store tie-ups when he prepared "Breaking Into the Movies," a collection of articles by more than twenty-five screen celebrities, recently published by The Unicorn Press. The book, a well-made volume with an attractive display jacket, is offered as a guide to those who are seeking careers in the motion picture industry.

The Unicorn Press has prepared a series of window displays, one of each of the star contributors, which are intended for use in co-operative tie-ups between book stores and exhibitors. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the first distributor to take advantage of this tie-up, recently arranged for an attractive window display in one of New York's largest book shops in conjunction with the showing of "The Student Prince" at the Astor Theatre.

Stills from the production, lobby cards and portraits of Ramon Novarro and Norma Shearer, two contributors to the volume, were displayed with a large supply of the books. A lettered card, directing attention to the local showing of "The Student Prince," completed the display.

In addition to Shearer and Novarro, the star contributors are Laura La Plante, Colleen Moore, Dolores del Rio, Ken Maynard, Lois Wilson, Lya de Putti, George Walsh, Billie Dove, Harry Langdon, Louise Fazenda, L. D. McKeen (father of Universal's Snookums), Lee Duncan, (trainer of Rin-Tin-Tin) and Reginald Denny. Special display material is available on each of these.

Local Poets Compete for Theatre Passes

AN unusual newspaper contest, in connection with other exploitation activities, was the feature of the promotion work on "The Big Parade," at the Orpheum Theatre, Hannibal, Mo. Manager Harry Sheidker, of the Orpheum Theatre, assisted by a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exploiteer, managed the campaign.

The contest was unusual in that it required the readers of the Hannibal newspaper to furnish rhymes for the "Hinky-Dinky" song which plays such a prominent part in the picture's musical score. Suitable prizes were offered for the best rhymes, and the contest created a great deal of interest.

Stanley-Crandall to Give Kiddies Christmas Party

The annual Christmas parties given in the Stanley-Crandall neighborhood theatres, and in the Metropolitan Theatre in downtown Washington, D. C., are being attended by 20,000 or more children. The parties, lasting from Monday to December 31, inclusive, are for youngsters from 13 orphanages and asylums, the newsies of the Washington papers and children from the various neighborhoods.

This year's parties, officially presided over by Harry M. Crandall, vice-president of the Stanley-Crandall Washington theatre, as Santa Claus has had five tons of candy ready for distribution. One item of the toys is 18,000 harmonicas—enough to fill two freight cars.

Mrs. Harriet Locher, director of public service and the educational department of the Stanley Company, is in charge of the parties.

Cut-Rate Offer to Readers of St. Louis Times

Skouras Brothers Enterprises and the St. Louis Amusement Company has entered into arrangements with the St. Louis Times, an afternoon publication, whereby its readers may purchase admission tickets and coupon books to the various theatres at 20 per cent discount from the box office rates. The Ambassador and Missouri are the first run houses and by clipping a coupon from six issues of the Times a reader can buy a 65 cent ticket for 50 cents, a 50 cent ticket for 35 cents, a 35 cent ticket for 25 cents or a $2.50 coupon book for $2. The arrangement will prevail until March 31, 1928.

Boys Astride Truck Horses Exploit "Arabian Knights"

Manager J. L. Cartwright secured two boys and two white horses to exploit "Two Arabian Knights" at the Capitol Theatre, Macon, Ga.

The boys were dressed in Army uniforms and the horses were of the heavy-duty kind, borrowed from the Sparks Circus.

Banners on the sides of each horse read, "Two Arabian Knights—Publix Capitol—Dec. 1-2-3."

This street stunt was used with great success for three days in advance of picture and the first day of run.

Newspaper Story Will Be Made by Kane-Dwan

"The Headliner," a newspaper story by Ben Hecht, will be made for First National by Robert Kane with Allan Dwan directing. Hecht, who for many years worked on the Chicago News, wrote the story as a screen original.

Chester Conklin will play the leading role and Alice White will have feminine lead; the rest of the cast are still to be chosen. Miss White will start working in the picture as soon as she has finished her role in "Mad Hour." Dwan will begin directing within a week, it is said.

Announce Transfer of West Coast Managers

Transfer of West Coast Theatre managers announced this week include:

Frank Browne transferred from the Criterion Theatre to the Highland Theatre, Los Angeles.

Fred Cruise transferred from the Million Dollar to the Criterion, Los Angeles.

Charles Kurtzman transferred from Loew's Warfield, San Francisco, to the Million Dollar, Los Angeles.

Opinions on Pictures

The Gay Defender

Good Dix Film Bobs Up Here

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE comes a time when most of the boys—and a few of the girls—go Spanish. Not content with the youths of Latin extraction getting all of the applause Richard Dix is handed a work of Castilian flavor—and he does very well by it. He may not be just the type—not being endowed with those sloe brown eyes and languid expression, but he is volatile enough to pass muster with most any senorita.

"The Gay Defender" doesn't permit the star to do anything really original. He merely goes over the old track. But he is colorful as usual—and so is the picture as a result. It is just about the best celluloid canvas he has had in several months. He comes forth here a Spanish free-booter in a California that did not know what a Chamber of Commerce looked like. And that is why, way back in its early vintage, Dix swaggers and struts and struts and swaggers to the queen's taste. It is his job to rescue the distressed heroine, played with a good show of spirit and more than a share of good looks by Thelma Todd (one of the Paramount school who stayed).

It is up and at 'em action that reveals itself here—and it is garnished with backgrounds that cry out loud with atmosphere. With such a production singing a romantic song, capitalizing heroics on an adventurous scale—and tinted and toned up with fine settings it is no wonder that it clicks.

Drawing Power: Dix' popularity and title will draw them. O. K. for any type of theatre. Exploitation Angles: Play up Dix. Use Spanish songs. Dress ushers in early California period or Spanish designs. Capitalize the romantic days of the old West.

THEME: Romantic drama of free-booter of early California who gives up his bandit ways when he meets the right girl.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, 6,230 feet. Released, December, 1927. The Cast: Richard Dix, Thelma Todd, Fred Kohler, Jerry Mandy, Robert Brower, Harry Holder, Fred Esmelton, Frances Raymond, Ernie S. Adams. Director, Gregory La Cava.

San Francisco Nights

Tense Drama of the Barbary Coast

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THE old Barbary Coast of the days before the fire is the setting for this somewhat tense and colorful drama of the underworld, in which Percy Marmont has the role of the refined gentlemen who becomes a denizen of the dives and is influenced back to refinement by a dance hall girl. It has its gripping moments and there are several of them. The story is a more logical one than is usual to this type of photoplay.

The real atmosphere of the old San Francisco dives is well maintained throughout the action, but there is too much footage to the picture. It could well stand some cutting, particularly in the earlier sequences, which are much prolonged and where the action is merely incidental to the plot.

There is also a little too much repetition, but aside from these minor faults the interest is well maintained from start to finish.

Percy Marmont is equally effective as the refined gentleman and the habitue of the dives, while Mae Busch is splendid in the difficult role of the dance hall girl. It is a role that could easily be overplayed, but she does it so well as to leave the impression she is satisfied with Red, though it is apparent she is in love with Vickery. A splendid piece of work too, is that of George Stone and Flash, the crook. He is of the slinking, sneaking, plotting type, thoroughly despicable, and looking and acting the part every moment. Tom O'Brien looks the part of the bouncer, but is inclined to overact in spots.

Drawing Power: It is the type of play that has its appeal to nearly any audience, and it should do very well. Exploitation Angles: The atmosphere of the old Barbary Coast dives can be well utilized for exploitation purposes.

THEME: Drama of the underworld in which young lawyer is divorced by his wife when he purposely sets the evidence to satisfy her. He drifts to the underworld, is nursed by a dance hall girl, and eventually wins back the love of his wife.

Distributed by Gotham Pictures. Released, January 1, 1928. Length, 7,000 feet. The Cast: Percy Marmont, Mae Busch, Tom O'Brien, George Stone, Alma Tell, Hobart Cavanaugh. Directed by R. William Neill. Adapted from the story, "The Fruit of Divorce," by Leon De Costa. Scenario and supervision by Harold Shumate.

If I Were Single

Little to Recommend It

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is little in this light comedy to recommend it. Its farcical incidents are considerably overdrawn and it appears to have been thrown together in a haphazard manner. There is in it material that could be used to much better advantage had it been handled in a more subtle manner. The story is illogical and the incidents are handled too crudely.

May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel head the small cast as the young married couple who are both inclined to be flirty. Nagel in particular is of the frivolous type and overdoes his role scandalously. It appears as though no attempt had been made to curb his flirtatious manner, even when there is no occasion for him to be flirty.

May McAvoy is much more natural and considerably less flirty. The part gives her but little opportunity to accomplish anything effective. Andre Beranger is impossible in the role of the completely feminine hair dresser, who carries on the flirtation with the young wife, while Myrna Loy, the vampire friend of the wife, also is permitted to overdo the role. It looks as though director Del Ruth had permitted the cast entirely too much latitude in their portrayal of the roles. He might have made the picture passable had he toned down the players and had the farcical incidents been made less glaringly unreal.

Drawing Power: Only the popularity of Miss McAvoy and Nagel may make it a fair draw. Neither the story nor the acting will be sufficient to put it over. Exploitation Angles: The title will possibly suggest various methods of exploitation. The names of the leading players can also be used

THEME: Comedy in which young married couple become flirty, the husband, unknowingly, with his wife's best friend, and the wife with her music teacher. The husband passes on a cigarette lighter gift of the wife with her music teacher. Eventually each realizes that flirting doesn't pay.

Distributed by Warner Bros. Released, December 17, 1927. Length, 6,320 feet. The Cast: May McAvoy, Conrad Nagel, Myrna Loy, Andre Beranger. Director, Roy Del Ruth. Story by Robert Lord. Scenario by Robert Lord.

Serenade

Menjou Has Another Winner

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN it comes to playing those sophisticated roles of the gay bounders of Europe's boulevards, Adolphe Menjou stands apart from the crowd. With his nonchalant manner, his [illegible] of a lark in his eyes (and lifted eyebrows) he can give more to this particular type of character than his fellows of the celluloid world. "Serenade" is not unlike some recent Menjous in theme and treatment. Again he plays something of a gay rogue in study of a Viennese musician who, true to his Danube background, composes those haunting, lilting melodies. As a result he becomes the idol of the city and the ladies worship at his feet.

That the spark of genius burns in his soul is proved in his inability at first to market his stuff. A fellow musician advises him that his music lacks quality. So he up and falls in love with a poor, but sympathetic girl and marries her. After a while he turns out a [illegible] and the success of it goes to his head. It is [illegible] the affection of the [illegible] show. The wife remains at home and is forbidden to come into the spotlight to share her husband's success. It might ruin his future. But she steps out eventually [illegible] and a reconciliation is effected.

It is a well-constructed film, shot full of charm and sly humor. And, moreover, it is appealing in its background and atmosphere. The acting by Martha Franklin, Kathryn Carver and Lina Basquette is very good. All seem genuine in their respective roles.

Drawing Power: Should draw because of [illegible] getting from stories. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and bill as typical romance of [illegible]

THEME: Romantic drama on a triangle plot with erring husband being brought back to his wife when latter plays his game.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players. Length, six reels. Released, December, 1927. The Cast: Adolphe Menjou, Kathryn Carver, Lawrence Grant, Lina Basquette, Martha Franklin. Director, H. [illegible]

The Enemy

Hokum, But Up to Snuff

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT takes good old peace times to promote propaganda against war. That is why "The Enemy," a film version of the play is brought out now. Fred Niblo, who directed "Ben Hur," was not inspired when he wove it into picture shape, though he has done a creditable job by it. The trouble is there's no great idea behind it. Niblo employs several studio tricks (he knows them) and by capitalizing scenes of marching feet —and the usual stock methods he makes a picture that stands up fairly well as entertainment.

The story is not involved with any subtle strokes. The suspense and the climaxes are well planted. The star is Lillian Gish and, as is her custom, she acts with fine poise and restraint and yet releases an admirable suggestion of pent-up emotions. The title gets its meaning from war—a force to be avoided. The story takes up the deprivations of a family in general, and those of the young wife in particular. It is her husband who is drawn from her arms the morning after the marital ceremony.

Symbolism has a place in the picture, although it isn't indicated by suggestion. But it is pointed that war causes hunger and despair—and profiteering. The subject might have been handled with more imagination and realism by the Germans. Here it is a fairly entertaining picture saturated with hokum. Ralph Forbes does a splendid piece of work in the role of the husband forced to go to war. Others who acquitted themselves with honors are Frank Currier and George Fawcett.

Drawing Power: Star's personality should put it over. Suitable for first runs and all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up as an indictment of war. Feature star and leading man.

THEME: Drama of war with married couple separated not to be reunited until they have suffered untold privations.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, nine reels. Released, December, 1927.

The Cast: Lillian Gish, Ralph Forbes, Ralph Emerson, Frank Currier, George Fawcett, Fritzi Ridgway, John S. Peters, Karl Dane, Polly Moran. Director, Fred Niblo.

The Girl From Chicago

Crook Melodrama is Adequate Entertainment

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SINCE "Underworld" set the fashion for crook melodramas that spoke volumes of action and suspense through gun play, it was to be expected that the screen would be flooded with them. Only "Underworld's" successors haven't hit its high mark. The opus here is an adaptation of a Satevepost story, and carries its characters through a conventional series of crook scenes, with sentiment and romance figuring strongly to provide the happy balance.

The usual figures strut their stuff even to the innocent heroine who comes to the evil city to save her brother from a life of crime. The latter is the weakling whose vicious associates are determined to drag him to the depths. But the hero bobs up in the personality of a detective, and restores order out of chaos and also sees to it that the romance carries on very well.

The film is crammed with hectic action, there being a deal of gun toting and shooting. But the realities are not very prominently spread in the story. It has creditable atmosphere, and its interpretation is taken care of with adequate expression, particularly by Conrad Nagel, Myrna Loy and Paul Panzer.

Drawing Power: Suitable for average houses. Title should have some appeal. Exploitation Angles: Play up as crook melodrama. Feature Myrna Loy and Conrad Nagel.

THEME: Crook melodrama showing redemption of youth. Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Length, six reels. Released December, 1927.

The Cast: Conrad Nagel, Myrna Loy, William Russell, Carrol Nye, Paul Panzer, Erville Anderson. Director, Ray Enright.

"Angel Eyes"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

"BIG BOY" continues his winsome little antics in this comedy directed by Charles Lamont with Lorraine Rivero, Lila Leslie, Mrs. Robert McKim and Phil Dunham as supporting players. The action has to do with the delivery of a large birthday cake made by "Big Boy's" mother in honor of little Miss Rivero's birthday party. "Big Boy" is told to deliver the pastry creation, but on his way to the girl's house he is beset by a tough little boy, who delivers cakes for his mother's bakery shop, and the cake is wrecked. To replace the whipped cream and icing that had adorned the cake before the catastrophe "Big Boy" covers the top of it with cement, causing everyone at the party to drop their piece in disgust when their teeth fail to penetrate the rock-like icing.

"Big Boy" has several moments all to himself and he is good in them, needless to say. There is one scene in which he is tormented to death because of the tendency of taffy candy—long streches of it that have not been pulled enough to give the candy its proper consistency —to drip towards the floor.

Not as good as some of the youngster's other comedies, but passable film fare nevertheless.

"Pathe Review, No. 2"

(Pathe—One Reel)

A NUMBER of entertaining subjects are revealed in Pathe Review No. 2. Principal among them is "An Oriental Venice," showing picturesque scenes from the canal streets of San Chiao-Pu and the methods of transportation existing there. "Well Dressed Ears" shows the various styles of earrings from the earliest days of civilization up to the present time, with the flapper of today displaying her football, airplane and such types of earrings. The Land of the Firewalkers" is done in three parts, this one presenting the second. It shows the customs of the Fiji Islanders, with the events leading up to a wedding ceremony featured in this review. Some unusual scenes and customs are displayed, with the "firewalkers" promised in the concluding number.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Busy Bodies"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS Grantland Rice Sportlight produced by John L. Hawkinson is an interesting depiction of the use of the bodies in various lines of sport. It shows action pictures and slow motion of handball players, basket ball players, swimmers and oarsmen and just how the various muscles are brought into play. Correct "form" is also pictured in the different sports. The series should be interesting for anyone who is at all interested in sports or the upbuilding of the human body.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Call of the Sea"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A PICTURIZATION of a legend of the South Seas, a tale of a Mermaid is this Colorart production exquisite in its natural coloring. Never accentuated nor too harshly intermingled are these pigments—a snowy white, a flesh color, the brilliance of the sea reflecting the golden brilliance of the sun—all of these delicate colors blend nicely into the languorous background of a tropical isle. They are as pleasing as anyone could ask that they be.

Excellently as the production is mounted and first-rate though its production tone be, the story seems to fall a trifle short in that it does not convey the feeling of semi-tragedy, the idea of an unavoidable fate that you had for instance in "The Vision." Perhaps it is demanding too much to desire a little more realism in the portrayals. These have been handled with too light a touch, with a feeling of aloofness from the struggles of the characters. It does not seem to go down and touch a vital spot or produce a change of mood. That was how "The Vision" affected a great many who saw it. You really sympathized with the plight of the principals for it was rife with a sort of pent-up emotion that came across you with a suddenness when the girl decided to destroy herself. This poignancy is but dimly felt in "The Call of the Sea." And it should be there for it has a climax that is supposed to react on one forcibly. The mermaid struggles against her nature, tries to smother the longing for the sandy bottoms of the ocean which to be realized would mean a permanent separation from her husband and child.

She fights that desire as long as she is able but it is overpowering and so she leaves them to return to the waters which had been so long calling her. Here is near tragedy; a broken-hearted husband, a lonely child, a spouse who must kill the maternal instinct to return to her native haunts.

"The Call of the Sea" is a fine short subject, one of which you need not feel reluctant to place on the best of programs. It is not a second "The Vision" but it is darned good, nevertheless.

"Dates For Two"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is an hilarious comedy of mistaken identity, with Mike and Ike as parties of the first part and twin sisters the parties of the second part. It is one of those wild, harum-scarum things with the wrong man invariably meeting the wrong girl, doing flip-flops all over the apartment and generally messing things up.

Mike makes a date with one of the twins and Ike with the other. Mike arrives, beamingly meets the wrong girl and is repulsed. Ditto Ike. They alternate in meeting the right and the wrong girl, being slammed with a piece of furniture one minute and caressed the next, until they are all but distracted. Eventually it is divulged the girls are twins, when for the first time they all come on the scene together. But for a lot of repetition in stretching the story out to two reels it might be highly recommended. As it stands, it will probably occasion a lot of merriment where they are not too critical of their short comedies.

"Smith's Holiday"

(Sennett-Pathe—Two Reels)

MACK SENNETT has utilized all of the fun-making devices at a beach pleasure park for his humorous situations in his latest two reeler of the Smith Family series, which features Mary Ann Jackson, Raymond Mc Kee and Ruth Hiatt. It is a big improvement on other recent Sennett comedies, though there is little in it that has not been done many times before.

Little Mary Ann Jackson supplies most of the humor. She is a clever little girl and quite a pantomimist. Through her most of the situations are created. Miss Hiatt in her fetching bathing suit has little to do but parade the youngster around, while Mc Kee strives hard for his humor while carrying the live pig and the live goose the youngster wins at the shooting gallery and in the mother and baby bathing show.

There should be quite a few laughs as a result of the antics of the Smiths and their pesty cousin Egbert before the trick mirrors and on the various fun devices. There is little in the way of a story, the various gags only being used for laugh purposes. It's a strenuous outing for the head of the family, who is bothered with a very much exaggerated cold. A pistol explodes in the hands of the baby at the shooting gallery and hist the bullseye, for which she is rewarded with a live goose that passes into the keeping of papa Smith.

Then comes the mother and baby bathing show, which is won by the Smiths, and for which the prize is a young pig. The Smiths and the pig and the goose go through the crazy house, down the different slides and are spun about on the human wheel of fortune.

"Sword Points"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LUPINO LANE is one who is evidently not afraid to venture something different in the way of comedy for the benefit of the movie going public for in this comedy he goes back to the time of Dumas' "Three Musketeers" to get his comedy background, getting over a fine batch of laughs with the clanking swords, the plumed hats, the snuff boxes and the well filled wine cellars that were characteristic of the times of Louis and Richelieu.

All of the action takes place at an inn where a down-and-out soldier of fortune (Lupino Lane) comes into contact with a swaggering viscount (Wallace Lupino) and his gang of unruly followers. They have stolen a letter from a pretty girl and Lane has aided her in her difficulty. They go after him and therefore he must needs thrust and parry, run and jump, hide and attack as the tide of the conflict dictates.

Lane has a grand time in the wine cellar when he breaks the huge barrels containing the juice of the luscious grape. He is almost drowned in the wine, so great is the damage he wreaks in that plentifully stocked cellar. There is another good scene where Lane, dueling with a sextet or so of enemy swordsmen, takes snuff, so tiresome are the proceedings to him. The adversaries politely refrain from attacking him while he waits for the snuff to produce the refreshing sneeze. They have plenty of comedy with the swords and a series of panels that give way with a touch of the hand. As a matter of fact, what goes on in the inn will make many, many laugh.

"A Whirl of Activity"

(Educational—One Reel)

THE idea of action permeates this latest Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge release which is not lacking in interesting little bits warranted to keep you interested from the time of its unreeling. There are shots of the army, the navy, racing crews at practice, Chinese whirling mice and amusement seeking crowds at Coney Island.

All the attractiveness and thrills of the game of Hawaiian surf riding are caught in an appealing shot of this beautiful sport. Three men get atop one of these surf boards and ride a wave almost to the shore; the sweep of the wave, its rearing crest, are finely photographed. Another sprightly shot is that of a spillway. Water, of foaming whiteness and ever changing contour, is seen leaping high into the air as a result of its impact. There follow scenes of darkies loading logs onto trains, fireworks at velocity, or rushing onward with the train.

Interesting in its contents of scenes and containing quite a bit of humorous animation work. —RAYMOND GANLY.

Newsreel Resume

The rejoicing down in Mexico anent the latest exploit of Lindbergh is, of course, the most important news story of the week, and the various newsreels gave it the prominence and footage it deserved. Other recent events that were covered in detail by the roving news cameramen were the tragedy of the S-4, the army airmen bombing a North Carolina bridge, and Mrs. Frances Grayson's take-off in the Dawn, on what it seems is another transatlantic hop that has been stopped short by relentless death. This week also saw the pictorial review of the fast-ebbing year featured in several of the reels.

A brief outline of the contents of the 13 weekly issues of the different news reels is as follows:

Vol. 9, No. 26, of Fox News: Lindbergh's ovation in Mexico; scenes over the watery grave of the S-4; co-eds and girls have recourse to ears to do lessons when their school burns; the Holy Land as it is today—Nazareth and Bethlehem; Parisian spring styles; Rockefellow, Sr., at his game of golf; army aircraft bomb bridge in war test.

No. 27: The Dawn going off into the unknown; the Coolidges spending Christmas; the Paulding which sunk the S-4 at Drydock; rooster and terrier in barnyard fight; San Antonio girls bathe autos in river; Lindbergh's mother arriving in Valbuena to join her son; army bombers destroying bridge.

The Movietone Holiday issue contained the views of the three women members of Congress—Mrs. Naughton, Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Kahn; the tolling of the bell in the Tower of the Houses of Parliament in London; riding with the hounds in the Berkshire Hills; the S.S. Majestic bringing in a record-breaking Christmas mail; Mount Holyoke girls in songs; a demonstration of how to subdue a fire with carbon dioxide snow; a penful of squealing pigs, and Mort Lindsley, of New York, bowling.

M-G-M News, Vol. 1, No. 38: Cavalry in snow maneuvers; Paris aglow for Christmas holidays; Bennett J. Doty, James A. Reed, Henry L. Stimson, Gene Tunney and Vice-President Dawes, who figure in the news of the day; navy divers trying to reach entombed men in the S-4; Mexicans acclaiming Lindbergh; winter sports at Lake Placid; army flyers testing ariel explosives on Carolina bridge.

No. 39: Mrs. Grayson's plane on a test hop-off; monkey adopting guinea pig; U. S. gobs view Siam's ancient temples; Japanese children exercising in American style; first shipment of elephants bound for Honolulu; North Carolina church destroyed by midnight blaze; Lindbergh visiting Xochimilco Lake, Mexico; bombing the bridge at Albermarle, N. C.; high lights of the year of 1927—civil war in China, Mississippi floods, New England floods, Lindbergh's welcome in Paris, President Coolidge in the Black Hills of the Dakotas, American Legion convention in Paris; one navy flyers leaving airplane in 18 seconds.

Pathe News, No. 1: The H. S. S. Nelson, modern British warship, and an old windjammer of a bygone day in navigation; Lindbergh as Mexico's guest; soldiers at Fort Ethan Allan in winter maneuvers; diver's endeavors to rescue crew of S-4 entombed in sunken submersible; French cyclists, a sky flivver and the huge military review which culminated the Soviet anniversary celebration in Moscow.

No. 2: Mrs. Grayson and the Dawn; divers going down to the hulk of the S-4; the Paulding which rammed the sunken submarine; the opening of the sports season at Lake Placid; film highlights in the year of 1927; Cardinal Vennutelli, 92-year-old prelate; Cambridge defeating Oxford at Rugby.

Paramount News, No. 43: Army planes attacking bridge at Albermarle; Mexico honoring Lindbergh; rescuers maintain their attempts to save dead men of the S-4; Mrs. Lindbergh beginning her flight to Mexico City; U. S. Army troopers in winter maneuvers; monkies and Christmas presents; Bennett Doty; an 83-year-old couple who have been married for 61 years; cross-country race in Paris.

No. 44: Winter trotting races in Berlin; Commander Byrd looks over huskies which he will use in his attempt to reach the South Pole; billiard champ; prize Spanish shawl; guarding rail for dangerous curves at Saratoga; Dutch kiddies enjoying merry-go-round; Los Angeles firemen giving demonstration; the search for the lost Dawn; Lindbergh at Xochimilco, Mexico.

Kinograms, No. 5355; Seas defeat attempts to raise S-4; De Valera; winter maneuvers of troops at Fort Ethan Allan; Lindbergh being honored in Mexico; Mrs. Lindbergh off to join her boy; the army airplane wrecking bridge.

No. 5356: Mrs. Frances Grayson, her crew and her plane; Mrs. Coolidge helping Santa Claus; turkeys presented to Louisville newsies; feminine bowlers display their skill; the damage received by the Paulding from sunken submarine; stunts of trained animals; Lindbergh views Mexico's Venice—Xochimilco; Mrs. Lindbergh in Mexico City with her son; remains of the Hardings removed to memorial tomb.

International News, Vol. 9, No. 104: Cavalry and artillery in defense test on snowy fields; Bennett J. Doty; Henry L. Stimpson, Ruth Elder, Gene Tunnery, Vice-President Dawes and Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh; French cyclists in cross-country race; navy in rescue work to save the S-4; Christmas celebration in Shenandoah Caverns in Virginia; airmen bombing bridge in try-out of new explosives.

No. 105: Racing dogs fighting the snow in training; search going on in smoke in night blaze; the crew of the amphibian plane—the Dawn; co-eds learn how to raise babies; gulls swarming the harbor of Provincetown in search of food; Lindy at Xochimilcho; artillery shells bombing bridge at Albemarle; the thrills of 1927—Mississippi River disaster and its counterpart in Nebraska; the damage caused by St. Louis tornado; the A. E. F. convention in Paris; rioting Chinese mobs in Canton; Lindbergh's memorable reception at Le Bourget; Lindbergh's rousing welcome from New York; Babe Ruth breaking his record.

Joseph Cawthorn has been chosen for the role of the Yale professor in "Hold 'Em, Yale," starring Rod La Rosque.

George B. Seitz will direct Shirley Mason in "My Wife's Relations," the latest Columbia production in which these two will again be reunited.

"Pullman Partners" has been selected as the title for Norma Shearer's new comedy drama of the traveling saleswoman, which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been filming. Frank Currier, Polly Moran, Leon Holmes, Lillianne Leighton and Esther Jackson are the latest players to join the cast.

Harrison Ford is again leading man to Marie Prevost in that star's forthcoming vehicle, "A Blonde for a Night," which E. Mason Hopper is directing for Pathe.

Richard Dix returns to the field of farce in his new picture, "Sporting Goods," just completed at Paramount's Hollywood studio. Gertrude Olmstead and Ford Sterling support Dix.

Lew Seiler will start working soon on "Square Crooks," a screen version of James P. Judge's comedy drama. Robert Armstrong will have the male lead and Johnny Mack Brown an important supporting part. Betty Gardiner made the film adaptation.

Loretta Young, whose rise to an important position in film circles has been rapid, has been cast for the feminine lead opposite Lon Chaney in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," which Herbert Brenon will direct for M-G-M.

Ruth Hurst, an extra girl signed by Carl Laemmle last week on a five year contract, has been cast to play the part of Laura La Plante's sister in "Home James," a new farce comedy which William Beaudine will direct.

Keene Thompson, screen writer, Rowland V. Lee, director, have renewed their contracts with Paramount. Harry J. Decker, editorial supervisor, has just renewed his contract with Universal.

George O'Brien has just finished work on "Sharp Shooters," made under the direction of J. G. Blystone at the Fox studio on the West Coast.

Frank Capra has been signed by Columbia Pictures to direct another comedy. He is now putting the finishing touches on "That Certain Thing," Columbia's latest comedy.

Replacing "His Night," "Forbidden Hours" is the final title chosen by M-G-M for Ramon Novarro's new starring vehicle. The star's next vehicle, based on a sea story by Ben Ames Williams, will have Joan Crawford in the leading feminine role and Ernest Torrence playing a featured part. William Nigh will direct the film, tentatively titled "China Bound."

Gary Cooper and Fay Wray, two of Paramount's new players, will hereafter be co-featured together in feature productions, their next vehicle to be a drama of circus life by James Creelman and Melville Baker. Rowland V. Lee will direct it.

Studio Briefs—Continued

The cast is complete for F B O's "Skinner's Big Idea." Lynn Shores, director, has chosen Bryant Washburn, Martha Sleeper, Hugh Trevor, Charles Wellesley, Ole Ness, William Orland, James Bradbury, Sr., Dudley Roberts and others.

Michael Visaroff, Russian actor, has been given a role in Universal's "We Americans." Edward Sloman is directing the picture.

Noah Beery has been engaged to play the role of a reformatory guard in "The Godless Girl," which will be Cecil B. De Mille's personally-directed picture for Pathe.

In "Partners in Crime," Paramount's new Beery-Hatton vehicle, the duo of comedians will have the support of William Powell, Arthur Housman, Joseph Girard and Jack Luden, who replaces Richard Arlen as the romantic lead in the picture. John Waters is handling the production.

Monte Blue, Warner Bros. star, has been loaned to M-G-M to play the lead in "Robert Flaherty's Southern Skies." He leaves next week for a three-months' location trip, at the expiration of which he will return to Hollywood to commence work on his series of Warner Bros. pictures to be made during the season of 1928-29.

Francis Corby, directing the latest Buster Brown comedy for the Stern Bros., has assembled various types of children and animals for "Racing Pups," in which the usual trio of Arthur Trimble, Doreen Turner and Tige, the dog, will be augmented by the addition of Jackie McHugh, Bobby Lloyd, Bobby Young and Eugene Jackson.

"The Actress" will be the title of Norma Shearer's new starring film for M-G-M, based on the Pinero play, "Trelawney of the Wells." Ralph Forbes has been chosen for the leading male role.

George Cooper instead of Louis Wolheim will have the chief comedy role in the Caddo production for United Artists, "Hell's Bells," in which Luther Reed will direct Greta Nissen, Ben Lyon and James Hall. A delay in the completion of "Tempest" necessitated the borrowing from M-G-M of Cooper for the comedy role.

Photography was started this week under the direction of Robert DeLacey on "The Valley of Superstition," a new F B O western starring Tom Tyler. The cast includes Frankie Darro, Josephine Borio, Harry Woods, Serge Temoff and Barney Furey. The story is an original by Oliver Drake.

The love drama of Napoleon and Josephine, which is the third of the Technicolor subjects which M-G-M is producing, has been titled "The Lady of Victories." Otto Matieson appears as the great Emperor and George Irving as Talleyrand.

Mary Nolan will be the feminine lead in "Be Yourself," Universal's next Reginald Denny picture. William Davidson, Dorothy Gulliver, Sailor Sharkey and Bull Montana and William Tooker will be in the cast. Filming has been started under the direction of William Seiter.

Filming of Paramount's "Doomsday" was completed this week by Director Rowland V. Lee.

"The Kiss Doctor," fourth of Fox Van Bibber comedies, and "Old Wives Who Knew," a new Imperial, have just been started at the Fox Films studio on the coast. Tyler Brooke and Duane Thompson are the leads in the Van Bibber comedy, while Hallam Cooley and Anita Goroin are the leads in the imperial.

Universal has signed a contract with Paul Fajos, a young Austrian director whose only picture seen in America is "The Last Moment," a titleless picture.

Julian Johnson has signed a new long-term contract with Paramount as film and title writer, George Marion, Jr., title writer, has also signed a new contract with the company.

Dick Sutherland has joined the cast of M-G-M's latest western starring Tim McCoy, now being made by Nick Grinde.

Paramount's "Red Hair" production unit returned to Hollywood studio this week from Catalina Island, where four days were spent on location scenes. William Austin, Lawrence Grant, Jacqueline Gadsden and Claude King have been added to the cast. Certain sequences of the film will be taken in Technicolor.

"Detectives" will be the title of the next co-starring vehicle of M-G-M with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in the leading roles. F. Hugh Herbert, Chester Franklin and Del Lord are now collaborating on the story.

Gus Meins has finished "Meet the Count," a new comedy of the "Keeping Up With the Joneses" series being made by the Stern Bros. for Universal.

Al Hustwick, title editor for Paramount, will write the subtitles for the Zane Grey story, "Under the Tonto Rim."

James Marcus was this week signed by Universal for the part of a newspaper editor in "The Freedom of the Press," which George Melford is working on in Universal City. Marceline Day has the role of the girl.

Emily Fitzroy, Ethel Wales and Gertrude Claire will take parts in James Cruze's next production for Pathe, to be titled "Her Highness, Miss Jones."

ALL the local theatres celebrated Christmas with the community. The Loew houses entertained more than 6000 policemen, firemen and postmen during the week. Following the custom inaugurated by the company several years ago, a pair of tickets were issued to each member of these departments. Policemen and postmen were guests of the State theatre, and firemen were guests of the Allen. Keith's Palace entertained about 200 children every afternoon of the week. A party was given for all children in institutions. In addition, through the courtesy of Manager John F. Royal of the Palace, a show of ten acts was presented Thursday afternoon at the Marine Hospital for the disabled war veterans. David Nolan, publicity manager of the Palace, and himself a war veteran, arranged the performance.

The Allen, State, Palace and Hippodrome, downtown, Keith's East 105th and the Park on the East Side, and the Granada and Garden on the West Side, were among the theatres which offered special midnight New Year's Eve shows. Keith's Palace and the Allen presented all new programs for this performance, with seats reserved, and admissions boosted to $1. The Park also offered a new program and set 75c. as the admission price. The other houses repeated their regular programs at regular prices.

Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., will give its annual employees' frolic on Thursday, January 12th, this year, instead of following their usual custom of celebrating on Washington's Birthday. However, the State theatre lobby will continue to be the scene of the affair, at which about 600 are expected to attend.

William H. Haynes, Allen manager, is chairman of the entertainment committee, assisted by Geo. Gilliam, Park manager, and Bob Pank, who provides the acts for the amateur night shows at the Loew houses.

Tom Carroll, manager of the State, was busy playing Santa Claus to all the children from the News Toyshop at a special matinee Wednesday, December 28th. David Rubinoff, violinist, and Geo. Williams' Band contributed to the celebration.

Paul Kemery has been appointed treasurer at the Allen theatre. This is a promotion from the rank of publicity man.

Martin Burett is named house manager of the Granada, Loew's new West Side house, which opened earlier in the winter.

Business at the local first-run houses was better this year during the pre-Christmas week than it was during the parallel week last year. Manager Haynes of the Allen reports that his house has gone considerably over last year's record. This is quite a change from the old days, when theatres used to close the week before Christmas. Neighborhood houses, on the other hand, report that their business is below last year's, due to increased unemployment.

Jack Steinberg's American theatre in Alliance was badly damaged by fire last week, caused by crossed wires. Loss is said to be about $10,000. Steinberg also owns the Star at Alliance and the Regent at Youngstown.

Norman Moray, local Warner Brothers' exchange manager, spent Christmas in Grand Rapids, where Mrs. Moray is recuperating from a recent illness.

The Garfield, a new 1300 seat motion picture theatre, was opened last Wednesday by Frank Porsinski. It is located at 4717 Turney Road and will offer four changes a week.

When the Glenside theatre, Cleveland, closed for the past six months, reopens under new ownership in January, it will be known as the Dreamland. Thomas Shalakis, the new owner, is remodeling the house completely.

George Huppenbecker, formerly with the Standard Film Service Company, is notw with Warner Brothers in the Toledo territory.

Jack Hays, Universal representative in Mexico City, who is vacationing in the States, will not spend Christmas in Cleveland, as was expected. Instead, Hays has gone to Cuba to take temporary charge of the Universal office there during the illness of the resident manager.

Cleve Adams, F. B. O. division manager, spent a few days last week in Cleveland in conference with assistant division manager Lou Geiger and exchange manager Al Mertz.

N. Shiren, traveling auditor for Tiffany-Stahl, who has been in Cleveland for the past few weeks, finished his work here in time to [illegible] the holidays.

Arthur Kurtz has resigned as head bookkeeper at the Universal exchange. He is succeeded by Pete Fortune, who has been promoted from short subject booker. And Walter Hein, of the accounting de[illegible] Fortune's place. All this is right in line with Carl Laemmle's policy of promoting from the ranks.

John Urbanski is installing a [illegible] theatre.

Joe Greenly has opened a new independent exchange in the Film exchange building, called Service Film Exchange. He will distribute State rights' pictures in Ohio.

Ben Wise, owner of the National theatre, East 55th St., bought himself a Christmas present last week. It is the Boulevard theatre in Cincinnati. Now Wise will help boost the railroad dividends as he will be commuting between Cleveland and Cincy every week-end.

William H. Haynes, manager of the Allen theatre, is receiving compliments from his patrons for the beautiful presentations he is offering each week. The Allen Ballet, organized by Bebe Barri of Cleveland, and trained directly under Haynes' supervision, has received flattering offers from New York producers. This number started out with eight girls, but has been increased to sixteen. Striking sets, costumes and dances have been originated for them by Manager Haynes.

Harry Gold, United Artists assistant sales manager in this division, went to Cincinnati to spend Christmas with his wife, who has been very ill. Gold was manager of the Cincinnati United Artists ex[illegible]

Baltimore

THE Keith-Albee New Garden theatre, remodeled from the old Garden theatre formerly operated by the Whitehurst Theatrical Interests, opened to the public at 11 a. m. Monday, December 26th, with eight acts of Keith-Albee vaudeville and pictures.

Three performances are given daily from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. The admission prices are matinees, orchestra 50 cents, balcony 35 cents; evening, except Saturdays and holidays, orchestra 75 cents, balcony, 50 cents; Saturdays and holidays, evenings, orchestra $1 and balcony 50 cents.

This brings the Keith-Albee vaudeville directly into the heart of the field of keenest competition of Baltimore with Loew's Century and Valencia just up Lexington street, Keith's Hippodrome with family time and feature pictures just three blocks away and the New theatre with motion pictures just across the street.

It is understood that on the matinee performances of the first day the majority of the people attending were regular Keith-Albee fans and not the usual Garden crowd that used to come to see the family time vaudeville.

Throughout the matinee performances on the opening day the place was crowded. This may have been largely due to the holiday, as all the theatres were jammed to capacity during that day. Frederick C. Schanberger is manager of the theatre, J. Lawrence Schanberger is associate manager and Leonard McLaughlin is publicity director. Charles E. Farson, who has directed the Maryland theatre orchestra for the past three years, is conducting the music.

Through the courtesy of Howard Price Kingsmore, managing director of Loew's Incorporated in Baltimore, a big Christmas party was given to the newsboys of the Baltimore Daily Post here Saturday morning, December 24.

Sam Robbins, formerly conductor of orchestra on the Century Roof before that was turned into the Valencia under the Loew regime, is now acting as master of ceremonies on the stage at Loew's Century here for the entertainment a la Paul Specht, which is being given at that playhouse. He will be here about three weeks.

Mrs. A. H. Maloney, formerly organist at Loew's Century here, has been succeeded by John Var[illegible]

Ella Hartley has succeeded Ethel Wales as cashier at Loew's Valencia.

M. Buchman, formerly chief of service at Loew's Century, has gone up to the Stanley as chief of service.

The opera house in the City Hall building at Florence, S. C., will be remodeled to cost about $10,000 by the manager M. S. Schnibben.

The cost of the new Community theatre, to be built at Hamilton, Baltimore, Md., will be about $35,000. It is to be one-story brick, measuring 50 x 140 feet. It will [illegible] atre Company, C. Edgar Wood, representative.

Portland, Ore.

CHARLIE KOERNER, at one time branch manager of the local exchange, was a visitor here last week, exchanging conversation with his relatives. Koerner is at present the head of the George Mann theatres in California.

S. H. Cohen, formerly director of publicity of the Liberty and Rivoli theatres, has been appointed manager of the Geller Walnut theatre. Cohen will also handle the publicity and advertising for the new Geller theatre, which opens the latter part of the month.

Fred Normand, formerly sales representative for Columbia Pictures, has resigned.

A bond issue of $1,600,000 has been underwritten by the Lumberman's Trust Company, for Alexander Pantages, in the erection of a new Pantages theatre at Fresno, Cal.

It is emphatically denied by Walt Tebbetts that he will sell his interests in the new Oriental theatre to any producer-circuit combine. Tebbetts expects to operate this 2500-seat house independently, having already contracted for Pathe, F. B. O. and Tiffany first-runs.

Herschel Stuart, general northwest manager for West Coast Theatres, was in town for a few days and left for his headquarters in Seattle.

According to well-founded reports, the Orpheum circuit plans the erection of a 3000-seat house in Portland, within the next few months. Frank Vincent, western head of the circuit, was in the city a few weeks, and is said to have conferred with some real estate people concerning various sites. Orpheum now plays a three-day engagement at the Heilig, which is a road show house, having been at this house for the past ten years. No definite information has yet been given out by the vaudeville concern, as to the building of a theatre, but it is known that there is something in the air.

The new Heathmann Hotel, which is the first unit in the $4,000,000 hotel and theatre project, opened to the public on December 17. The hotel is part of a block, which will house the new $1,500,000 Publix house, scheduled for early February opening. The new Publix theatre will be known as The Portland, and will have a seating capacity of 3000, making it one of the finest and largest theatres on the Coast. It is understood that the house will play Fanchon and Marco presentations, and will be an exclusive Paramount outlet for product. The theatre is to be managed by West Coast Theatres, Inc., according to anannouncement made by Harold B. Franklin, president of the company, while the house will be owned by Publix. Rapp Brothers of New York City were the architects.

Fox's Movietone process had a very auspicious opening last week at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse, coming through with a winning week's business. This house is now presenting Vitaphone in conjunction with Movietone programs, and is going over nicely.

Cincinnati

CONCURRENT with the opening of the new E. F. Albee theatre, in Cincinnati, comes the announcement that the present Keith-Albee theatre, located on Walnut street, will be torn down to make way for a larger and more pretentious Keith house. Upon completion, the Palace, another Keith house now playing vaudeville and pictures, will be converted into an exclusive theatre.

Charles Lowenberg, for several years exploitation manager for Universal with headquarters in Cincinnati, has been promoted to divisional sales manager for the mid-west territory. Al. Sugarman, who was manager for Universal at Pittsburgh, has been transferred to Cincinnati, where he will work in connection with Manager Fred Streif.

Thomas Reilly, a well-known Cincinnati exhibitor, had some of his Yuletide happiness spoiled when he discovered that his home at 560 Howell avenue had been ransacked by thieves, who secured jewelry valued at $600, together with a quantity of clothing.

The Palace theatre, located at Fifth and William streets, Dayton, Ohio, was formally opened on Christmas day. Dr. Lloyd H. Cox has been named as managing director. The project was sponsored by Jonathan H. Winters, prominent Dayton banker.

The Deisler theatre, Plymouth, Ohio, which has been closed for several weeks, following the death of Mrs. Reuben Deisler, wife of the owner, has again opened, although performances are being given but twice nightly.

John A. Schwalm, manager of the Rialto theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, was host to a juvenile club during the holidays, when special pictures, suitable for children, were screened.

Mose Blaettner, manager of the Colonial theatre, Dayton, Ohio, following his annual custom at this season of the year, staged a food show for the benefit of the poor who could probably not otherwise enjoy Christmas. During a stated number of days just before Christmas, the admission to the Colonial consisted only of some article of food or clothing, which was subsequently turned over to the city authorities for distribution among the needy.

The Travel Movie Films Co. has been incorporated at Cincinnati by F. R. Block, John H. Druffel, C. Dewald and others.

Harry J. Martin, manager of the Brown theatre, celebrated his 35th birthday anniversary Friday. It was in 1911 that he began his theatrical career with the old Macauley's theatre here and five years later became its manager, retaining that position until the house was razed. He has been manager of the Brown since it was opened in October, 1925.

William K. Saxon, new city manager of Loew's theatres, denies rumors that the Strand theatre, Memphis, may reopen soon. The Loew interests contemplate no such plan, he declared.

John Parks, contractor, has obtained a permit to demolish the two buildings at 626 and 628 Market street, Chattanooga, Tenn., with a view of erecting a theatre thereon. The Reliance Investment Company is to improve the property, it is said. The property is now leased to the Signal Amusement Company and Judge W. E. Wilkerson, of that company, said that negotiations had been under way with the Publix Corporation to erect a theatre on the site, but that no contract had been closed. However, he said he understood that another theatrical company was also negotiating for the property, along with a chain store corporation.

The Big Features Rights Corporation of Indianapolis takes pleasure in announcing that William M. Elliott, formerly salesman for Paramount in this territory, is now connected with our organization in the same capacity.

Mr. Elliott will handle his old territory, where he has numerous friends, he having been in that zone for Paramount for several years.

Minneapolis

THEATRES in the northwest saw their business dwindle for a couple of days last week when the second big snow storm of a fortnight piled the roads and streets high with drifts and disrupted train, bus and street car traffic. The storm was not as serious as the big blizzard of the previous week, but it was serious enough to cause many persons to stay at home rather than venture out to the theatres. Minnesota is having more snow this winter than it has had for years, and heavy snows are not conducive to theatre-going, especially in the rural districts where the roads are heavily blocked.

G. E. Greene, who has been managing the New Garrick theatre in Minneapolis, has taken over the management of the Capitol theatre in St. Paul. He succeeds Henry Haupt at the Capitol. Haupt is entering the advertising field.

William Warvelle Nelson, musical director for the Finkelstein & Ruben circuit, was badly injured in a wreck near South Park, Minn., last week. His head was bruised and he suffered a cut mouth. Nelson formerly conducted the State theatre orchestra in Minneapolis.

Finkelstein & Ruben is cooperating with the Hennepin County tuberculosis association this week in arranging a special program of entertainment for the boys and girls of Minneapolis.

The Capitol theatre in St. Paul is now featuring Elsie Thompson, organist, and is advertising her as "Elsie at the Wurlitzer."

A weekly radio hour is being put on by F. & R. over WCCO, the Minneapolis and St. Paul Gold Medal flour station, under the direction of William Warvelle Nelson, director of music for F. & R. They are proving very popular.

Pelican Rapids already has one theatre, the Orpheum, owned by E. M. Cowles.

The Family theatre at Chisholm, Minn., was destroyed by fire last week. The house was undergoing enlargement and repairs at the time, and several thousand dollars were being spent by Jacobs & Johnson on improvements, equipment, etc. They planned to enlarge its seating capacity to 650. The fire, which was of unknown origin, destroyed most of the equipment, badly damaged the projection machine and practically levelled the building.

The Fargo theatre at Fargo, N. D., has installed the Vitaphone.

F. & R. has made Harold Orvis Ross theatre contact man at the State theatre in Mankato, Minn. He was formerly organist and director of the State's orchestra.

Mark Ross, manager of the Minneapolis Universal exchange, has gone to California to spend his Christmas vacation.

Al Kvool has resigned as manager of the American Amusement company's theatres at Mankato, Minn. Harry French succeeds him.

John E. Konz has dismantled his Cozy theatre at Lake Crystal, Minn., and has shipped the equipment to Osseo, Wis., to use in a theatre which he plans to erect there.

H. Ellingson, owner of the Opera House at Spring Grove, Minn., is remodelling the Mabel Opera House at Mabel, Minn., and will show pictures there.

A new theatre is being erected at Pelican Rapids, Minn., by Charles C. Spies. It will seat 300 and will be named the Pelican.

Before his departure for New York last week Dan Finkelstein was given a party in the Spanish room of the Radisson Hotel, Minneapolis, by members of the F. & R. organization, theatre managers and department heads, who presented him with a beautiful leather Gladstone bag. Finkelstein is going to take a position in the theatre operating division of the Publix organization.

Jacobs and Johnson had sold their interests in the New Family theatre at Chisholm, Minn., just a few days before the fire, which destroyed the building. The purchasers, Sartori Bros., had been planning to start remodeling operations and the installation of new equipment within a few weeks.

The Cozy theatre at Grey Eagle, Minn., has been sold by F. R. Hammerstein to S. J. Thompson.

The F. B. O. sales staff in the northwest has had an addition of two new salesmen: B. McConnell for southeastern Minnesota and Wisconsin and A. H. Gelt for southern North Dakota and northern Minnesota.

Al Knool, former manager of the American Amusement Company theatre at Mankato, Minn., has been appointed manager of the Uptown, a Saxe de luxe neighborhood house in Milwaukee. He succeeds Terry Bedell.

Donald J. Harris has purchased a Page organ for his new State theatre at Huron, S. D., which is nearing completion and is expected to open soon. The house has a seating capacity of 685 and has a large stage, orchestra pit, completely equipped projection booth.

The equipment of the Park theatre at Eureka, S. D., has been sold by Charles Silver to Orthwein and Bender, who recently opened a new theatre in the town. They will now have no competition.

The Atlantic and Strand theatres at Atlantic, Iowa, have been sold to H. S. Waldorf and C. C. Johnson. Johnson recently disposed of the Dakota theatre at Yankton, S. D., to H. S. Tammen.

Canada

THE presence of Theodore Roberts in Winnipeg, Manitoba, was the reason for the gathering of all theatre and film exchange men of the city in the Brown Room of the Fort Garry Hotel for a dinner at which the actor was the guest of honor. The function was held by the Screen Club of Winnipeg, of which Helmer Jernberg, proprietor of the Province theatre, is president.

Walter F. Davis, manager of the Metropolitan theatre, introduced Mr. Roberts, and other speakers included Raymond Kershaw, former president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Manitoba; Sidney Chalu, Western manager of Canadian Educational Films, Ltd.; T. Bevington, chairman of the Manitoba Board of Moving Picture Censors, and F. E. Wadge, manager of the Orpheum theatre.

A feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. Roberts of a huge cigar. George Law of Canadian Universal, secretary of the Screen Club, had charge of the program.

John Sears, an employe of the Capitol theatre, Regina, Sask., has made a name for himself as an inventor. In association with another Regina man, he has brought out a "snowplane," which is a type of road machine propelled by a Renault airplane engine of 140 horsepower, with a nine-foot propeller. The snowplane has a glass-enclosed cabin which accommodates the "pilot" and two passengers. The machine has already performed with great success over snow-blocked roads.

With the change in the name of the dominion hteatre, Nanaimo, B. C., to Capitol theatre, there are now 21 Capitol theatres in the chain of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., across Canada. The corporation operates 130 theatres in the Dominion all told but the title of "Capitol" is being favored. The orchestras in a great many of these houses are called the "Capitolians," particularly if they are organized as stage hands, whether the theatre is known as a Capitol or not.

H. M. Thomas, Western Division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., is now installed in offices at the headquarters of the company at Toronto, having transferred from Vancouver, B. C. J. R. Muir, who is in direct charge of the Capitol theatre at Vancouver, has general supervision of Famous Players houses throughout the Vancouver district.

In a recent drive for the Victorian Order of Nurses in Edmonton, Alberta, W. P. Wilson, manager of the Capitol theatre, looked after the canvassing of a downtown district and collected $2,200.

Atlanta

TWO important changes affecting exchange managers on Atlanta's film row became known last week.

"Hank" Hearn has resigned as branch manager of Liberty-Specialty Film Distributing Corporation and will join Tiffany-Stahl Productions. His resignation became effective last Saturday, but it is understood that his active connection with Tiffany will not begin until January 1.

John W. Mangham. Jr., has resigned as branch manager of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, and will succeed Mr. Hearn as manager in Atlanta for Liberty.

Just who will succeed Mr. Mangham as manager of the Atlanta exchange of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions had not been determined at present, although it was understood an announcement would likely be made soon.

It is understood that about the first of the year, Mr. Hearn will go to New Orleans to make a special survey of conditions in that immediate territory, but whether he would head the Tiffany-Stahl branch office there was not stated.

Mr. Hearn had long been connected with Liberty, which he left at one time to be district manager in the South for Associated Exhibitors, but resigned that connection to return to Liberty on June 7, of last year.

With approximately ninety branch managers, bookers and salesmen of the exchanges affiliated with the Atlanta Film Board of Trade present, the conference held in Atlanta Monday, December 19th, proved to be a success in every way and the social feature of the gathering, a banquet in the evening, was voted one of the most enjoyable affairs of the kind ever held here.

The conference was sponsored by the Atlanta Film Board of Trade and was called for the purpose of having the various rules and regulations promulgated by the credit committee and arbitration board, explained and discussed for the benefit of bookers, salesmen and others handling film contracts.

With a better understanding of these rules by all concerned, it was hoped that, in future, there would be fewer misunderstandings and a decrease in the number of small issues that are referred to the board from time to time, for decision and settlement.

The conference, which was held on the roof garden of the Ansley Hotel, began at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and lasted until 5.15. It was presided over by John T. Ezell (Warner Bros.), president of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade, who explained the object of the meeting.

Among those who made talks relative to the matters up for consideration were W. W. Anderson (Pathe), chairman of the Arbitration committee; J. H. Butner (Educational) ,a member of the same committee; James W. Hanlon (M-G-M), of the conciliatory committee; Major John W. Quillian (Enterprise), of the credit committee, and E. L. Cole, secretary of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade.

Recent visitors at Atlanta included A. Solomon, of the Independent Theatre Corporation, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Odom, of the Pastime theatre, Sandersville, Ga.; C. E. Timberlake, of the Isabelle theatre, Stevenson, Ala.; Luther Scales, of the Fairfax theatre, Fairfax, Ala.; Charles Walder, of the Tivoli theatre, Miami, Fla.; Mrs. T. E. Dillard, special representative for Eltabran, in the Florida territory; J. W. Peck, of Five Points theatre, Birmingham, Ala.; T. F. Solomon, of the Palace theatre, Cedartown, Ga.; Robert H. Nowell, of the Idle Hour theatre, Monroe, Ga.; Stanley Spoehr, of the Tower theatre, Miami, Fla.; Nat M. Williams, of the Williams circuit of theatres, Thomasville, Ga.; Gordon Powell, of the Atco theatre, Atco, Ga.; Houston Thompson, of the Palace theatre, Cedartown, Ga.; J. N. Morgan, of the Martin theatre, Columbus, Ga.

Friends of George T. Chester, of Enterprise sales force, will be glad to learn that his wife, who has been ill, is rapidly improving and on the road to recovery.

C. W. Star, member of Enterprise sales force in Charlotte territory, spent the holidays in Atlanta.

Roy Martin, of the Martin theatres, Columbus, Ga., was a recent caller on film row.

Mrs. Anna Aiken Patterson, editor and publisher of Weekly Film Review, returned to Atlanta last Friday morning from a week's trip through Florida.

Harry G. Ballance, Southern district manager of Paramount Famous Lasky, has returned from a visit to Dallas and other points in Texas.

William G. Minder, Southern division manager of Tiffany-Stahl Productions, left Atlanta last Tuesday evening for a brief trip to Nashville, Tenn., and other points in that immediate territory.

Arthur C. Bromberg, president of A. C. Bromberg Attractions, has returned to Atlanta from a visit to Texas points and Shreveport, La.

Louis Rosenbaum, of Muscle Shoals Theatres, Inc., operating the Princess and Majestic at Florence; Palace at Sheffield, and Strand at Tuscombia, announces the erection of a new theatre at Athens, Ala., to be opened sometime in March or April.

Ben Jaffee has taken over the Norwood theatre at Norwood, formerly operated by J. W. Peck.

The Franklin theatre at Ensley, Ala., has added a vaudeville attraction to their Saturday night show, using some star in uptown local playhouses and the innovation is meeting with marked success.

Birmingham was "rained out" the past week, the water inundating several sections of the city and interrupting street car and bus service. Several thousand dollars' worth of damage was the result.

Florida

THE Campobello theatre, in the Belmont Heights section of Tampa, has closed. The house was a beauty but it failed to receive sufficient patronage to make the grade, so after several changes of management the owners of the building decided it would never succeed as a theatre and will convert it into stores and apartments.

An unusual booking mix-up occurred in Ybor City this week. Manager Darley of the Rivoli booked a Spanish production for three days, starting on Thursday, the 22nd, and Manager Fernandez, of the Italian Club theatre, booked the same picture for three days for the Cuban Club theatre, starting on Christmas day. Neither knew the other had booked the picture until both had advertised it, and then it was too late to change, so Fernandez advanced his dates and for the first time in Ybor City two houses, but a few blocks apart, played the same picture day and date.

Fire of undetermined origin partly destroyed the Palm theatre at Sulphur Springs this week. The fire started sometime during the night, with no one supposed to have been in the building, in the projection booth. Eight reels of films and the projection equipment were destroyed before the firemen got it under control. This house was opened about two months ago by Paul Lavaents and has been playing pictures and tab shows given by a permanent stock company.

The Airdrome in Sarasota has closed. George Clifford of Tampa has been operating the house off and on for several months. He has tried out pictures, and pictures with tabs, but nothing seemed to be able to pull 'em, so George has given it up.

Thomas Meighan, motion picture star, accompanied by his wife and his brother, James, and Gene Sarazen, golf professional, arrived in Jacksonville last Tuesday night from New York en route to New Port Richey, Florida.

Friends of William A. Krause, Jr., manager of the Empress theatre, Jacksonville, were deeply grieved to hear of the death of his father, W. A. Krause, on Sunday afternoon. Burial took place last Monday afternoon.

C. B. Ellis, manager F. B. O. exchange, plans to move into the new office building the week after Christmas.

Scotty Chesnutt, manager Paramount exchange, spent the holidays with his mother in Birmingham.

Frank Dowler, Publix's district manager, spent last week in Jacksonville.

Among the exhibitors visiting the exchanges last week were: Stanley Spoehr, of the Tower theatre at Miami and Flamingo at West Palm Beach; E. Brue, of Miami; Neil Blount, of Ft. Meade; F. D. Adams, of Waycross, Ga., and Frank Riggins, Blackshea, Ga.

A. C. Thornton, who managed the Seminole when it first opened and later the Campobello, of Tampa, has taken the management of the Rialto, which opened this week under a new policy of dramatic stock.

Manager John B. Carroll put over some good publicity last week. He had Alla Axiom as the stage presentation feature at the Tampa and secured a police permit for a "blindfold drive."

The Victory has given the Boy Scouts 2,000 tickets, which they will distribute to the poor children of Tampa for the Christmas Matinee on the morning of the 24th. At this matinee the toys collected from the children at the special matinees, where a toy was all the ticket needed, will be given to the needy.

Work has started on a big amusement park located on a "key" across the bay from Clearwater, known as Clearwater Beach, which is to cost at least a quarter of a million, it is stated. Harry C. Baker, an amusement park builder, is behind the project, though assisted by local capital. It is expected that enough will be finished by the first of the year so that it can be opened to the public.

The annual Community Chest drive opened in Tampa this week, with Consolidated Amusements one of the first to donate to the fund and one of the largest contributors, they giving their check for $1.000. All of the theatres are coming across for this good cause, as well as giving their screens to the committee for advertising the campaign.

The Florida Theatre, Daytona Beach, Fla., one of the Publix houses, last week changed into a de luxe classification with the installation of a large Wurlitzer pipe organ.

Des Moines

THE Strand theatre at Mt. Vernon, Iowa, which has been run by L. D. Hendricks for a number of years, changed hands last week. D. L. Sterns is the new owner. Report has it that Mr. Sterns is a new man in the theatre game.

At Cincinnati, Iowa, there was a change of ownership last week when the Royal theatre there was bought by H. F. Corder. Charles Vest was the former owner of the Royal.

R. M. Wilson, assistant to Chas. M. Steele, supervisor of exchanges for First National, was in Des Moines last week. He returned to New York for the Christmas holidays.

The Gem theatre at Webb, Iowa, was sold last week. The theatre has been operated for some time by the American Legion unit in the town. It was bought last week by Campbell and West, who are local men and who will immediately take possession of the theatre.

Among items of interest in the Christmas news is the fact that Harry Lombard, accessory clerk of the First National office, spent Christmas with his relatives at Bouton, Iowa. Clyde Pratt, also of the First National office, spent Christmas and New Year's at Washington, Iowa.

Kenneth Thompson, manager of the King and Rex at Albia, Iowa, has been showing at the Rex on Saturdays only and has now closed the theatre, while retaining the usual schedule at the King.

Theodore L. Stark and Company are to build a theatre at Cedar Rapids for Charles B. Zalesky. The house will be one of the Universal Chain theatres.

Alexander Frank, who is general manager for Universal theatres in Iowa and Nebraska, has appointed a new manager for the theatres at Marshalltown, Iowa, in Carl V. Baker, who formerly was at the Plaza and Rialto at Waterloo, Iowa.

Visitors in movie row were Jake Cohen of the theatres at Ottumwa, Mr. Grossman of Nevada, and Mr. Walters of Oskaloosa. Mr. West of Grinnell was a visitor at the office of Paramount.

P. B. Wallace, cashier of the Universal office, was badly hurt last week when he slipped and fell on the ice while on his way to his office in the Film Exchange building. Several ligaments in his leg were torn loose and he has not been able to be down to work for the past week.

E. J. Tilton, branch manager for First National at the Des Moines office, was presented with a beautiful traveling kit as the gift of the members of the staff as well as their wishes for a very happy Christmas.

The highest score made yet in the bowling contests held each week by the teams from the film exchanges was made by Tim Evans of the office of F. B. O. His score was 235. The exchanges rank as follows in the contest: Pathe first and First National second with the other exchanges contesting weekly as to their succession.

A big box of candied fruit, raisins, prunes, bananas and all other products of California soil, was sent to the Des Moines office of First National from the west coast with the compliments of Charles Rogell, production manager.

Philadelphia

FLAMES burst through the stage and smoke filled the Plaza theatre, Broad and Porter streets, Philadelphia, recently. Five hundred persons filed out of the theatre in orderly lines, with no suggestion of a panic. The feature was being shown when a tongue of flame leaped through the stage and rapidly spread toward the footlights. William Harrison, of Westmont, N. J., the organist, continued to play the instrument until the fire beneath the stage had severed the electric lines giving it power, while in the projecting room Louis Testardo, the operator, continued to unreel the picture. No one was injured but John Spiers, the manager, estimated the damage to the theatre at $3,000.

Construction work is about to begin on Philadelphia's newest theatre the Uptown, to be located at 2240-50 North Broad street. The structure will cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 and will have a seating capacity of 3,000, according to Samuel Shapiro, the owner, who is also interested in several other large motion picture theatres. It will be in Spanish renaissance style in architecture, furnishings and appointments, and will be devoted to the showing of photoplays and presentations. Located at the entrance of the new North Road street subway and only two squares from the proposed $3,000,000 Reading Railway station, the site of the new theatre is regarded as an ideal one in building and theatrical circles.

The new Carman theatre, Germantown and Allegheny avenues, Philadelphia, which will be formally opened during the holidays, is a $1,000,000 structure with a seating capacity of 2,500. The exterior is of brick and polychrome terra cotta, while the walls of the foyer and mezzanine floors are of polychrome plaster finish. The main orchestra floor seats 1,200. The stage is designed for every form of theatrical entertainment, as well as motion picture productions and stage lighting being by spotlight batteries instead of strip lighting. The asbestos curtain is of the latest double automatic type, weighing ten tons, and operated by electricity.

Milwaukee

E. W. VAN NORMAN is to be manager of the new National theatre on the south side upon its completion on January 15. Mr. Van Norman is well known to Wisconsin exhibitors as former president of M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin and was at one time manager of the Parkway theatre of this city.

The Butterfield circuit's invasion of the copper country is certain, according to recent rumors. The names of many theatres in the upper peninsula have been linked for many months with the Butterfield circuit and it now looks as though the deal for several of these theatres has been completed.

Incidentally, business in the copper country is looking up. The recent upward trend in copper has given impetus to the chief industry of several upper Michigan cities, chief of these Escanaba, and the increased activity in the mines is reflected in the theatre business.

Francis Kadow, manager of the Mikado theatre at Manitowoc, and of the broadcasting station WOMT of that city, was recently in Milwaukee exchanges. Mr. Kadow is interested also in the radio business and was elated at his success in this line.

The Saxe theatres, recently taken over by West Coast, are now operating under the name of Midwesco Theatres, Inc.

L. L. Ballard, United Artists representative for this territory, returned from a recent trip to the snow-bound key cities in the northern part of the state.

W. Ainsworth, manager of the new Garrick at Fond du Lac, reports the plan of adding pictures to the program of the Garrick, which is devoted to the stock company productions, is working out very successfully. The theatre is opened at 6:30, at which time pictures are exhibited until the time of the usual opening, 8:30, when the stock company takes over the program.

The Butterfield Circuit, which is planning to take over several theatres in Upper Michigan, will open offices either in Chicago or Milwaukee in the very near future.

Milwaukee is to have a new theatre, according to recent announcement. Sherman Brown, manager of the Davidson theatre, and eastern theatrical promoters, are interested in the theatre. It is to be situated at Mason and Jackson and will be built at a cost of about $1,000,000. If the policy of the new theatre is to be the same as that of the Davidson, pictures will be included in the program during the summer months and at times when no productions are [illegible]

Admission charge at the Wisconsin [illegible] 60c. to 75c. after 6 at night and Saturday and Sunday matinees.

Albany

SANTA CLAUS, as depicted by employes of the various film exchanges in Albany, made his customary visit along film row last week, bringing joy to many managers. Edward Hayes, manager of the Pathe exchange, received $25 in gold from the office force. Al Gutek, local manager for F. B. O., received a traveling set from the Christmas tree that adorned the office. Jack Bulwinkel, who handles the affairs of First National in Albany, received a traveling bag from Santa, while Harry Seed, local manager for Warner Brothers, was presented with a lounging robe. Jake Rosenthal, owner of the Rose theatre in Troy, presented every employee with gold pieces ranging from $5 to $50.

Fred Freschette, who has been handling the Barcli in Schenectady, resigned last week in order to go with Universal theatres, reporting to the New York city office, and being assigned to the south.

The Temple theatre in Hinesburgh, Vt., has changed hands, George Lowington having taken the house over from Clark Thomas. George James has reopened his theatre in North Bennington, Vt., and will operate one day to the week.

The young women employed at the Lincoln theatre in Troy took no chance in a feminine selection of the gift which they presented Ben Stern, the manager. They named one of the men employed at the theatre to do the selecting.

Dave Sommers, who worked in Albany about two years ago, has returned to town and has been given charge of the advertising accessories department at the Fox exchange.

Proctor, Vt., was badly hit by the recent flood and Fred Churchill, the exhibitor there, is now operating but one night a week. At Manchester, Vt., Aaron Shapiro is the exhibitor as well as postmaster, storekeeper, etc., his theatre operating three nights a week, being looked after generally by his son. George Murray, who runs the Temple theatre in Middlebury, Vt., is also the freight agent for the village.

There never was a bigger or better Christmas for Lew Fischer, of Ft. Edward, than the one of this year, marking, as it did, the opening of Mr. Fischer's new theatre at Cambridge. The house has a seating capacity of 400 and represents an investment of about $30,000. It is built on the site of the Victory, which was burned last spring. A twenty-five cent admission is being charged.

Following the usual custom, the local exchange for Warner Brothers is according the salesmen, Russell Sulley and George Rosenbaum, a week's vacation with pay.

Louis Schine, of Gloversville, is looking after the vaudeville end these days of the Schine circuit, and, according to all reports, is as busy as the proverbial bee, although frequently jolted by the prices he is being forced to pay for vaudeville acts.

Harold Farrell, formerly with the Lincoln theatre in Schenectady, is now doing the booking for the Broadway in that city, which recently reopened. Lester Smith, head operator at the Rose theatre, is recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

There is a rather odd condition existing in Poultney, Vt., near which two competitors share the town hall, each showing pictures two nights a week. The exhibitors are Robert L. Whitton and Jerry Costello.

Although Charles Sesonske operates theatres in Watertown and Lowville, residing at the hotel in the former place, he still spends each week-end in Gloversville. Al Barton, of Ticonderoga, is back from a southern trip and was heard to remark last week that he wished he had remained south until after New Year's.

Julius Byck, of Tannersville, has notified Albany's film exchange that his theatre has closed for the winter. The Vitaphone has been installed at the Strand in Schenectady.

Dave Miller, manager for Universal in Buffalo, has challenged the Albany branch, with a side bet of $200, in connection with a fifteen weeks' drive that will get under way at once. Only recently the Albany branch won a countrywide contest, and, incidentally, the sum of $200, a side bet between the two exchanges.

Visitors along film row during the week included Len Garvey, of Clinton; Al Barton, of Ticonderoga; Arthur Abeles eastern sales manager for Warner Brothers; Joseph Salzig, of the Park theatre in Wappingers Falls, and Sam Hochstim, of Hudson.

It was a happy Christmas for Henry Frieder, of Hudson, for his little daughter is on the road to recovery following a delicate operation on her ear, performed in New York city, a week or two ago.

According to the film salesmen who have occasion to visit northern New York, the hardest exhibitor to locate is Frank Sands, of Pyrites. Along with his theatrical activities, Mr. Sands owns and operates a truck service in his section.

There is one Armenian exhibitor, at least, in New York state. He is Mike Baumansauer, who is running the Plaza at Malone, and who recently came from Canada.

W. L. Orne, an exhibitor at Richmond, Va., which was badly hit by the flood, has decided to throw up the sponge and will dispose of his theatre in the near future.

Jake Golden, manager of the Griswold, in Troy, recalling a year or so ago when he left to spend the Christmas vacation with his parents in Boston, and dlanded in a Massachusetts hospital, where he remained for months, has decided to forego a Boston trip, for this Christmas.

Jake Rosenthal has installed a frankfurter machine in the lobby of his Troy theatre, and from now on his ushers will pass around the succulent red hot "dogs" at ten cents per. Incidentally, Mr. Rosenthal gave away a combination of chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks and one small pig during the week before Christmas.

It has been virtually decided by the Albany Film Board of Trade that there will be no ball this year.

Manager O'Brien, of the Strand theatre in Carthage, erected a Christmas tree in the lobby of his theatre, the forerunner to a special children's matinee on Christmas morning, when all children were the guests of the theatre and presented with presents.

Central Penn

OSCAR B. FELDSER, former owner of the Broad street theatre, Harrisburg, which is now controlled by I. B. Heckard, was installed on December 18 as president of the Harrisburg Musical Association, Local 269, American Federation of Musicians. This organization includes among its 600 members many musicians who are employed in theatres of Harrisburg and vicinity. Other officers installed are: Vice-president, H. J. Kurzenknabe; secretary, Ralph Feldser; treasurer, Simon W. Breach; sergeant-at-arms, Paul E. Kurzeknabe; trustees, George F. Rheam, H. G. Neumeyer and Dr. E. I. Shirk. The executive board includes the officers and trustees and also Lewis Cohen, J. A. Adams, Mrs. Lawrence Katz and Lynn O. Cook.

Twelve hundred toys were collected by the Colonial, Victoria and State theatres, in Harrisburg, at matinees on Saturday, Dec. 17th, when all children who presented a toy were admitted free. These were given to the Toy Mission, which distributed them to poor children just before Christmas. These three theatres are operated by the Wilmer & Vincent Company.

Charles E. Newbaker, who owns and operates the Strand and Standard theatres, in Steelton, took the oath of office as sheriff of Dauphin County, Pa., on Dec. 31, in the Court House at Harrisburg. Mr. Newbaker was elected sheriff in the November balloting. He announces he will continue to operate his two Steelton theatres.

One of the many clever holiday greeting cards issued by Central Pennsylvania theatre men was that sent out by Lee Levy, manager of the Victoria, Harrisburg, and advertising manager for all the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in that city. It was a picture of the front of the Victoria, bearing the inscription in the place of the electric sign: 'Let's Pick the Comfy 'Vic' for a Merry Christmas." The card included Mr. Levy's signature and his picture in the garb of Santa Claus.

The new Rialto theatre, Third and Harris streets, Harrisburg, was closed from early in December until January 2, to permit the completion of improvements started by Isaac Marcus, the owner, who has just agreed to lease the house, and also the National, Sixth and Dauphin streets, to Mr. and Mrs. George Krupa, of Lancaster. These improvements were planned by Mr. Marcus before the start of the Krupa negotiations and it is understood still further improvements, including the installation of organs in both theatres, will be made after the Krupas take control.

L. A. Farrell, district representative in Carbondale for the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, has selected his son, Joseph Farrell, to become his assistant.

Edward J. Melniker, managing director of Loew's Regent theatre, Harrisburg, celebrated the first anniversary of his holding that position by giving a free show on December 27th to the newsboys of Harrisburg.

The new $175,000 auditorium and theatre of the State Teachers' College, at East Stroudsburg, was formally dedicated December 16 in the presence of a large group of educators and other friends of the college. In the evening a dedicatory concert was given Miss Lewis, singer, of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The formal opening of the Seltzer theatre, Palmyra, was scheduled for New Year's Eve, December 31st. The house is a modern structure with 900 seating capacity, and owned by Harry Seltzer. Geo. Girth, who formerly managed the Iroquois theatre, Palmyra, which has been closed and will be dismantled, has been appointed manager of the Seltzer.

Pittsburgh

CARLOS MOORE, manager of the Pittsburgh United Artists Branch since its inception nine years ago, and the oldest exchange manager in the Steel City (in point of service), resigned his position last Saturday. The news came as a surprise to Mr. Moore's many friends here, as only recently he had won a promotion which gave him the responsibility of the U. A. branch at Washington, D. C., as well as the Pittsburgh office, he having divided his time between these two branches.

Mr. Moore states that he intends to take a rest of several weeks before accepting any of several offers which have been made to him by other producers.

No successor has as yet been named for Mr. Moore in the local territory and in the meantime Miss Alice Salisbury, office manager at the exchange, is looking after all details regarding the operation of the company's local headquarters.

Miss Audrey C. Lytell, formerly of the New York Film Board of Trade, is the new secretary at the Pittsburgh Board, succeeding Miss Clare Foley, who has been transferred to the organization's office in San Francisco.

Among the exhibitor visitors on Film Row the past few days were included: Theodore Sussman, Sharon; Charles Lynch, Meadville; Thomas Bello, Belle Vernon; Spear Marousis, New Castle; H. L. Stahl, Oil City; James Retter, California; B. W. Redfoot, Windber; and L. M. Jones, Vandergrift.

J. E. Smith, of the Hazelwood Theatre, came out to Film Row last Monday the first time in four months. "Jim" is able to get about with the aid of crutches, his fractured leg having not yet fully healed. His many friends trust that his recovery will be effected soon.

"Cleve" Adams, F B O divisional representative, who makes his quarters at the Pittsburgh branch of the company, is spending this week with Manager Harry Michalson of the Cincinnati office.

Frank Ray, another of the Film Row veterans, is now in charge of night shipments of the Pathe exchange. Frank has his hands full too, as there are few, if any, exchanges which ship more film at night than Pathe.

William G. Smith, manager of the Columbia Pictures exchange, has been laid up at home since Friday of last week suffering from the grip. At this writing, Tuesday, "Bill" still feels groggy, and it is hoped that he will recover within a short time and return to his duties.

Manager A. H. Schnitzer, of F B O, has treated himself to a Christmas present, and furnished his private office with a beautiful new oak desk with two chairs to match. Also a new carpet on the floor. The office looks very inviting, and "Abe" reports that it is a real pleasure to entertain exhibitors therein.

Hannah Braff, formerly secretary at Loew's Aldine, is now connected with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange.

J. J. Maloney, manager of the M-G-M Exchange, is also benefactor for the Home of The Good Shepherd and gave the orphans a free movie and candy for Xmas.

Charles Geigerich, advance man on "Love," is helping Wallace Allen, publicity director at Loew's Penn, in making this attraction one of the biggest of the season.

Loew's Penn had free shows for 3,500 newsboys Dec. 24th with Livingston Lanning, manager, the host.

The Press Club had a banquet at the William Penn last Friday, over 500 members attending. All theatres donated acts to make the affair a success.

The benefit performance held at Loew's Penn for the Pittsburgh Press Orphan Fund netted $2,379. Over 30 acts appeared with the show running from 11:30 to 2:30. The house was sold out 12 hours before the show started with tickets worth $5 if one could get them at show time.

"Hank" Kaufmann, inspector booker for the Pathe exchanges, is spending the week at the local branch. "Hank" spends part of his time renewing old acquaintances, as he was formerly stationed permanently at the local office.

J. L. "Doc" Day, well-known advertising agent, reports that he is soon to offer a brand new act in the local territory.

Max Shulgold, city salesman at F B O, is stepping out these days with a brand new private office all his very own. The F B O quarters have recently been enlarged, this having made possible the addition for the new quarters for Mr. Shulgold.

Manager Jas. H. Alexander, of the Columbia Film Service, is these days writing his letters on beautiful red and green Christmas letterheads. The letters are very attractive, and again call attention to "Aleck's" thoughtfulness with the little things that not only create good will but are good publicity for his office as well.

The new Pittsburgh City Directory is just off the press and it lists 143 theatres in Greater Pittsburgh.

Harry Skirboll, former accessory salesman at the First National exchange, is now a furniture salesman with the May-Stern Co. in Pittsburgh.

Another local Filmdom romance. The principals are Miss Rose Jones, Educational "hello" girl, and Ben Hanna, shipper at the Fox office. Ben has just presented Miss Jones with a beautiful diamond ring, and it is likely that the wedding will take place sometime in the Spring. Congratulations!

Manager Jas. H. Alexander, of the Columbia Film Service, presented the trade with lead pencils as a Christmas remembrance. Pencils are white in color, and imprinted thereon in red and green is Columbia's holiday message. "Aleck," along with his employees, was busy distributing the remembrances to the film and theatre folk.

J. C. Fishman, sales manager for the Standard-Federated exchanges, spent last Wednesday and Thursday at the local branch.

Salt Lake City

BESIDES giving a Tin Can Matinee for the benefit of the poor of this city which was worked in conjunction with the Deseret News here and which received a great deal of front page publicity, the Capitol Theatre took care of the orphans, in conjunction with the Elks here, and also the detention home children and the children from the Children's Hospital.

A big Christmas tree was decorated and placed in the foyer, lending good cheer during the week before Christmas. This house, which is included in the Louis Marcus Enterprises, is managed by George E. Carpenter.

The managers of the Louis Marcus Enterprises presented Louis Marcus with a beautiful silver cocktail shaker with ten cups with the names of each of the managers and assistant managers engraved on one of each of the cups.

Special Home Office Representative Russell Egner of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation was in Salt Lake City over the holidays.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's district manager, Seth D. Perkins, was in the local exchange for a few days from Denver recently. He spent the holidays with his family in Denver. He states that immediately after the first of the year he will return to this office where he will meet his friend "Battling" Egner, with whom he will go on to Denver.

Traveling Auditor W. F. Reiley is still visiting the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office.

Local Manager L. C. Wingham of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange in this city, just came back from a very successful swing into Boise and Nampa, Idaho.

Among exhibitors seen at the various exchanges last week were Mell Stringham of the Colonial Theatre at Ogden, Utah, and John Rugar of the Egyptian, Orpheum and American theatres at Park City.

Louis and Harmon Peery of the Egyptian and Ogden theatres of Ogden were in this city for a short time last week.

The new Universal booker and assistant manager Cecil J. Farnes, who recently drove here from Portland to take up his new duties, arrived here somewhat wet from having rolled into the river near Pendelton, Oregon, when his car rolled off the road. He lost a grip and several articles but escaped serious injury.

F. F. Vincent, Universal publicity man, is in this city, accompanied by his wife and daughter, concentrating on a publicity campaign.

Salesman Tony Hartford of the Universal sales force, is to be transferred to the Idaho and Northern Utah territory from his Southern Utah section, which will be covered by E. S. Winward, former booker here.

Local Manager H. H. Milstein was in last week from the Northern territory.

Clyde Blasius, owner of the Diana theatres of Copperfield and Midvale, Utah, is leaving the theatre end of the business to go to Portland, Oregon, where he will be in charge of the National Theatre Supply Company branch. It has not yet been decided regarding the disposition of his houses, which will be closed temporarily.

Clyde H. Messinger, Educational manager here, is back from a trip into Idaho.

Miss A. Knowles, former assistant cashier at the local Fox exchange, has been promoted to the position of cashier since the transferring of Miss E. Higham, who has been cashier here for some time, to the Denver office. All of the Fox men were in for the holidays.

Andy Murdock of the Ideal Theatre at Heber City, Utah, was [illegible] here last week.

The new theatre being built at Provo, Utah, by J. T. Nixon, is to be opened in the very near future, according to reports.

The new house being built by C. M. Pace of Delta, Utah, is to be opened about the first of the year.

Salesman John Dickson, United Artists salesman, is now in Wyoming where the temperature is said to be hovering around zero.

Manager Fred Lind, F.B.O. executive here, left last week for Ft. Morgan, Colorado, to spend the holidays with his mother.

San Francisco

W. J. BENNETT has taken over the New Colma theatre, just south of San Francisco.

J. W. Bascom of Sisson, also George Roy of Reno, were recent visitors. Roy states that he has sold his Nevada theatre in Reno to Millan.

Enno Lion, who is opening the new theatre on the Alameda section of San Jose, has also placed an order for projectors and other equipment.

The Imperial theatre has been leased by M. L. and Dan Markowitz, prominent local theatre owners, it was announced Dec. 10th. Under their management a new policy was inaugurated.

A. Breinsteinwell, known in several motion picture concerns in and about San Francisco, has been made manager of the Coliseum theatre, the city's largest residential motion picture theatre. The Coliseum is one of the theatres owned by the Levine Corporation.

More than one thousand matinee attendants at the Century theatre of Oakland were thrown into a panic not long ago when the building filled with smoke from a fire which was burning fiercely in a restaurant next door. Police and ushers forced the fleeing crowd into lines and let them out without injury. The restaurant, fashionable dining place for women, was crowded with customers who fled to the street soon after the flames from a burning "grease sheet" sent clouds of smoke over them. A half hour after the fire started it was still out of control and calls were being sent to all parts of Oakland for fire fighting apparatus.

Mr. and Mrs. Ware of Dixon were recent visitors on film row.

Dr. L. T. Toepher has closed his Garden theatre at Reedly.

D. J. McGowen, home office representative for First National Pictures, is making a tour of the Coast exchanges and recently spent several days in the San Francisco exchange.

G. C. Parsons, manager of the local M-G-M office, returned from a trip up the Coast as far as Klamath Falls in the interest of the exchange.

G. A. Hickey, district manager for M-G-M, has returned from a Division Managers' Convention, which was held in New York.

Messrs. Blumenthal and Madsen, of Educational Pictures, have just returned from a trip through the San Joaquin Valley. Blumenthal spent a few days in Los Angeles in conference with the West Coast officials, and, while there, inspected the Educational Studios.

A new 900-seat theatre linked to the George Mann theatres was opened Thanksgiving day at Ft. Bragg, California. The house has all the features and accommodations of a real metropolitan theatre and was started on its amusement mission with due ceremonial celebration.

Morgan Walsh of Warner Bros. has concluded a deal whereby the Vitaphone goes in the State theatre, Oakland, as a feature of that popular house.

The opening day is announced as of January 6, and that the installation will embrace all the equipment requisite for the same schedule of musical features now being rendered in all the Vitaphone entertainment.

Horton Kahn, popular manager of the Imperial theatre, which recently was sold by the West Coast Theatres, has been sent to Los Angeles to work for the West Coast Theatres, in chief offices at Los Angeles. While none of his girl friends who were interviewed exactly cried that he left, all felt sorry, but were pleased he received a promotion.

THE city council at Clinton, Missouri, repealed an old law which prohibited Sunday shows in Clinton, and under the new plan Sunday matinees are permitted.

A. D. Metcalf, proprietor of a motion picture show at Ash Grove, Missouri, on Nov. 29, pled guilty on charge of operating his house on Sunday in violation of an ancient blue law and was fined $5 and costs. It was the first victory of the blue law advocates of Ash Grove and vicinity. Metcalf, immediately after paying his fine, filed complaints against several Ash Grove business men for violating the same blue law, which permits only necessary household duties on Sunday.

J. W. McReynolds has completed the erection of a new theatre building at Montezuma, Kansas, to be used as a picture house.

On Dec. 5 the new Victory theatre at Rogers, Ark., was opened to the public.

Workmen are repairing the studio building of the Volland Scenic Studio at St. Louis, Mo., which was damaged by the tornado of Sept. 29th. The improvements will cost about $45,000.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Gorilla"—First National, Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

Mirror: "One of the funniest comedies that has come to town in some time, and you are hereby advised to see it. Murray and Kelsey gather in laugh after laugh. Photography good and likewise sets. Just as a comedy thriller 'The Gorilla' is a first rate picture."

Telegraph: "Best yet of laugh thrillers transported by bats, cats and canaries and gorillas from stage to screen. If you like mystery you'll enjoy this feature. A kick for every chuckle. There's nary a moment in First National's box office symphony but what is overflowing with 22-karat entertainment."

World: "Satisfactory entertainment. Original and effective camera work. A thriller."

Times: "Evoked roars and shrieks of laughter. Excitement and amusement linked. Santell's easy and imaginative touch apparent. Excruciatingly funny moments. . . . really comic. Murray far more comic than in most of his other productions."

Herald-Tribune: "Shrewd mixture of comedy and mystery. Most successful case extant of the use of farcical relief to counteract mood of horror. Comedy honest enough to appear as an essential part of entertainment, rather than merely as a foil. More serious scenes done in eerie, vague way that employs shifting shadows, sinister silhouettes and all tricks of lightning and photographic angles to create proper atmosphere of terror and impending doom."

American: "Is first comedy and then a mystery story. Audience laughs its approval. If you like mysteries you'll find hour's entertainment. Camera work is effective, occasionally even stunning."

Post: "Entertaining mystery film."

Journal: "Satisfying, mysterious moments. Those who saw play won't know any more about it than those who didn't, as screen version is quite different. You will shudder and shake."

Telegram: "You should find 'The Gorilla' well worth your time. Santell has done good job with his mysteries."

Evening World: "Compelling mixture of mystery and comedy, one balanced against the other so expertly that spectator finds himself thrilled to marrow while at the same time he is guffawing at boob antics of dumb detective."

"The Gorilla"—First National, California Theatre, San Francisco

Bulletin: "Combination of chills and laughs. . . . Audience had that thrilly, creepy situation. Murray and Kelsey dominate picture. Story cleverly told."

Chronicle: "They (members of audience) were engaged during entire length of film in laughing their heads off."

"The Gorilla"—First National, Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles

Express: "Successful entertainment for anybody. Surprise and suspense. Skilfully adapted. Santell has done excellent job in the direction. Kelsey and Murray ideally cast."

Times: "Spooky and shivery and funny at once. Can't go far wrong in seeing it. Audience gaping at moments and half shrieking. Had them laughing, too."

Daily News: "'Chilling' and 'thrilling.' Santell has done fine piece of electrical work. Treatment comical and provokes laughs by score. If you are blue, if you are tired, if you are in good spirits—if you are a movie fan at all you will want to see 'The Gorilla.' You are going to laugh even if you've got as many troubles as Job."

Examiner: "You really musn't miss seeing Mulligan and Garrity. . . . They pop up just when cold shivers are doing shimmy down one's backbone. Murray outdoes himself. Big climax and final scenes swift moving and full of interest. Only a director having real sense of humor could direct it."

Record: "Maintains high standard producers are setting in presentation of mystery yarns. In some respects surpasses stage play. Picture that ranks high among those of its type."

Herald: "Aims as much for comedy as for chills. Notable cast quite overshadowed by performance of Murray. Good trick shots. . . . Ingenuity and many thrills. Shadow photography one of notable features of production."

"American Beauty" — First National, Liberty Theatre, New Orleans

Times: "About the most entertaining movie in town. . . . Piece clever from beginning to end, in acting, direction, story and everything else. . . . Billie Dove is our heroine, a pretty girl, a real American beauty if there ever was one."

"American Beauty" — First National, Grand Opera House, Pittsburgh

Post Gazette: "Most astounding and unexpected finale has been created by director. To tell it would only spoil story for those who go to see it, and breath-taking, exciting, laughable ending itself is worth a trip. . . . As to story, it is simple, fragrant, almost quaint in its gentle appeal. . . . If you are a sweetheart and his lass, or a honeymooning couple, or a settled married pair celebrating your golden wedding, go see picture, sit hand in hand and enjoy the unfolding of as pretty a love story as the screen has seen in some time."

Many Attend Opening of Albee Theatre, Cincinnati

BEFITTING general Yuletide festivities, the new E. F. Albee Theatre, located on Fountain Square, in the very heart of the downtown business district of Cincinnati, was formally opened and dedicated the day before Christmas, with the sponsors, E. F. Albee, Isaac Libson, Ben Heidingsfeld and other high dignitaries of the motion picture and theatrical world, as well as the city officials on hand for the occasion, which, however, was entirely without celebration or ceremony, strictly informal and minus undue pomp.

$4,000,000 Investment

The new house, representing an expenditure of $4,000,000, and with a combined seating capacity of approximately 4,000 in the main auditorium and balcony, is finished in a color scheme of ivory and old gold with harmonizing undertone of gray and taupe. Luxurious tapestries done in imperial design adorn the walls, while expensive and, in many instances, exclusive paintings, some of which are originals by the world's masters, are generously hung.

The lobby is flanked by massive pillars of pure marble which lead to the massive stairway, which is likewise of marble. Here two bronze illuminating pedestals stand sentinel-like at either side of the staircase. These pedestals did a like service in the famous Astor mansion in New York, and were bought personally by Mr. Albee at a cost of $5,000 each. An enormous dome of indirect lighting adds materially to the grandeur of the lobby.

Fine Equipment

Cooling machines, two units of the Carrier system, placed 40 feet below Vine street, provide complete changes of air.

There is a movable orchestra pit, and also a huge pipe organ of the latest design—a three-manual instrument, electrically controlled and elevated to position in front of the stage when required for musical accompaniments in connecting with screenings. The musical features are under supervision of Theodore Hahn, Jr., who has charge of all musical programs in all theatres controlled by Libson. Henry C. Geis, formerly with Graumann's theatres in Los Angeles, is organist.

Cliff. Boyd, until recently manager of the Lyric Theatre, another house in the Libson chain in Cincinnati, has been made manager of the new theatre. Edgar Volz is assistant manager. The regular house staff consists of 100 employees.

Continuous Policy

The policy of the E. F. Albee Theatre will be continuous from 11 a. m. to 11:30 p. m. presenting pictures and stage features. The initial picture was Clara Bow in "Get Your Man," while among tthe outstanding novelties in the stage presentations was the Albee Entertainers, a band of twenty hand picked musicians trained under direction of Harry Willsey, orchestra conductor.

Admission scale is 50 and 60 cents during the afternoon, with a scale of 50 and 65 cents for the lower floor and balcony respectively during the evenings and holidays.

Presentations are given only at stated hours during the day with an increased schedule during Sundays and holidays.

Cosmetic and smoking rooms and other ultra-modern conveniences have been provided for the patrons, while the back stage arrangements are complete in every detail, including private rooms for the house employees, pressing and laundry service, dincttes, refrigeration accommodations, nursery and play rooms for performer's children, and even special quarters for animal entertainers. Programs will be changed weekly.

Libman-Spanjer's Xmas Party a Success

Libman-Spanjer, manufacturers of theatre lobby fixtures, played host at their offices at 1600 Broadway last Saturday, Dec. 24th, to the combined factory and office forces. The Libman-Spanjer landing was artistically decorated for the occasion.

Mr. Libman, of the firm, acted as host, personally distributing the gifts and extending his greetings to each employee in turn. Installations of several out-of-town orders prevented the Libman outside forces from participating in this gay affair at which music, song and Christmas cheer prevailed until late afternoon, and at which the lady associates of the Libman offices acted as gracious assistant hostesses to their genial employer, and doubled, too, as waitresses.

Besides the Messrs. Libman and Spanjer, among those present were: J. C. Emslen, C. L. Cockefair, Miss Marian Berman, Fay Peters, Jean Herrera, Minnie Stillman, Philip Frank, L. A. San Fillippo, N. Castro, R. DuBois, L. Flock, D. Pasquale, L. Giametta and others of the factory staff.

Heralds New Iowa Theatre as One of the Finest

The Riviera Theatre at Waterloo, Iowa, which is scheduled to open about the first of 1928, is considered a real gem of smaller houses, being on a smaller scale similar to the Riviera Theatre at Omaha, heralded as one of the most beautiful theatres of the United States or Europe.

The theatre is furnished very elaborately for a theatre not situated in the largest city of the state, and it is most successful in achieving an effect not overly elaborate. The interior gives very much the effect of an Oriental garden. The sidewalls give the effect of a garden wall with shrubs and trees and flowers against the walls, while the roof tops and canopies from the walls are pictured just as they would look over the garden walls. The lighting effects are carried out in agreement with this idea of decoration. The side lights are Oriental lantern, while the ceiling is made to represent the sky. The effects of clouds and stars is carried out very realistically and the proscenium arch carries out the same effect. The exterior of the theatre is also rather unusual in design and is made of dark stone.

The theatre is to have a stage band policy and a program of stage acts each week. Herb Grove, who has been with A. H. Blank for about ten years, will have the managership of the Riviera. He first came to the notice of executives when he proved himself a motion picture operator of unusual merit. Mr. Grove has several mechanical inventions to his credit. His work with the A. E. F. was in keeping the machinery and films for a large number of shows in line.

New Majestic Announced for Rochelle, Ill.

The Rochelle Theatre Company of Rochelle, Ill., announce a new motion picture theatre for Rochelle to cost in the neighborhood of $100,000. The project will be developed with a stock and bond issue.

According to present plans the house will seat 850, have a twenty-foot stage, two shops, four apartments and eight bowling alleys in the basement.

F. E. Allaben and Ben Berve are the officers of the Rochelle Theatre Co., operating the present Majestic Rochelle, the Blackhawk theatre, Oregon, Ill., and the Gem at Morris, Ill.

Fox Contracts for Sentry Fire-Safety Device

A contract has been entered into between the Sentry Safety Control Corporation and William Fox whereby every enterprise of the latter where projection is used will be equipped with the fire-safety device manufactured by the Sentry concern. This means that all Fox theatres, all laboratories and all studios with projection rooms will be so equipped.

Officials of the manufacturing concern consider it the most important contract they have thus far consummated.

Fox Detroit Theatre Nearing Completion

The new Fox Theatre in Detroit, which will seat more than 6,000 persons and will have the largest balcony span in the world, will soon enter the last stages of construction. The house is patterned after the Hindoo Temple style of architecture and among its features will be a special broadcasting station constructed as a part of the building. It is expected that the structure will be finished by the mid-summer of 1928.

The Fox company will have houses of a similar size in operation in Dayton, St. Louis, Brooklyn, Washington, Baltimore, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Newark, it is said, in addition to the Detroit enterprise. Some of these are now in building stages, others are in operation or sites for them are being negotiated for.

S. L. Rothafel's presentations at the Roxy in New York will be circuited through the Fox theatre circuit.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Sorrell and Son"—United Artists, Rivoli Theatre, New York City

Graphic: "Ambitious task, accomplished with success. A fine piece of cinema work, characterized by excellent acting, splendid photography and smooth continuity. Will be box-office success. Picture patrons enjoy either a hearty laugh or a good cry with their film entertainment, and there hrsn't been a picture this year that approaches the lachrymal opportunities of this one. Most critical must recognize and admit technical worth of what Brenon has given this picture and splendid contributions of excellent cast."

Telegraph: Bring tears to the throat—if not to eyes. Warner's performance is excellent. Exquisite shots of 'merrie England.'"

Herald-Tribune: "Brenon has succeeded in showing love between father and son in believable manner. Warner thoroughly moving and little Mickey McBan proves that he is just about best of child actors."

Times: "Warner plays part with marked sincerity. Idea of father's unselfish devotion to his son is depicted quite convincingly. Creates a far deeper impression than usual film."

News: Entirely faithful to novel, is deeply romantic. Commands use of kerchiefs. Some scenes great, grand and powerful. Climax is poignant, masterful bit of work. Cast is to be commended for taking directio nso well. Is far above an average production. Work of the sad-eyed Warner grants this."

Mirror: "One of most effective things done this year. Is almost certain to go over. One of stellar picture plays of year."

Journal: "'Sorrell and Son' is a faithful adaptation of the novel. English settings delightful."

Evening World: "Brenon displays refreshingly constant felicity in his picturization of 'Sorrell and Son.' Indeed Brenon has done more than bring action of this story to screen. He has succeeded in adapting a mood to the films. And this, combined with two or three capital characterizations by the players, lift 'Sorrell and Son' to a well deserved place among screen's elite. Has captured mellow overtones of author's conception. This character is probably best thing that Warner has done for screen. Nearly every player in this cast displays unmistakable indication of having been marshaled into a semblance of the humor which Deeping doubtless had in mind when he conceived his story. Few actors could have given the portrayal which Warner gives in this picture."

American: "Is indeed worthy of director's affection for it. Happy to predict that Mr. Brenon will please public and make plenty of money on his latest production. 'Sorrel and Son' is picture whose sincerity will strike deep into hearts and minds of spectators and will afford women one of those enjoyable affairs which is known as a good cry. Difficult to tell to whom largest share of acting honors go, picture is so perfectly cast and each player is so sincere and convincing. You won't want to miss 'Sorrell and Son.' It is Life's very own drama crammed with heartaches, smiles, hope and thousand and one other things which make everything seem worth-while. It is also Brenon at his best."

Telegram: "For their intellectual courage in film Deeping' spropagandist novel with this fidelity both Brenon and his producers deserve credit."

"The Thirteenth Hour"—Universal, Colony Theatre, New York City

Times: "It seems as though Barrymore had decided to invade Chaney's thrilling realms. Here Barrymore avails himself of opportunity for disguises . . . it is a sterling performance that this actor gives. Another contributor to general excitement and fun is police dog. This animal an energetic marvel and wonder at expressing sympathy, bewilderment and rage."

Graphic: "To those who like shivers and thrills with their movie entertainment, 'The Thirteenth Hour' may be recommended as well as to every one who will enjoy one of best bits of canine acting on screen."

Telegraph: "Corking drama—replete with thrills, suspense and romance. . . . Swinging doors, moving arms, subterranean passageways, and hidden trapways. Napoleon, stunning police dog, is as camera-wise as any leading actor of screen. His performance is absolutely human and amazing."

American: "It is safe to recommend 'The Thirteenth Hour.' Barrymore makes very realistic victim. His sinister looks and actions beggar description. A very clever canine in picture that does his dog-gone best to add thrills."

Herald: "Fast-moving and inventive crime film, aided by excellent work of dog; competent acting of Barrymore as master criminal. Jacquelin Gadson and Delaney."

Mirror: "Mystery upon mystery, crime after crime, horror following horror. . . . Is stimulating to growth of hair; dangerous to those with high blood pressure."

Evening World: "Has as mystifying a lot of contraptions as one could wish. Traps are sprung on all sides and arms reach out and pull victims into secret compartments."

"The Gaucho"—U. A., Liberty Theatre, New York City

Sun: "Seemingly ageless, and untiring acrobatic, Fairbanks leaps and bounds through 'The Gaucho.' As audacious guerrilla of the South American plains, bouncing star is same old Fairbanks. A show worthy of patronage. Dashing gaucho climbs to dizzy heights with his prowess. Fairbanks pulls the film to realms above average and makes it worth seeing. 'The Gaucho' is no small shakes of a movie show."

Post: "Settings unusually fine and there is much riding and roof-to-tree leaping and the usual quota of those clever little tricks that only Fairbanks himself can do in just that particular fashion. Miss Lupe Valez, one of the most promising screen discoveries in Hollywood just now."

Brooklyn Daily Eagle: "A picture which combined esprit of 'Robin Hood' with lightning speed of 'Don Q,' whimsical romance of 'The Thief of Bagdad' with amazing agility of 'The Black Pirate.' What one has learned to expect from Fairbanks one finds in this latest of his pictures. Remarkably enoyable. Is worth your seeing."

"Breakfast at Sunrise"—First National, Circle Theatre, Indianapolis

News: "Delightful—a deft comedy that has several rightly humorous passages. Good fun. Miss Talmadge sparkles with merriment and has the dual advantage of St. Clair for a director and Alvarado for a leading man. They leave nothing to be desired."

Times: "The correct vehicle for Miss Talmadge. Smart and has just enough naughty and cute little winks in it for spice. Mighty smart acting. Constance a delight. She has a rare idea of farce."

Star: "For those who like their Paris well done and done well, Constance Talmadge's latest vehicle will have an appeal. Leaves a good taste in mouth."

"The Blood Ship"—Columbia, Rialto Theatre, Washington

Times: "A picture of true melodramatic excellence, as vivid as Conrad, as constructively fine as Galsworthy . . . startling and genuine action. Superlative interpretations—histrionic and directorial—projected in stunning sequence. Against a magic background Bosworth contributes a portrait you will remember, for it is faithful, gripping, dynamic. All roles are superbly etched. Scarcely acted at all, totally minus artificiality."
